GOING UP!

"NICKELODEON BUYING" in contrast with today's modern and costly production was the earnest, if not heated, topic of a discussion by Mr. Samuel Goldwyn at our annual autumn Waldorf-Astoria conference this week.

Exploration of the subject with Mr. Goldwyn brought up figures tending to indicate that the top rank productions of this period take about 75 per cent of their gross revenues from percentage engagements, leaving about 25 per cent to the flat rentals, but representing something like half of the bookings numerically.

In the realm of the flat rentals Mr. Goldwyn sees serious obstacle to progress of the art and industry. The motion picture cannot go ahead to new levels of attainment unless the producer gets his "fair share of what the public is willing to pay," he holds. "We have old fashioned buying ideals in the way of modern production. I am not contending," he insisted, "that I want to take anything from the exhibitor—I want him to pay nothing, but I do ask him to deliver the producer's part of what the public pays and will pay.

"TODAY'S motion picture public will have nothing but the best that is to be had. It insists on the 'big pictures' and that forces production costs. If the producer is not given access to the support of the public, if modern production is not delivered to modern demand because of old fashioned methods standing between, production is not going to make progress—and if it does not nobody is going to succeed."

Admitting that it was an extreme case, Mr. Goldwyn cited figures to show that in a special instance, by the use of the pressures of its total buying power, a certain circuit had been able to obtain film service in some lesser houses at rentals that represented 3.2 per cent of the gross take.

The conversation, being predicated upon Mr. Goldwyn's urging of his view of production necessities, did not explore that other very considerable realm of the subject—the situations where the exhibitor, especially vulnerable to pressures, also pays disproportionately high prices for the film he presents.

Incidentally, it was Mr. Goldwyn's observation that the buying methods to which he took exception were not peculiar to any one class of customers or type of theatre operation.

WHATEVER is to be said or decided in the unending issues between buyer and seller, it is clear enough that a none too well heralded revolution in the art has been had—as Mr. Adolph Zukor rather remarked a few weeks ago, after contending that the new top rank pictures would have to have five week runs to prosper.

In the past twelve-month about twenty-four productions have touched or passed the million dollar budget mark, and about half that many more, mostly pushing toward and across the two million dollar mark, are in the making in Hollywood now.

The end is not in sight yet and no one knows what the limit is to be, if there is a limit.

This much is certain. Some one is going to pay for these pictures. If it should happen in any preponderance of instances that it should be the stockholders there will be "hell to tell the captain."

Considerably relevant is the subject of admission prices and their trends, which will be dealt with on a nationwide scale in the news columns of Motion Picture Herald next week.

MY WORD!

AMONG the non-taxable compensations of this editor's job is the joy of looking at the pretty pictures offered for publication and reading the altogether extraordinary legends, or sub-captions which accompany them. This week in a number of instances the sub-captions have appeared so much better than the pictures that they are presented alone. These choicer captions of the week include:

MAGNATE IN HOLLYWOOD—Hon. David Adams, M.P., English shipping and coal magnate, three times mayor of Newcastle. The English industrialist is believed to be considering investment of English capital in American films and made copious notes while watching scenes in which Andrew Jackson and his American forces prepare to defend New Orleans against the British.

MODERN DIANA—Lovely Jean Parker practised archery for her role of Necia in "The Barrier." . . . She soon became adept at the ancient sport and could hit the bullseye from any position.

ORNATE ENOUGH—For her role in "Daughter of Shanghai," Anna May Wong . . . furnished many of the costumes from her personal wardrobe, thus saving the studio a considerable sum.

MALADE—Nous avons appris que la jolie Mlle. ———, qui tourne actuellement dans "———" a eu une crise d'appendicite aigüe et a dû être transportée d'urgence dans une clinique où elle a subi avec succès une opération particulièrement délicate.

When better captions are written the motion picture will present them.

"PUBLICITY"

NO matter what the provocation or occasion, one can always be sure that no opportunity to do something, conspicuously, in behalf of the motion picture industry is ever overlooked. It came again in the case of Laverne Moore, alias John Montague, with the promulgation of a report that he was under a seven-year-million-dollar contract with "the movies," as he emerged with more acquittal than glory from a trial in up-state New York. Meanwhile the report whittles down to a one reel short—but that still is "the movies." The industry gets full credit.

This Week

Sold for 1937-38

A survey of the country's largest and most strategic circuits discloses that they have completed, for the most part, their product buying for the 1937-38 season. For the 83 circuits canvassed 533 franchises have been signed with 11 distributors, the deals representing nearly 27,000 playdates for the new product. The totals are an increase of 81 per cent from those shown in a survey conducted as of September 4th and are up 54 per cent from a similar canvass made early in October of 1936.

Paramount Settlement

Under a settlement approved by the United States district court in New York, former officers, directors and associates of Paramount will pay $2,150,000 in cash and notes instead of the $12,500,000 for which they were sued by the company's trustee in reorganization on grounds of misfeasance and malfeasance. The settlement concludes the reorganization proceedings of the company.

Job Census Trailer

The five largest national theatre circuits, Paramount, Fox, Warner Brothers, Loew's and RKO, have pledged their support to a federal census of unemployed persons in the United States, by agreeing to run a trailer, telling the story of the check. Smaller exhibitors will be contacted and requested to show the film through 5,000 mayors' committees which have been organized in cities and towns not reached by the large circuits. Frank R. Wilson, who has been associated with the motion picture industry in various capacities, is director of information on the census, and John D. Biggers, president of Libbey-Owens-Ford Glass Company, of Toledo, is administrator.

RKO Plans

The RKO reorganization plan, subject of many months of litigation, hearings and study, will again become a major topic of discussion when George W. Alger, special master, presents his tentative report on November 15th. In the Hollywood studios of the company Leo Spitz, president, prepared to assume charge of production until a successor is named for Samuel J. Briskin, and in the New York home offices Phil Reisman, foreign department head, detailed plans for branch expansion.

"Strike" Settled

After a one-week armistice period, 100 exhibitors gathered in Philadelphia Wednesday and voted unanimously to end their "buyers' strike" against Paramount. The battle, which involved court proceedings, was waged by the United Motion Picture Theatre Owners on the contention that Paramount had failed to deliver six pictures listed in the 1936-37 contracts and had placed the same features on the current season contracts. A conciliation board to handle any complaints over individual deals proposed to exhibitors by Paramount was established and will sit three times next week to hear complaints.

Warners on Stage

Extensive plans for backing of stage productions by Warner Brothers were outlined to the press by Jack L. Warner, in New York after a trip to Europe. The company will produce one play every two months in London in association with British producers, bring the shows to New York for presentation on Broadway, and then make them into pictures.

Anti-Trust Suits

Future dates were set for anti-trust suit developments in United States district courts in Indianapolis, New York and Dallas. Arguments will be heard November 22nd in Indianapolis in the Gary Theatre Company against distributors, the Balaban and Katz circuit and the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America. In New York the Morse and Rothenberg action against distributors will reopen November 15th and distributor defendants who lost a decision to the Government in the recent Dallas suit were preparing to file an appeal before December 15th, the deadline.

Praise for Code

In Vancouver, B. C., on his way home to Sydney after a visit to Hollywood and a world tour, W. Cresswell O'Reilly, chief film censor for the Commonwealth of Australia, issued a brief statement expressing his "great admiration for the splendid work which has been done during the past three years or so by Mr. Breen and his associates and the thoroughness with which they have exercised control over the productions of the studios. . . . It is a great achievement to have secured the agreement of producers not to release any film without the Certificate of Approval issued by the Hays Office."

Kuykendall Address

Visiting in Denver on his extended tour of the country, Ed Kuykendall, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, delivered an address before exhibitors in which he denounced the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers as a monopoly. He charged the license fees of the organization are made under an antiquated copyright law. He attacked the contracts between exhibitors and distributors as unfair to the exhibitors and proposed the insertion of a 20 per cent cancellation clause.

Radio Scripts Banned

Warner Brothers - First National announced that radio script versions of its motion pictures no longer will be supplied to small stations. Chief reason for the move, the company said, was that a survey conducted by S. Charles Einfeld, director of advertising and publicity, and Robert S. Taplinger, new studio publicity head, had disclosed that presentation of scripts, in many cases inept, was proving detrimental to the interests of the company and of exhibitors playing its product.

Mahoney-LaGuardia Films

As an aftermath to the charges and counter charges brought forth by the showing of the March of Time release on Fiorello H. LaGuardia, Fusion candidate for reelection as mayor of New York, a film showing the highlights in the career of Jeremiah T. Mahoney, Democratic nominee, was shown in various theatres. The commercial department of Pathe News said the film was produced on the order of RKO theatres and that it was not part of the Pathe News release. RKO meanwhile made the assertion that it had not ordered the film and that it was distributed as part of the Pathe News. March of Time officials offered, within a fortnight of the election, to take shots of Mr. Mahoney but his campaign manager, Abraham Kaplan, refused the offer and, according to March of Time officials, replied that "we'll talk to you after the election."

Import Duty

The Canadian Department of Customs and Excise this week in Toronto, Canada, reduced the duty on the importation of films in the French, Polish or Ukrainian languages from 3 cents to 1½ cents a foot when produced and exported by countries enjoying the socalled "most favored nation" treatment under existing trade treaties. This rate is equal to the British preferential tariff which has been extended to British made films for five years.

Story Buying

Looking toward completion of purchases of story material for the current season product, 17 producers bought 41 stories—originals, novels and plays—in October, 27 fewer than in the preceding month. Original stories supplanted novels as most popular source. Paramount was the heavy purchaser, with four originals, two plays and one novel.

Comparisons of companies' purchases and the titles of stories, and credits available to date for the pictures to be made from them. appear on page 14.

'Sex Film' Arguments

"Heart of Spain," "Spanish Earth," "The Road Back," "Sabotage," "Madame X," "Sex Madness" and "Ecstasy" this week again figured in censorship arguments and bannings on grounds of immorality or for political propaganda contents, over a wide area, from London to Argentina, Ohio, New York and Canada.

Earnings Increase

Paramount, Twentieth Century-Fox, Radio-Keith-Orpheum, Keith-Albee-Orpheum, B. F. Keith, Pathe, American Seating Company and Heywood-Wakefield Company released financial statements this week showing increased earnings for 39 week periods over similar periods in 1936. Total earnings for Paramount were estimated at $6,696,000, or $2.36 a share on common stock. Twentieth Century-Fox reported a consolidated net operating profit of $4,898,893 without including any dividends from National Theatres Corporation in which Twentieth Century-Fox holds a 42 per cent interest. A preliminary statement for RKO shows a consolidated profit of $1,543,511.

Silent

Samuel Goldwyn and Alexander Korda continued their conferences this week with a view to exercising options which they hold on the United Artists stock owned by Mary Pickford, Charles Chaplin and Douglas Fairbanks, but, despite this activity, they have maintained an attitude of strict silence on any progress being made. David O. Selznick also has remained silent on his plans after the expiration of his contract with United Artists.

Their silence is discussed on page 82.

Shanghai Carries On

Despite the reports of widespread damage to theatres in the Sino-Japanese war-that-isn't-a-war, the regular first-runs in Shanghai are running three shows a day and 70 to 75 theatres in the provinces are in operation, writes J. P. Koehler, in an article of October 5th, just received. However, three-fourths of the theatres in China at large are dark, and many of those operating are doing subnormal business, Mr. Koehler says.

Details of the motion picture problem in China under the Japanese invasion, and what a Japanese victory would mean in censorship, are recorded on page 40.

Regional Plan

Undaunted by the indefinite postponement of the first step toward eliminating chance games in New York theatres, the Independent Theatre Owners Association of New York this week laid plans for several meetings to discuss the possibility of installing the ban on games regionally instead of throughout the city at one time. Supporters of Bank Night were victorious in Minnesota, where the supreme court reversed a lower court decision and held that the game is legal.

Union Label

Yielding to demands of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees made when that group laid claim to jurisdiction over all screen industry labor, producers agreed to place the IATSE emblem on all future releases. The emblem will be in the lower right hand corner of the screen credit card which bears the Production Code seal and it will be the same size as that seal. Insertion of the emblem was necessary, the IATSE said, "to insure projection of the pictures by our projectionists throughout the country."

CIRCUITS SIGN FOR 11,136— MORE DATES THAN IN 1936

Eighty-three Circuits Sign 533 Contracts with 11 Distributors for 28,800 Playdates in 3,518 Theatres, 22% of All Houses

Eighty-three circuits, representing the most important buyers of motion pictures, have signed 533 contracts with 11 distributors, covering approximately 28,800 playdates for 1937-38 product, a survey conducted by MOTION PICTURE HERALD discloses. These circuits include 3,518 theatres, about 22 per cent of the country's total, but, because of their buying power, the primary goals of the distributor sales forces.

The franchise total represents an increase of 81 per cent, nearly double, the total reached in a canvass of the same circuits published on September 4th and it is a 54 per cent increase over the number indicated in a survey conducted as of October 10, 1936.

On December 19, 1936, approximately the same circuits had concluded only 702 franchises with distributors, this total being double the number found to have been concluded in the first survey for that season. Comparison of the surveys yields evidence that in spite of a slow start this year the selling season has been advanced slightly. Part of the increase, allowing for the difference in timing of about a month between the present canvass and the first one published last year, can be accounted for by reports from sales managers of increases in the number of accounts booked this year.

More Accounts Indicated

Although definite figures were not available, these reports indicate more accounts are being sold this year than last, the estimates being based on the contracts signed to date and on expectations of results from the independent and subsequent run fields on which salesmen are now concentrating.

The amount of product booked by the large circuits indicates that there will be little slackening in the use of the double feature policy, most buyers being adequately prepared to show two features continuously through the year with the product for which they have contracted.

The 11 distributors listed last year offered a total of 566 features for the 1936-37 season. This year the programs total 598, divided as follows: Columbia, 58; Grand National, 65; Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, 52; Monogram, 42; Paramount, 59; RKO, 56; Republic, 54; Twentieth Century-Fox, 66; United Artists, 36; Universal, 50, and Warner Brothers, 60.

Many of the more important and comprehensive deals listed in the survey were concluded in the last few weeks. In the list as published on September 4th many outstanding circuits were shown as having purchased the product of only one or two companies. In a majority of cases these circuits have now contracted for an almost complete quota of product, unusual activity in the last two months having followed a period during which circuit executives and independent exhibitors, well supplied with late 1936-37 releases and faced with the prospect of substantially advanced terms for the new product, delayed negotiations for as long as possible.

A table showing what product 83 of the larger circuits of the country have contracted to show this season starts on page 13. The deals, except in a few indicated instances, are for the entire product of the companies listed, only this type of contract having been considered for purposes of the survey. The circuits listed represent 3,518 theatres, about 22 per cent of the total number in the country, but important enough, through their buying power, to constitute the key to the film market. The table shows a total of 533 franchises signed, representing 28,782 playdates. Early in October of last year only 346 franchises had been signed, representing 17,646 playdates and in December, 1936, there were 702 franchises for 35,802 playdates. The circuits covered in the survey were substantially the same.

Most Big Circuits Ready

Examination of the table on the following pages shows that first-run situations in every section of the country have been covered in franchises signed by the important circuits which have completed their buying except in a few scattered instances. One important change in the buying picture has been the reversal by United Artists of its sales policy. This distributor in former years sold its product on an individual picture basis, making very few contracts for its entire season's program. This year United Artists has signed with 63 of the 83 circuits listed for its program of 36 pictures.

In Canada United Artists sold its product to independent theatres and the Loew houses in Canada in opposition to N. L. Nathanson's Famous Players Canadian circuit, now allied with Universal.

In Chicago, buying has been free of the clearance fight which delayed contracts last year and the season, consequently, is well advanced. Paramount, MGM and Warner Brothers have long term franchise arrangements with Balaban and Katz, and the circuit has bought, in addition, product of Columbia, RKO, Twentieth Century-Fox and United Artists. Most independent deals are made late in the year, after the B&K terms are arranged, and many of these are now in negotiation or completed.

Independents Active

Independent circuits in New York are usually slow in completing new season buying but contract negotiation in that city is well underway, all first-run Broadway deals having been arranged and both Loew's and RKO having contracted for the product needed for their neighborhood houses.

Twentieth Century-Fox will continue to use the Roxy theatre for first-runs on Broadway. The Radio City Music Hall, in addition to showing RKO first-runs, has completed a three year selective arrangement with Columbia under which that distributor may obtain a maximum of one-third of the house's playing time. The Skouras, Century and Springer-Cocalis circuit in New York also have completed the major part of their buying.

Earlier, Say Sales Executives

Supporting evidence for the conclusion that the season this year is earlier than usual is found in the statements of distributor sales executives, most of whom say they are in advance of schedules for their quotas. MGM claims to have closed its product deals 40 per cent faster than last year and expects to conclude all its circuit contracts at least a month and a half earlier than in 1936.

In October Gradwell L. Sears, Warner Brothers sales manager, reported a total of 5,137 contracts had been closed, a record high for the company at that period of the season and an increase of 30 per cent over the same period in 1936.

Wilby Acquires Six Houses

George Wilby and his associates, Atlanta, Ga., last week bought six theatres from L. J. Duncan. Mr. Duncan disposed of his interests in Toccoa, Cornelia, Lavonia and Clarkesville, all in Georgia. Mr. Duncan will continue to operate his circuit in the Chattahoochee Valley.

B&K Adding Two Theatres

The Balaban and Katz circuit of Chicago was reported last week to be acquiring title to the Senate and Belpark theatres on payment of $450,000 on Lubliner and Trinz bonds which have been in default for some five years. Federal Judge Charles Woodward approved the step.

Time Gets Cancer Award

The March of Time has been awarded the Clement Cleveland Memorial Medal for the "outstanding piece of work in cancer education during the year," by the New York City Cancer Committee of the American Society for the Control of Cancer.

LONG TERM DEALS ARRANGED

The following table shows the product purchased by the larger circuits of the country, long term franchise deals being indicated where such information is available. Many circuits affiliated with distributors have long term contracts, but under arrangements which provide for negotiations each year, the contracts thus amounting to continuing options.

17 PRODUCERS BUY 41 STORIES FOR FEW REMAINING GAPS IN SCHEDULES

Originals Regain Lead Over Novels as Source of Film Material; Paramount Buys Seven Properties in Month

Producers went about the business of filling the rapidly closing gaps in their current season programs through the purchase of 41 literary properties in October, a decrease of 27 stories bought as compared with the previous month.

From their unusual position of first place in September, novels as a source of supply dropped to second position, being supplanted by 22 originals, 53.6 per cent of the total purchases, as against 10 novels. Plays, from the purchasing standpoint, showed a slight improvement, increasing from one in September to three last month. The remaining six properties were magazine stories.

Paramount Buys Seven

Paramount, which ranked far down on the list as a buyer in September, moved into the top position last month by acquiring seven writings—four originals, two plays and one novel. The other purchases in the month were made by 16 producers.

The sources of the properties, aside from Paramount's, were as follows:

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, four originals, one novel and one magazine; Warner Brothers, two novels, two originals and one magazine; Twentieth Century-Fox, three novels and one play; Universal, two novels; Columbia, two originals; Republic, two originals and one magazine; George Batcheller, two originals; Emanuel Cohen, one magazine and one original; RKO, one novel; Republic, one magazine; Joe Pasternak, one magazine, and Hal Roach, Mervyn LeRoy, Monogram, Major and Principal, one each.

The titles of the 41 stories, with all available production credits, follow:

AMERICAN LEGION, original by Martin Mooney, purchased by Columbia to feature Don Terry and Mary Russell. Screen play by Michael Simmons. C. C. Coleman, Jr., to direct.

BADGE OF POLICEMAN O'ROON, THE, short story by O. Henry, purchased by Paramount as a starring vehicle for Beatrice Lillie and Bing Crosby. Screen adaptation by Jo Swerling and Richard Connell.

BLACK DOLL, THE, a Doubleday, Doran Crime Club novel by William Edward Hayes, purchased by Universal.

CAPTAIN NEEDS A MATE, THE, original by Eric Hatch, purchased by Paramount as a starring vehicle for Jack Benny.

CENTRAL PARK SPEAK, original by Julius Klein, purchased by Columbia.

CORN ON THE COB, unpublished story by Homer Croy, purchased by Twentieth Century-Fox.

EIGHT HOURS, magazine story to run in Colliers, purchased by Emanuel Cohen.

EMERGENCY SQUAD, an original by Michael Raymond and Robert Musel, bought by Paramount.

ENSENADA, original by John C. Moffitt and Duke Atteberry, purchased by Paramount, to be produced by Arthur Hornblow, Jr.

EVERYBODY'S GIRL, original by Samson Raphaelson, purchased by Paramount. Frances Dee will have the leading role.

SCREEN IS PROBLEM FOR ITSELF IN NEW YORK'S MAYORAL ELECTION

RKO Theatres Denies Ordering Mahoney Film Shown Following the March of Time Special on Mayor LaGuardia

Repercussions of the furor created in New York City politics by the March of Time release on Fiorello H. LaGuardia, reelected mayor on the Fusion ticket, were still being heard this week after a "mysterious" film featuring the Democratic candidate, Jeremiah T. Mahoney, had made its appearance in several of the city's theatres on the eve of Tuesday's balloting.

Admittedly the Mahoney shots were produced by the commercial department of Pathe News but Frederick A. Ullman, Pathe News editor, emphatically asserted: "They are not part of Pathe News. The film was ordered by RKO Theatres and presumably will be paid for by them. I understand the RKO theatres wanted something on Mahoney so that they could not be accused of being partisan." RKO distributes March of Time.

But RKO Theatres, through John Dowd, head of publicity for the theatres, disclaimed any knowledge of why the film was produced. He was as emphatic as the Pathe executive when he declared: "RKO Theatres did not order the film. It came to us as part of the weekend release of Pathe News and was shown in our theatres as such. Most assuredly RKO will not pay for the making of the film. If it had been ordered by RKO Theatres, I would know about it."

Mr. Dowd stressed the point that RKO's policy is to stay as far away from politics as possible. Although he pointed out that becoming involved in politics might lead to reprisals in the form of unnecessarily rigid enforcement of fire and building regulations, he denied there had been any threats made to RKO Theatres by Tammany Hall, as reported in the New York Herald-Tribune.

Tammany Threats Denied

Meanwhile, persistent reports that March of Time also had been threatened by Tammany with the result it had made a sequence on Mr. Mahoney to add to the LaGuardia film, were denied by Louis de Rochemont, producer, who reiterated his statement that when the LaGuardia film was planned in August, Tammany was contacted and refused to have "anything to do with pictures." Mr. de Rochemont said that about two weeks before the election Abraham Kaplan, campaign manager for Mr. Mahoney, was asked if he would arrange for some shots of his candidate. It was planned to release the film as a trailer to the March of Time release, permitting use by those exhibitors who desired it.

Mr. Kaplan's reply, according to Mr. de Rochemont, was:

"We'll talk to you after November 2nd."

At the Mahoney campaign headquarters, this was partly substantiated when Gregory Coleman, publicity director for Mr. Mahoney, said they had flatly refused to permit the taking of the pictures because the request came virtually on the eve of the election. He added that no attempts had been made to have the shots made at the time the LaGuardia film was produced.

Mr. Coleman also said RKO had taken a few shots but pointed out that he did not know in what houses the film would be used. The Tammany publicity man said he had no statement to make about whether the March of Time film was produced for political purposes, but he indicated that that was his belief.

Mr. de Rochemont remained firm in his stand that the March of Time film was produced merely because the New York City election was of national interest.

The contention has been upheld throughout the country, he said, displaying clippings from newspapers to prove the point. In announcing the release of the film, March of Time sent out publicity containing such statements as:

"March of Time now reviews in graphic sequence LaGuardia's first clash with the Tammany Tiger in 1933 when he was drafted as a Fusion Party candidate for mayor by Judge Samuel Seabury, whose legislative investigation of New York City affairs the previous year had exposed wholesale political corruption.

"Tammany men and other machine politicians alike were thrust aside by the willful little one-time congressman who proceeded to reorganize the city administration by selecting men on the merit principle . . ."

In another release:

"LaGuardia himself . . . enacts his own role in the film which features the dynamic personality of the ex-wartime Army major who in three brief years rid New York of more than three score racketeers and overcame a deficit of $41,000,000 annually to balance a more than $700,000,000 budget."

Called Factor in Election

That the film was considered a potent force in the election was reflected in an article published in the New York Times last Sunday. It said:

"When the voters of Greater New York go to the polls on Tuesday, it is a pretty safe odds-on bet that a sizable percentage of them will do so with a fresh reminiscence of one of the most surprising pieces of political persuading that has ever been put to the public. The reference is, of course, to the extraordinary film document in which the familiar March of Time has dramatized the past four years in Mayor LaGuardia's career. And, if that gentleman is duly reelected, as impartial prophets ordain, a good measure of his success will certainly be due to the wholly inspired and unintended contribution of this film.

"Indeed, it is doubtful if ever, in a vital political campaign, the motion picture has had such amazing effectiveness as has this timely resume of a candidate's claim to favor . . ."

The magazine Time, which is published by the same company that produces March of Time, also commented on the film under the heading "March Stopped." The magazine had this to say:

"In the breezeless and unpolitical atmosphere of last July, March of Time turned its cameras on the career of Fusion Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia of New York City. Finding the bustling little Mayor a cheerfully photogenic subject, MOT (March of Time) dramatized the high spots of his energetic three-and-a-half years in office, made particular point of his political independence . . .

"Released to first-run houses all over the U. S. a fortnight ago, Vol. 4, No. 2 has been doing a big business for two weeks, but last week it made news of a different sort in New York City. New York is currently in the throes of a mayoral election campaign in which photogenic Mr. LaGuardia is being opposed by Mr. Jeremiah T. Mahoney. Tammany Hall still controls the Borough of Manhattan pretty thoroughly, and Radio City's Music Hall, MOT first-run house in New York, is the finest theatre in Manhattan.

"Candidate LaGuardia thought the MOT's treatment of his life and times was 'all right.' Impartial observers thought it was a masterly if unconscious campaign document. Tammany Hall did not go on record with any sentiments, but after the film had played a week to 150,000 people at the Music Hall, the management deemed it advisable to substitute a Mickey Mouse cartoon for the MOT during the second week of the current feature's run. Thus the potential number of voters who might be drawn into the Mayor's camp had been greatly decreased.

Marching On Tiger's Tail

"Because of general clamor aroused by the picture, it appeared for a time that only the MOT's principal second-run New York house, the Embassy Newsreel Theatre, would exhibit the LaGuardia biography before November 2, date of the election. But by week's end, as a result of calls for the picture from their patrons, it appeared that some 50-odd circuit and third-run theatres will be showing the picture in New York during the week preceding the election. It seemed that, in marching on, Time had inadvertently stepped on the Tammany tiger's tail."

In the next week's issue of Time, in a letter William A. Schroeder, of Lyndhurst, New Jersey, complained about a statement which was described by the magazine as a "printer's error." Mr. de Rochemont amplified this by explaining that the error was caught before the entire issue of the magazine had been printed and therefore only the copies sent through the mail contained the mistake.

The answer to Mr. Schroeder's complaint, as published in Time, follows:

"The Music Hall canard is worse than bad news reporting; it is a printer's error. Time wrote two statements coupled by the word 'and'; Tammany Hall still controls the Borough of Manhattan pretty thoroughly, and Radio City's Music Hall, MOT first-run house in New York, is the finest theatre in Manhattan. The last six words were omitted —with horrifying results.

"The reference to the Music Hall's failure to run the LaGuardia pictures for a second week is the fault of no printer, but nevertheless unfair to the Music Hall, which has an option to run MOT for two weeks, only occasionally exercises it.—Ed."

Reprisal Story Refuted

The New York Herald-Tribune, when the controversy was still in its infancy, reported RKO officials "had begged to be freed from handling the LaGuardia film through fear of Tammany reprisals." Both Mr. de Rochemont and Nate J. Blumberg, head of RKO Theatres, expressed wonderment over the source of the story, as reported in MOTION PICTURE HERALD on October 23rd. Mr. Blumberg answered the charge with the assertion that the film would play in RKO houses on schedule, which put it in the neighborhood houses in New York the week before the election.

The Herald-Tribune also advanced a reason for a delay in the opening of the film at Music Hall.

"When the feature was scheduled for its premiere performance at the Radio City Music Hall, in Rockefeller Center, it was reported, inspectors of the Manhattan Department of Buildings threatened to close the theatre because of technical violations of the building law." The newspaper also reported the denial of the charge by Samuel Fassler, Manhattan commissioner of Buildings.

Mr. de Rochemont explained the delay by saying that the feature then playing in the Music Hall was so long it was difficult to fit the March of Time film into the program.

Mahoney Revives Issue

The charges and denials were rapidly becoming nothing more than echoes when Mr. Mahoney reawakened the issue in a radio address. The New York World-Telegram, quoting Mr. Mahoney, reported:

"Mayor LaGuardia used 50 policemen for a claque when the March of Time movie of the mayor's accomplishments was shown at Radio City.

"He ordered upwards of 50 patrolmen on duty inside the theatre with instructions to organize a cheering squad. These men met every morning at the corner of 50th Street and Fifth Avenue and were paid the price of admission to the theatre. At 11 p. m. they met at the same corner, turned in their stubs and were discharged. What a spectacle for the Police Department of the City of New York."

Then the "Mystery" Film

Again the issue seemed destined to drop into oblivion but again it was resurrected, this time by the appearance of the "mystery" film on Mr. Mahoney.

Reporting on the film, Motion Picture Daily said that about 50 prints had been produced and that the film "is sponsored by the citizens' independent committee for the election of Mahoney, an active organization in the New York mayoralty campaign," adding:

"Among the theatres in which the reel received weekend bookings were a number of RKO neighborhood first-runs in the metropolitan area. For these it helped to establish a non-partisan local political record, inasmuch as it was dated in for Friday and Saturday, immediately following a two-day booking accorded the March of Time's production on Mayor LaGuardia's public career.

Theatres "In a Spot"

Bert Adler, former motion picture press agent and now a LaGuardia appointed deputy sanitation commissioner, active in the campaign, said the LaGuardia campaign committee was neither interested nor concerned over the Mahoney film.

WASHINGTON GOVERNOR SETS "BARRIER" WEEK

Governor Clarence D. Martin of the state of Washington has officially designated the coming week as "The Barrier" week for the entire state. This is said to be the first time in the state's history that a governor has issued a proclamation tied-up with the advertising campaign of a motion picture.

One of the organizers of a motion picture and theatrical testimonial luncheon to Mr. LaGuardia, Mr. Adler said theatres were "in a spot" on the showing of the Mahoney film, explaining that they would have the Tammany license, fire and other departments "slapping violations" on them if they did not show the film.

Mr. Dowd, however, insisted the Mahoney film, which ran about 500 feet, was not booked separately. "It was part of Pathe News," he said.

Although Mr. Dowd insisted the film was part of the weekend release of Pathe News, a check with several Pathe accounts in New York, other than RKO houses, revealed that only the three newsreel theatres operated by Trans-Lux had shown the picture. Consolidated Amusements and Skouras Theatres both announced they had not played the Mahoney film in their houses. Other theatres which said they had not shown the reel included the Grand Central, a newsreel theatre in Grand Central Terminal; the Newsreel theatre, Fordham Road, the Bronx; the Times, Eighth Avenue, Manhattan, and the Laconia, White Plains Road, Bronx. The Trans-Lux houses are at Broadway and 49th Street, Madison Avenue and 60th Street, and 85th Street and Madison Avenue.

But Pathe did not list the sequence in its regular continuity sheet and along with the other newsreels, except Fox Movietone, announced it was turning a cold shoulder to the Mayoralty campaign. Paramount ran a sequence on Bruce Barton, candidate for Congress, but there was only one slight reference to the fact that he was running for office. The remainder of the scene was used to depict obsolete and useless laws as brought to light by Mr. Barton.

Movietone's Coverage

Movietone took shots of both candidates for mayor and of the two candidates for the office of district attorney, Thomas Dewey, LaGuardia running mate, and Harold Hastings, who received the Democratic nomination.

Truman Talley, editor of Movietone, said the scene was not included in the national release but was a special for New York theatres. He also said Movietone probably would show shots of the successful and defeated candidates after the election. Paramount said it probably would follow the same policy and the other reels were expected to take similar action.

The motion picture industry entered the political arena on another score when Herman Gelber, recording secretary of the Moving Picture Machine Operators Union, Local 306, released a statement denouncing Mr. Mahoney.

Mr. Mahoney, the statement said, formerly served as counsel for the union and, it was charged, had billed the union for $132,000 for his services, and had threatened to throw the union into receivership when the members balked at paying the fee. The statement also declared that Mr. Mahoney had refused to accept dismissal and had continued to send bills to the union for services subsequent to the notice of dismissal.

MPPDA Plea in Czech Trade Pact

Relaxation of Czechoslovak quota restrictions on the importation of American motion pictures was, last week, asked of the Committee for Reciprocity Information by the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America as a provision of the proposed reciprocal trade agreement between the United States and Czechoslovakia.

Original plans of the MPPDA called for a personal appearance of Fred L. Herron before the committee during its hearings on the agreement, but he was unable to come to Washington and the organization filed a brief outlining the situation and asking for relief.

Among the restrictions which the film industry would have eliminated are the quota requirements, the pre-screening committee, the embargo on the entry of new companies into the Czech market and the ban on advertising material, it was said.

In the negotiation of agreements with all countries which impose restrictions on American films the State Department is attempting to secure concessions in return for increased privileges for the entry here of major products of the foreign countries.

The A-B Motion Picture Studios, Prague-Barandov, Czechoslovakia's largest and only permanently occupied establishment, showed a new profit from 1936 operations of 247,000 crowns, as against 282,000 crowns in 1935, according to a report to the United States Department of Commerce from Assistant Trade Commissioner Theodore J. Hadraba in Prague.

The dividend declared was increased from 10 to 12 per cent—20 to 24 crowns per share—in view of the smaller allocations to reserves. (One crown equals $0.035 United States currency at the present rate of exchange).

Gross earnings of 4,500,000 crowns in 1936 were higher than those of 3,700,000 crowns in 1935 by almost 22 per cent. During 1936, 25 sound features and five sound versions were produced as against 19 sound features and six sound versions a year earlier.

Mr. Hadraba also reported that the Czechoslovak Ministry of Finance has granted guarantees on 11 domestic features since the Government guarantee plan on production was introduced in October, 1936. The amount involved in the guarantees was not disclosed.

The plan calls for the Government guarantee on approved Czechoslovak features up to 50 per cent of the calculated cost, within a total available amount of 10,000,000 crowns (about $350,000).

PROFITS FOR PARAMOUNT, FOX, RKO, KEITH, PATHE AND SEAT COMPANIES

Estimated Net Earnings of Paramount for 39 Weeks $5,276,000; 20th-Fox Consolidated Operating Profit $4,898,896

Increased earnings for the first 39 weeks of 1937 as compared with similar nine-month periods in 1936 were revealed this week when financial statements were released by Paramount, Twentieth Century-Fox, Keith Albee-Orpheum, B. F. Keith, Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation, Pathe, American Seating Company, and the Heywood-Wakefield Company.

Other financial developments of the week included the Securities and Exchange Commission's semi-monthly report showing disposition in August by Maurice Newton, New York director of Paramount, of his entire holdings in various classifications of the company's securities. Stanton Griffis, also a New York director, was shown to have disposed of 42,000 3¼ per cent convertible debentures.

The estimated net earnings of Paramount for the 39 weeks ended October 2nd were $5,276,000 after all charges, depreciation and federal taxes, except undistributed profits taxes. This was equivalent to $1.78 a share on the common stock. The earnings did not include approximately $1,420,000 equity in the undistributed earnings of partly owned subsidiaries not consolidated. Including the equity, earnings were $6,696,000 or $2.36 a share on common stock.

For the first nine months (40 weeks) of 1936, the consolidated earnings were $2,255,224, after applying $1,800,000 of inventory reserve, and Paramount's net interest as a stockholder in the combined undistributed earnings of partially-owned subsidiaries for the nine months totaled $1,032,000, a combined total of $3,287,224.

Consolidated Net $1,958,000

Paramount estimated its consolidated net profit for the third quarter ended October 2, 1937, at $1,958,000, after charges including interest, federal taxes (except undistributed profits taxes), depreciation and reserves. In addition there is approximately $440,000 representing Paramount's direct and indirect net interest as a stockholder in the combined undistributed earnings for the quarter of partially owned non-consolidated subsidiaries. The combined estimated consolidated earnings and share of undistributed earnings of subsidiaries for the quarter aggregate $2,398,000.

The consolidated earnings for the third quarter of 1936 amounted to $2,013,764 after applying $200,000 of the inventory reserve provided as of Dec. 28, 1935, and Paramount's net interest as a stockholder in the combined undistributed earnings of subsidiaries for the quarter totaled $247,000, a combined total of $2,260,764.

20th-Fox Net $4,898,893

Twentieth Century-Fox reported a consolidated net operating profit of $4,898,893 after all charges including normal federal income taxes, but not including provision for surtax on undistributed profits, for the 39 weeks ended September 25th. This compares with a profit of $4,451,851 for the first three-quarters of 1936.

For the quarter ended Sept. 25, 1937, the net profit after all charges, except provision for surtax on undistributed profits, was $1,143,410, as compared with a profit of $1,682,661 for the same quarter in 1936.

On the basis of 956,740 shares of $1.50 cumulative convertible preferred stock outstanding at September 25, 1937, the consolidated net operating profit for the 39 weeks amounted to $5.12 a share. After allowing for the preferred dividend for the first three-quarters of 1937 totalling $1.12½, there remained a profit equivalent to $2.19 per share on the 1,729,352 shares of common stock outstanding.

The profit does not include any dividends from National Theatres Corporation, in which Twentieth Century-Fox holds a 42 per cent interest.

RKO Profit $1,543,511

Trustees of Radio-Keith-Orpheum and subsidiaries, in a preliminary statement for the 39 weeks ended October 2nd, reported consolidated profit of $1,543,511 after charges including interest on outlying funded debt not currently being paid, and trustees fees, against a profit of $1,316,922 for the corresponding period of 1936.

George W. Alger, special master, said a reorganization hearing would be held before him November 15th at which time he probably would file his recommendations with the United States district court. Since the last reorganization hearing, claims totaling $500,000 have been settled.

Pathe's $276,486 Profit

Pathe reports a profit of $276,486.70 for the nine months ended September 30th after depreciation, federal income tax and other charges, against a profit of $24,687.22 for the same period last year. The company does not figure it is liable for the surtax on undistributed profit.

The income from film developing and printing sales was $910,599.20; from film rentals, $85,806.84, and from other operations, $9,012.23, making a total of $1,005,417.27. Deductions for sales and service, producers' participation and amortization advancing and operating and other expenses totalled $975,333.96, leaving a profit from operations of $30,083.31. Other income totalled $289,924.21.

DuPont Net Is $1,149,000

DuPont Film Manufacturing Corporation, in which Pathe owns 35 per cent of the stock, had a net profit, after all charges, including federal income tax, of $1,149,000 for the nine-month period. This compares with a profit of $861,000 in the corresponding period of 1936. Pathe's share of the earnings will be $402,000 as compared with $301,000 for 1936.

The report of the Keith-Albee Orpheum and subsidiaries for the 39 weeks ended October 2nd showed a net profit of $914,672.15 after depreciation and federal income tax, except surtax on undistributed profits as compared to a profit of $666,080.63 for a similar period in 1936. This year's profit is equal, after allowing for dividend requirements on 64,304 shares of 7 per cent preferred stock, on which there is an accumulation of unpaid dividends, to 48 cents a share on 1,206,381 shares of common stock, all of which is owned by RKO. This compared with 27 cents a common share in 39 weeks ended Sept. 26, 1936.

The report noted that the figures were, in part, estimated and subject to audit and adjustment at the end of the calendar year.

Keith's Gain Increases

B. F. Keith Corporation, controlled by KAO, and subsidiaries reported net profit for 39 weeks ended October 2nd, after depreciation, federal income taxes but before surtax on undistributed profits, of $663,946. This compares with $531,842 in 39 weeks ended Sept. 26, 1936.

American Seating Company

The American Seating Company's report for nine months ended September 30th shows net profit of $519,004 after depreciation, interest, normal federal income taxes, etc., but before surtax on undistributed profits, equal to $2.35 a share on 221,062 no-par shares of common stock. In the first nine months of 1936 the profit was $299,612, or $1.47 a share on 202,875 shares.

Current assets, as of September 30th, 1937 were listed at $5,229,008 and current liabilities were $1,322,784.

Consolidated income account for nine months ended September 30, 1937, compares as follows:

|---|---|---|---|
| Gross sales | $6,347,346 | $4,694,701 | $3,446,583 |
| Cost of sales | 4,471,759 | 3,194,627 | 2,253,004 |
| Selling and administrative expenditures | 1,067,146 | 944,693 | 752,114 |
| Depreciation | 126,351 | 114,546 | 110,265 |
| Profit | $682,090 | $440,835 | $331,200 |
| Other income | 93,666 | 63,612 | 76,226 |
| Total income | $775,756 | $504,447 | $407,426 |
| Interest | 75,060 | 87,384 | 125,561 |
| Sundry charges | 84,692 | 72,251 | 44,629 |

MICKEY IS A $37,000,000 MERCHANT, SAYS KAMEN

Mickey Mouse was described last week as one of the biggest merchandisers of the country. The occasion was a meeting of the Advertising Club of Kansas City and the words were those of Kay Kamen, head of Kay Kamen, Ltd., sole representatives of Walt Disney Enterprises.

"Not only have Mickey Mouse characters played annually for nine years to over a billion persons in 10,000 theatres in the United States alone," Mr. Kamen said. "The volume of business also done by more than 100 large manufacturers in the United States with Mickey Mouse's aid, helps to sell amounts to over $37,000,000. So Mickey Mouse, Donald Duck and the rest of the Disney characters are first-class salesmen of silverware, foods, glasses, watches, and so on," he said. Mr. Kaman added that $5,000,000 worth of Ingersoll Mickey Mouse watches have been sold in the last five years wholesale.

Mr. Kamen said that Cartier's, New York jeweler, is making jewelry of "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" to sell from $1,000 to $2,500 each.

The Mickey Mouse book version of the fairy tale will be published in four editions with a $2 top, he said.

ber 30th. This was equal to $1.35 a share on preferred stock, compared with 33 cents a share on common stock for the nine months ended September 30th, 1936, when the profit totaled $776,290.

Profit for the quarter ended September 30th, 1937, was listed at $162,606, which is equivalent to 41 cents a share on 400,000 no-par shares of $2 preferred stock.

General Theatres Equipment

General Theatres Equipment Corporation reported a consolidated net profit of $257,805 for the quarter ended September 30th, equal to 43 cents a share on 600,922 no-par shares of capital stock.

Indicated net profit for nine months ended September 30th, as compiled from the company's quarterly reports, was $872,472, equal to $1.45 a share on 600,922 shares, comparing with $837,950, or $191 a share, on 438,485 shares for nine months ended September 30th, 1936.

Consolidated income account of General Theatres Equipment Corp. and subsidiaries excluding Cinema Building Corp., J. M. Wall Machine Co., Inc., and Zephyr Shaver Corp., for quarter ended September 30, 1937, follows: Net sales $2,283,091; costs and expenses $2,111,516; operating profit $171,575; other income $180,794; total income $362,369; other deductions $70,622; federal income taxes $23,942; net profit $257,805.

Sonotone's Preliminary Report

The preliminary report for the September quarter of Sonotone Corporation shows a net operating profit of about $63,400, subject to writeoffs of $15,000 for year-end inventory adjustments. This compares to a net operating profit of $350 for the third quarter of 1936.

Heywood-Wakefield Company

The Heywood-Wakefield Company earned $414,535 or $4.72 a share for the first three-quarters of this year as against $401,212, or $4.49 a share for the first nine months of last year. The company has retired $275,000 in bank loans which now total $625,000, said Richard N. Greenwood, president of the company, which manufactures theatre seats.

Fox Theatres Dividend

Federal Judge Manton has authorized Milton C. Wiseman, receiver for Fox Theatres Corporation, to pay a second ad interim dividend of 3 per cent to creditors whose claims have been adjudicated. The receiver was directed to set aside a reserve fund of $80,000 to be used for possible dividend purposes, pending adjudication of claims filed by William Fox and Hiram Steelman, receiver of the estate of Mr. Fox, totaling $1,000,000. The court fixed November 15th as the final date for the filing of a verified statement of the Fox claims, hearings on which will be held before a special master.

Securities Commission Report

The Securities and Exchange Commission report showed that Maurice Newton, through Hallgarten & Company, acquired and disposed of 1,400 shares of Paramount common and disposed of 95,000 3¼ per cent convertible debentures, holding at the close of the month in his own name, 8,118 shares of common and 2,813 shares of second preferred stock.

Mr. Griffis was shown to hold at the close of the month, in his own name, 1,000 shares of common, 1,000 shares of first preferred and 1,000 shares of second preferred.

Further liquidation of Twentieth Century-Fox securities held by the Chase National Bank was reported for September, when the bank disposed, under escrow agreement, of 2,284 shares of common and 4,568 shares of preferred, leaving it with 343,448 shares of the former and 687,096 shares of the latter at the close of the month.

Other deals reported to the SEC for September were as follows:

Grand National Flms: Disposition by Kirk W. Todd, Pittsburgh, director, of 1,100 shares of common, leaving him with 15,100 shares.

Loew's Boston Theatres: Acquisition by Loew's, Inc., of 132 shares of common, giving it a total of 97,754 shares.

Disposals of Stock

Sam Katz, as an officer of Culver City, disposed of 400 shares of Loew's, Inc., common, leaving him with 100 shares, and acquisition by Charles C. Moskowitz, New York, director, of 100 shares of common, giving him 1,000 shares.

In Monogram Pictures, Sol A. Rosenblatt, New York, director, disposed of 9,765 options for common stock, leaving him with 11,228 at the end of the month. He also was shown to hold 1,000 shares of common stock.

Trans Lux Corporation reported acquisition by Robert L. Gordon, New York, director, of 500 shares of common, giving him 900 shares; by Arthur C. Payne, New York, officer, of 300 shares of common, giving him 1,803 shares.

Reports of holdings of officers, directors and principal stockholders in companies whose securities have become registered included one for Monogram Pictures, whose registration became effective September 10th, showing that W. Ray Johnston, New York, held 62,383 shares of common and 89,054 options for common, and Joseph A. Sisto, New York, through J. A. Sisto & Company, held 2,267 shares of common. Scott R. Dunlap, Hollywood; William R. Stewart, New York; Herschel Stuart, New York, and M. S. White, New York, were shown to hold no equity securities in the company.

In another report, Aaron Rosenthal, Los Angeles, who became an officer in Grand National Films on July 1 last, was shown to have held no equity securities in that date.

Ambassador Pictures Withdraws SEC Plan

Ambassador Pictures withdrew its registration statement this week from the Securities and Exchange Commission covering a proposed issue of 1,176,000 shares of $1 par value capital stock. The statement originally was filed August 25th. The withdrawal followed several extensions of time in which to complete the registration.

A new registration statement will be filed by Ambassador with the SEC immediately upon the improvement of general market conditions, it was said. The company's attorney, Hays, Podell and Schulman, and its accountants, Arthur Anderson and Company, are now preparing additional data for the new statement.

Maurice Conn, president, is in New York to arrange for new financing for the company. He plans to return to the coast next week if the financing arrangements are completed on schedule.

Filmack Buys Midwest Plant

The Filmack Trailer Company of Chicago last week purchased the plant and equipment of the old Midwest Film Company, Inc., trailer producers.

Move to Study 'U' Refused by Court

In New York supreme court last Friday Justice Samuel I. Rosenman denied a motion for a peremptory writ of mandamus to permit the Murita Trading Corporation to inspect the books and records of Universal Picture Corporation, Inc., "to determine the advisability of instituting proceedings for the dissolution of the corporation." Justice Rosenman said, however, that the inspection would be granted if Murita could prove at trial that it is a stockholder under the Delaware law and that it is acting in good faith.

The petitioners hold 160 shares of eight per cent first preferred stock of Universal which was purchased in July, 1936, and claims to represent 10 per cent of the outstanding first preferred stock. Universal Pictures, which produces short subjects, comedies and newsreels, is a Delaware Corporation and a subsidiary of the Universal Corporation, also chartered in the same state.

Justice Rosenman said that "an inspection will not be granted to facilitate speculative schemes or gratify idle curiosity." It was pointed out that no charges of mismanagement had been made.

Willard S. McKay, vice-president and general counsel for Universal, said that an effort had been made by the petitioner to have its stock purchased at the call price of $110 plus accrued dividends, but that the offer had been refused. He also said that access to records had never been requested and that all figures were available in statements filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission and the Curb Exchange.

Murita contended that losses from November, 1929 to April 30, 1937, totaled $6,680,418 and that dissolution might be necessary to prevent impairment of the capital stock. The petitioner questioned the employment contracts of J. Cheever Cowdin, chairman of the Board, for $1,750 weekly for five years; R. H. Cochrane, president, at $1,750 weekly for five years; Charles R. Rogers, vice-president, at $2,000 weekly for five years, and Mr. McKay at a weekly salary starting at $700 and later to be increased to $1,000.

Mr. Cochrane said in an affidavit that Universal is "about to turn the corner and that the next few months will see Universal on a profit making basis." He also observed the new management which purchased Carl Laemmle's interest in April, 1936, inherited the losses.

NBC Buys Property for New Hollywood Studios

The National Broadcasting Company revealed this week the purchase by the company of two city blocks at Sunset Boulevard and Vine Street in Hollywood for the site of NBC's new broadcasting studio. The property, comprising five acres, is the site of the original Famous Players-Lasky lot.

As now planned, the new studios will provide only for the immediate needs of NBC in Hollywood.

The studios will be patterned after the film stage unit plan. Four large individual studios each seating several hundred persons and four other studios without audience accommodations are in the plans.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Very Good Eddie

On the fallish evening of October 28th in the commodious Fiesta Room of the swankish Ambassador Hotel on starchy Wilshire Boulevard, some 600 or more marquee representatives of screen, stage, radio state and municipality, society, charity, journalism and politics, broke bread and cracked jokes with Eddie Cantor in celebration of his 25th anniversary before the footlights, behind the microphone, upon the screen and, said the speakers, within the hearts of his countrymen.

The affair was large and ceremonious, even for Hollywood, and—especially for Hollywood—sincere, for most of those present deported and bespoke themselves in a manner suggesting that they would have been as glad to come if the bill had not been paid in advance and "Ali Baba Comes to Town" were not to open in 53 cities the morning after. It had, and it was, as listeners-in upon the CBS broadcast were able to deduce from passing mention of both circumstances by various speakers, but no secret had been made of these matters.

No secret was made, either, of guests' and speakers' esteem for the banjo-eyed comedian. Georgie Jessel, taking over from Darryl Zanuck as toastmaster, was in better than his usual after-dinner form, seemingly because he meant what he said this time. Dr. A. H. Giannani's earnest remarks touched a mainspring of the Cantor popularity when he remarked that his words had never raised the cry of censorship. Louis B. Mayer eulogized him as a member of the industry and Governor F. Merriam praised him as a citizen of California and for his persistence in adding to the population thereof.

Benny Steals Show

It was Jack Benny, though, who paid the troupers' tribute, at the close of a solo routine that stole the show as decisively as his Jello program has stolen Sunday evening. The gelatine vendor had ribbed his serious predecessors at the microphone, the toastmaster, the guest of honor and all hands, to a point where proceedings were in sore danger of turning into a Benny party by popular acclaim, when he finished off with the assertion that his gibes derived their sparkle from the brilliance of his target. A roomful of the generation's most conspicuous talent relished that even above his story about trying to buy a 100-year-old vase in Mr. Cantor's antique shop and wheedling the merchant down, after prolonged bargaining, to settling for 50 years.

The guest of honor had tears in his voice as he concluded the speeches.

After that there was a vaudeville show—Sophie Tucker, Bob Burns, Bill Robinson, Edgar Bergen, Jimmy Durante, Deanna Durbin, Judy Garland, Igor Gorin and others—and after that there was slow exit through long corridors lined with gaping idolators to the carriage ramp, where the top executive of a top studio amused immensely, involuntarily, by trying to bribe the uniformed but sensitive "boy" several years his senior to bring up his Rolls ahead of turn and being left, storming, to roar his discomfiture for the edification of the laity.

"SUIT CLUBS" HELD ILLEGAL IN IOWA

In defense of charges that the operation of "suit clubs" is illegal, two Des Moines clothing stores contended the operation of the clubs was similar to that of chance games in theatres and therefore should be ruled lawful.

But Loy Ladd, district court judge in Des Moines, refused to uphold the contention, and convictions were recorded. The defendants plan to appeal to the state supreme court which recently ruled "Bank Night" legal in theatres.

Finish 12, Start 7

They didn't do much about this business of new production during the waning days of October. Only seven pictures started. Of the group, it is likely that only one will be regarded with considerable interest. The others appear to be that sort of grist that keeps the wheels turning. It was different on the other side of the ledger. There the records show that twelve productions were completed. Several of these could not be considered ordinary films.

When the whole list of starters is considered, it hardly would be debatable that "Bluebeard's Eighth Wife," Paramount, is the most important. Gary Cooper is "Bluebeard" and it must be that Claudette Colbert is the eighth wife, inasmuch as at the moment she is the only feminine player listed. However, in the early days of shooting Edward Everett Horton, Luis Alberni, David Niven and William Brisbane were also among those present who hearkened to director Ernst Lubitsch's calls.

Columbia Starts Two

Columbia started two pictures. In "The Night Before," which Harry Lachman is directing, will be seen Richard Arlen, Mary Astor, Lionel Stander, Virginia Dale, Thurston Hall, Marjorie Gateson and Arthur Loft. The cast for "Singing Rangers" lists Charles Starrett, Iris Meredith, Dick Curtis, Donald Grayson, Art Mix and Ed LeSaint. Sam Nelson is directing.

"Thank You, Mr. Moto" started at 20th Century-Fox. With Norman Foster directing, it will present Peter Lorre, John Carradine, Thomas Beck, Jayne Regan, Pauline Frederick and Philip Ahn.

RKO-Radio's contribution to the new work is "Lights Out," which will feature Lee Tracy, Joan Woodbury and Lee Patrick under Lew Landers' direction.

With Tom Keene and Beryl Wallace in the leading roles, Monogram started "Romance of the Rockies." R. N. Bradbury is both producing and directing.

RKO Completes 4

RKO-Radio cut a fulsome swath in its active shooting schedule. Four, half the number of films it had in production, were completed. Included was Fred Astaire's solo picture, "A Damsel in Distress," in which he is supported by Joan Fontaine, Gracie Allen and George Burns, Ray Noble and Reginald Gardiner.

Finished also was "Hitting a New High," which will present Lily Pons, Jack Oakie, John Howard, Eric Blore, Edward Everett Horton, Eduardo Cianelli and Marek Windheim. Raoul Walsh directed.

The third completed RKO-Radio production "She's Got That Swing," again teams Gene Raymond and Ann Sothern and Victor Moore and Helen Broderick.

The last of the quartet. "Taking the Town," has Fred Stone, Berton Churchill, Paul Guilfoyle, Gordon Jones and Dorothy Moore.

Warner completed three productions. "Gold Is Where You Find It" (in color) features George Brent, Olivia de Havilland and Claude Rains, with Margaret Lindsay, Tim Holt, Jr., Russell Simpson, John Litel, George Hayes, Marcia Ralston, Willie Best and Barton MacLane.

Listed in the cast of "Blondes at Work," which Frank McDonald directed, are Glenda Farrell, Barton MacLane, Tom Kennedy, Ralph Sanford, Tommy Jackson, Frank Shannon, Rosella Tone, Donald Briggs, John Ridgely, Kenneth Harlan, George Guhl, Joe Cunningham, Betty Compson and Carole Landis.

"Highway Pirates" will offer Beverly Roberts, Dick Purcell, Gloria Blondel, and Charles Roy.

Republic Finishes Two

Two pictures were finished at Republic. In "The Lady Misbehaves" are Sally Eilers, Neil Hamilton, Joseph Schildkraut, George Ernest, Marcie Mae Jones, Robert Greig, Mary Gordon and Laurette Puck. Lloyd Corrigan directed. "News Is in the Air" will feature Wallace Ford, June Travis, Arthur Lake and Sid Saylor. Nick Grinde directed.

For Paramount Cecil B. DeMille completed his latest lesson in history and romance, "The Buccaneer." The best known names in the lengthy cast are Fredric March, Franciska Gaal, Akim Tamiroff, Margot Grahame, Walter Brennan, Anthony Quinn, Ian Keith, Douglas Dumbrille, Fred Kohler, Sr., Robert Barratt, Hugh Sothern, John Rogers, Stanley Andrews, Beulah Bondi, Spring Byington and Montagu Love.

At Twentieth Century-Fox, "Charlie Chan at Monte Carlo" not only was finished but announced as a Halloween preview. Warner Oland, Keye Luke, Virginia Field, Harold Huber, Robert Kent, Sidney Blackmer, Kan Linaker, Edward Raquello and George Lynn worked in it under Eugene Forde's direction.

"You're a Sweetheart" wound up at Universal. Directed by Dave Butler, it will feature Alice Faye and George Murphy with Charles Winninger, Andy Devine, Ken Murray and his stooge, Oswald, Harry Stockwell, Diamond Brothers, Casper Reardon and Marian and Irma.

Exhibitors Vote to End "Boycott" in Philadelphia

The battle waged against Paramount by the United Motion Picture Theatre Owners in eastern Pennsylvania for the last four months came to a peaceful conclusion Wednesday when 100 exhibitors gathered in Philadelphia and unanimously voted to declare their "buyers' strike" settled.

The vote was taken after a one week armistice of the fight over Paramount's reputed failure to deliver six pictures, "High, Wide and Handsome," "Souls at Sea," and four others, which the exhibitors claimed were listed in the 1936-37 contracts. During the armistice period a number of exhibitors discussed new deals with Paramount, in accordance with the settlement terms, and, it is understood, all in this group are satisfied that they can reach satisfactory agreements.

During the discussion at Wednesday's session, several objections were raised from the floor and, as a result, a conciliation committee of 12 was formed to hold three meetings next week to hear all complaints. Four members of the committee will sit at each of the meetings which will be held Monday, Wednesday and Friday. If any complaint is deemed justified, the committee will take the matter up with Paramount directly.

As a guard against any future controversies reaching the stage that the "strike" did, David Barrist, chairman of the organization's "war board" proposed continuation of the board. At the same time he offered his resignation from the board, but it was not accepted.

The motion to settle the dispute which has involved court proceedings, was made by William Butler and seconded by Harry Pearlman.

With the Philadelphia dispute settled, Paramount now is expected to turn its attention to similar battles being waged in other territories.

Settlement terms for the exhibitors' "strike" in the Northwest were to be discussed with leaders of the movement by Charles M. Reagan, Paramount western division manager, in Minneapolis at the end of the week.

Mr. Reagan declined to make any statement until after he had conferred with W. A. Steffes, president of Northwest Allied.

Under the settlement with the Philadelphia exhibitors Paramount agrees not to demand the right to inspect the books of theatres where pictures are played on percentage. A cancellation privilege will be accorded in clearing up unplayed pictures on last season's contracts, but the terms of these arrangements will be handled with exhibitors individually.

New contracts also will be negotiated on an individual basis and the company will not adhere to a fixed sales policy. New deals may be either on a flat rental or a percentage basis.

Affidavits in Indianapolis

Coincident with the Philadelphia settlement, Paramount filed affidavits in federal court, Indianapolis, in connection with a suit instituted by Gary Theatre Company for a mandatory injunction compelling delivery of 10 pictures which, the complainant charged, were listed in last season's contract.

Paramount contended the pictures in dispute were not available and that production delays in making the pictures cost the company more than $1,500,000. The affidavits were signed by Russell Holman, Paramount eastern production head; Allen Usher, Chicago district sales manager; Jules Rubens, head of Great States Theatres, and E. J. Barnard, Paramount's Indianapolis manager.

Seek Same Terms

Members of the Independent Theatres Protective Association of Wisconsin and Upper Michigan will seek the same terms as given Philadelphia exhibitors, it was decided this week at the organization's convention at Hotel Schroeder, Milwaukee.

The group also agreed that no current Paramount product will be purchased by members unless the Philadelphia plan is made available.

Other action taken included the endorsement of the suggestion of Abram F. Meyers, chairman of the board and general counsel of Allied States Association, calling for federal legislation in the form of a "Guffey Act."

The exhibitors went on record as being opposed to producer sponsored radio programs. The drafting of plans for a revision of the association's constitution was postponed until the next convention, between January 10th and 20th.

Alger's Report Is Due Nov. 15

Developments this week in RKO Radio activities were:

1. Special Master George W. Alger will not present his tentative report on the reorganization plan until November 15th;

2. Samuel J. Briskin resigned as production chief and Leo Spitz, president, who is now on the coast, assumed charge of the studio.

3. Selznick International's long negotiated deal with the company was reported to have collapsed, and

4. Phil Reisman, foreign head, announced plans to circle the globe with the company's own offices.

The Alger report, which had been scheduled for last Thursday, was delayed because the company's consolidated earnings statement for the first nine months of the year, which is expected to have an important bearing on the special master's report, was not made available until the day the report was scheduled.

The financial report, subsequently released, appears on page 21. It shows a consolidated net profit of $1,543,511 after all charges.

The expected resignation of Samuel J. Briskin as vice president in charge of production in Hollywood, came Wednesday with official announcement from RKO's home office in New York, which added that Mr. Briskin would remain only until Leo Spitz, president, and now in temporary charge, is prepared to take over actual operations, pending selection of a successor.

Mr. Briskin will receive from RKO somewhere between $100,000 and $150,000 as a settlement figure under the provisions of his pro tem agreement, it was reported.

The collapse of the deal by which Selznick International would merge with RKO was reported caused by "the inability of RKO to meet the demands of Selznick International." The report followed a meeting of officials of the two companies including Floyd Odlum, of RKO, John Whitney, chairman of the S-I board of directors, David O. Selznick and John Wharton, legal counsel and comtproller of S-I.

In announcing his plans to circle the globe Mr. Reisman said that seven new foreign branches had been opened recently and four more are contemplated. Indicating that few situations remain open, Mr. Reisman said that that as soon as local conditions warrant the company will establish its own offices in these spots.

Court Approves Two Settlements For $2,150,000

Formal approval of the settlement of two suits brought against former former officers, directors and associates of Paramount by the trustees in reorganization was granted Wednesday by Alfred C. Coxe, judge of the United States district court in New York.

The defendants, who originally were sued for approximately $12,500,000 for alleged misfeasance and malfeasance, will pay $2,150,000 in cash and notes, under the terms of the settlement.

The court's approval of the settlement formally closes the reorganization proceedings of the company as the litigation was the only matter over which the court and Charles D. Hilles, Paramount trustee, retained jurisdiction when the company's reorganization plan was approved in June, 1935.

The law firm, Root, Clark, Buckner & Ballantine, counsel for the trustee, was granted a final allowance of $150,000 for service in connection with the settlement. A petition for $215,000 has been filed, but Paramount, through its counsel, Thomas D. Thacher, recommended $150,000. On Mr. Hilles' petition for a final fee of $7,500, Mr. Thacher recommended payment of $2,500, but the court allowed $5,000.

The bulk of the settlement amount is payable to Paramount in cash immediately. Approximately $650,000 is payable in one to 10-year notes.

Among the defendants were Adolph Zukor, Eugene J. Zukor, Samuel Katz, Jesse L. Lasky and Jules W. Brulatour.

Schenck Delays Stock Purchase

A plan to purchase the Twentieth Century-Fox stock held by the Chase National Bank has been postponed indefinitely because of the current stock market situation, Joseph M. Schenck, chairman of the film company's board of directors, announced in New York this week.

Mr. Schenck also said he is not concerned over a suit filed by L. Tally and the Corbar Corporation, against Fox West Coast, a subsidiary of National Theatres which, in turn, is a subsidiary of Twentieth Century-Fox. The complaints charge lessors lost millions of dollars through the disaffirming of leases in reorganizing FWC. Mr. Tally is asking $421,510 and the Corbar company, $419,500.

A discussion on Twentieth Century-Fox's British production plans was held by the company's board this week, Mr. Schenck said, adding that no decision was reached. He declared he was in favor of producing 10 pictures a year in England.

At present, New World, a subsidiary, is producing four to five features a year in England.

Charlie Chan At Monte Carlo

Mystery Melodrama

For entertainment and commercial purposes this latest episode in the career of "Charlie Chan" offers several combinations that should excite the interest of patrons and exhibitors. First is the story, in which are combined melodrama, mystery, comedy, a thin but definite trace of love interest, suspense and action.

Second is the cast. Warner Oland and Keye Luke are featured. Virginia Field, Sidney Blackmer, Harold Huber and Robert Kent, who have been seen in other numbers, again are presented. A promising newcomer, Edward Raquello, is introduced.

Third is production quality, not only in superior settings and locales, but also in a combination of skillful story creation by Robert Ellis and Helen Logan and screen transcription by Charles Belden and Jerry Cady, plus showmanship direction by Eugene Forde.

The fourth component is novelty. This has been so thoughtfully incorporated that "Charlie Chan at Monte Carlo" might just as well have been the first, instead of the fifteenth or sixteenth, of the series. Some hint of the novelty may be gained from the information that about one-third of the dialogue is in French, but it has been so intelligently included that it does not make understanding of the plot or its development difficult.

From the pleasures of a Monte Carlo holiday, "Chan" and "Lee" are tossed into a murder-robbery mystery. Bonds have been stolen, a man killed, several persons are implicated and many lives are tangled up. Thus birth is given to the spirit of melodrama and its entertainment twin, comedy. "Chan" and "Karnoff," French and sputtering Monte Carlo police chief, are stumped. Lee's high school understanding of French, plus his eagerness to be of assistance, are a hindrance rather than a help in resolving the mystery. But shrewd "Charlie" applies a bit of psychology.

As melodramatic suspense holds, but with the importance of tension-easing comedy contrast recognized, he brings the story to a surprise conclusion in which the culprit is accidentally killed.

Previewed in the Uptown theatre, Los Angeles. The Sunday night audience, celebrating Hallowe'en, greeted the announcement with a burst of applause. For the ensuing 65 minutes, its attention remained on the picture. Utilization of French dialogue caused a visible impact and further served to concentrate attention. Alert for anything that Warner Oland, Keye Luke or Harold Huber might say or do, the patrons also were attentive to the actions of Edward Raquello, Virginia Field, Kay Linaker, Robert Kent, Sidney Blackmer and George Lynn. The low comedy contributions of Louis Mercier, driver of a decrepit Paris taxi, also added to their enjoyment. Lobby comment indicated that the gathering thought this the best of all "Chan's" to date.—Gus McCarthy.

Murder in Greenwich Village

Mild Mystery

Formerly called "Park Avenue Dame," the production presents in the change of title and locality as baffling a problem as the murders in the story. The nearest thing to an artist's canvas is a commercial photographer's tripod.

The two crimes are presented in an off-stage manner. Clues are meager and sketchily detailed while the suspects are few and patently unsuspicious. Of course, the murderer is the least suspected person and, in the case of this film, practically a stranger to the audience.

Much effort was given to endowing the script with gay and witty dialogue for sequences wherein the romantic leads bat back and forth cutely barbed retorts.

As the energetic young couple, Fay Wray and Richard Arlen keep things moving. The comedy moments of Raymond Walburn as an alcoholic senator and Gene Morgan as the customary dumb detective stand out. Wyn Cahoon, Scott Colton, Thurston Hall and Marc Lawrence figure prominently in the supporting cast.

"Steve Jackson," a commercial photographer, saves "Kay Cabot" from an incriminating misadventure, but they are involved in the murder of the man from whom "Kay" was fleeing at the time she ran into "Jackson." Circumstances bring the couple into such close contact that they as well as the audience soon realize that love has bloomed from their verbal battlings.

Seen at the Rialto theatre, New York, where a crowded pre-election evening audience showed a more marked response to the film's comic material than to the mystery element.

Bulldog Drummond's Revenge

(Paramount)

Melodrama

The same crew which accounted for "Bulldog Drummond Comes Back" are very much in evidence in "Bulldog Drummond's Revenge." It is adapted from H. C. McNiele's "The Return of Bulldog Drummond," as "Bulldog Drummond Comes Back" was adapted from his "Female of the Species." Again Edward T. Loew prepared the screen play and again Louis King directed. Further carrying out the association, John Barrymore, Louise Campbell, John Howard, E. E. Clive and Reginald Denny, all bearing the same screen identities, are again the featured principals.

"Bulldog" wants to marry "Phyllis," but Scotland Yard's ace detective, "Colonel Neilson," learns that someone is going to steal a munitions secret. "Phyllis" must wait, but while "Tenny" and "Algy" are given opportunity to exercise their comedy talents to take some of the tension off the melodrama, "Bulldog" teams up with the worried "Neilson." Follows a chase through fogbound London, aboard a train, over the Channel to Paris, during which all the mechanics that accent menace and adventure are utilized. The quarry, suavely sinister "Nogais," is rounded up in Paris, the secret formula returned.

Previewed in the Tower theatre, Compton, Cal., where the other "Bulldog" also was first shown. The audience gave no indication that it would be standing in line waiting for the next one to come along.—G. M.

A Girl with Ideas

Comedy

Showmen who play up the names of Wendy Barrie, Walter Pidgeon, Kent Taylor, Dorothea Kent and George Barbier for what they are worth, and wax informative and adjectival in behalf of "A Girl with Ideas" will have emphatically on their side the reaction of a preview audience by no means handpicked. It will not be the easiest kind of exploitation campaign to manage, but the picture is of a kind to prompt outlay of the effort required.

"ROSALIE" ZIEGFELDIAN

A DECADE ago the operetta "Rosalie," as presented by Florenz Ziegfeld, was "packing them in" along Broadway. Ziegfeld is gone, but the man who helped write and produce that show, William Anthony McGuire, now producing MGM's cinematic version of it, is carrying on in Hollywood with one intent, that the Ziegfeld tradition of picturesque and spectacular beauty shall endure.

Only in name and in some traces of thematic content, however, will the picture conception of "Rosalie" bear close resemblance to the original.

"The Great Ziegfeld"—and there is a very definite connection between that and this—made a great impression, yet "Rosalie" is being produced on such a scale that comparison with the stage show is out of the question.

Since the Ziegfeld-McGuire association has been recalled, it might be well to remember other associations. The plot may be described tersely. It's the love story of a West Point cadet and the princess of the mythical Balkan kingdom, Romanza, who went to Vassar. More briefly, it is operetta. William S. Van Dyke, who directed "The Great Ziegfeld," is directing "Rosalie." Merrill Pye, who created the picturesque "A Pretty Girl Is Like a Melody" episode in that picture, designed the equally spectacular Romanza sequence.

The leading players are Nelson Eddy, whose appearances in "Naughty Marietta" and "Rose Marie" made him a star after several years spent in the limbo of picturedom, and Eleanor Powell, of "Broadway Melody" repute. Ray Bolger, Frank Morgan, Virginia Grey and Reginald Owen, who were part and parcel of "Ziegfeld," again will be presented. Other names are Edna May Oliver ("Romeo and Juliet"), Clay Clement, Janet Beecher, George Zucco, Tom Rutherford and Billy Gilbert.

The supplementary dances and evolutions were arranged by Albertina Rasch and Dave Gould, Academy Award winner. The lyrics and music of new numbers are credited to Cole Porter.

Yet, while full credit is accorded to abilities and accomplishments of individuals, the picture, after all, is the thing. Thus, a serious consideration of the accompanying illustrations is recommended. Sometimes, as everybody knows, money has been spent unwisely, and talent has been squandered. We who have watched the picture in work for weeks are familiar, to an extent, with the possibilities of "Rosalie" as entertainment; we are enthusiastic about its exploitation potentialities and its eventual commercial success. We know that Bill McGuire and Bill Van Dyke don't like to slip on banana peels. We feel quite sure that "Rosalie" will be a desirable decoration to exhibition programs subsequently to December 25, 1937.

end newspaper stories, and it wouldn't have to be a newspaper story to be as fast and funny as it is.

It is the first picture directed by S. Sylvan Simon. Some of the more veteran troupers appearing in it were inclined to scoff at his methods of procedure in the making of the film but experienced a swift change of heart for the better when press and public let go roar after roar of laughter as the picture unreeled.

Specific copy may mention performances of the first three name players as their best and Dorothea Kent's as revealing talent and a personality audiences will want to see more of. On the adjectival side, all the words except those denoting bulk, magnitude and expense are available for use. The production, an Edmund Grainger work, falls among the growing number of films fabricated with greater pains and intelligence than budgets.

The story, a little complex for brief synopsis and strong in that complexity, is about a wealthy girl who sues a publisher for libel and takes over his newspaper in satisfaction of a judgment, whereupon he strives by divers and devious devices to depress its value, so that he can buy it back cheaply, while the young woman's unsuspected editorial sagacity runs the property into steadily mounting earnings. He and the managing editor, with whom he seeks to conspire at the new owner's expense, both fall in love with her, and the picture ends with the romantic competition a draw.

The Barrier

(Paramount-Sherman)

Alaskan Melodrama

There are almost as many approaches to exploitation of "The Barrier" as there are types of audiences, all of them susceptible, according to booksales records, to the Rex Beach appeal. Possibly the most direct and all-purpose route is by way of the novel itself, a fiction of fabulous popularity and ever-green memory. Then there is the fact that this is a wholly modern but not modernized picturization of the story, with a notable cast and all else thus implied.

For use in straight marquee billing are, outstandingly, the names of Leo Carrillo, Otto Kruger, Jean Parker, Robert Barrat, Andy Clyde and James Ellison. Open-stop adjectives may be applied with complete safety to their performances of the principal Beach characters.

In description of the picture, as to kind, the original Beach terminology—"red-blooded," "he-man," "primitive," elemental" and so forth—is as suitable for use as any that has been improvised in the years since these phrases worked their magic upon the reading public. The names of Harry Sherman as producer and Leslie Selander as director would inform the customers that the project has been dealt with by masters of the out-of-doors subject matter so expertly treated by the author.

The story, it will be recalled, is about "Necia," supposed half-breed daughter of "John Gale," squaw-man storekeeper in an Alaskan outpost, whose mixed blood gives pause to the romantically attracted "Lieutenant Burrell." Efforts of "Poleon Doret," trapper, "Stark," a gambler and her real father, and "No Creek Lee," prospector, to bring their halted romance to happy conclusion by proving the girl is white, result in complications marked by death and bloodshed before the final satisfactory fadeout.

Bernhard Schubert wrote the screen play, Jack Stern and Harry Tobias the two songs worked into quiet stretches of the story. Cinematographer George Barnes achieved sensationally effective results in bringing the north country background to the screen.

Portia On Trial

(Republic)

Woman Versus Man

Quite some time has elapsed since a legitimate "sleeper" picture last came along. A "sleeper" usually is a film about which little has been heard and of which little is expected. Generally, when they appear and quality is the term applicable to the story content, individual and group acting, production merit and caliber of direction, they prompt the question, "How long has this been going on?" Later, those who for any number of diverse reasons see the show invariably become enthusiastic and are quite insistent that their friends likewise go to see it.

"Portia On Trial" comes within that category. On the surface there doesn't seem to be much to recommend it. The title suggests that the story has something to do with a woman up before the bar of justice on a criminal charge. None of the personalities featured is found listed among top flight screen names. But all this on-the-surface stuff is beside the point.

Evidences of a sincere attempt to make a good show crop out in practically every sequence. "Portia" is a sympathetic, emotion-stirring story of a woman lawyer. It is mainly serious, but there is comedy to lessen the tension. The meager suggestion of man-woman love interest is hardly a part of the plot premise. But the manner in which Samuel Ornitz transcribed Faith Baldwin's story and the way in which Edward E. Paramore, Jr., dramatized and contributed added dialogue to it, plus the quality of performances by Frieda Inescort, Clarence Kolb, Heather Angel, Ruth Donnelly, Barbara Pepper, Neil Hamilton, Walter Abel, John Kelly and George Cooper, together with the direction of George Nicholls, Jr., establish it primarily as a strong picture for women and one that should engage the attention of any mature audience.

"Richard Condon" becomes aware that the lawyer, "Portia Merriman," is his mother, that "John Condon," newspaper-political czar, never wanted such a thing to happen, and that "Richard's" father, "Earle Condon," is planning to marry "Elizabeth Manners." But, forced by "John," "Earle" double-crosses "Elizabeth" and she murders him. Prevailed upon by secretary "Jane," who knows all the details of "Portia's" relationship to the "Condons," she assumes the girl's defense. She permits "Elizabeth" to testify that her deed was premeditated. Her purpose is to get "John Condon" on the stand. Follows one of the finest staged courtroom scenes this reporter has ever seen, as "Portia" backtracks over her own life and forces "Condon" to admit that it was only a stroke of Fate, years ago, that prevented her ("Portia") from standing trial for "Earle's" murder. As "Condon" confesses that his pride forced an annulment which deprived "Richard" of mother love, "Elizabeth" is acquitted on the grounds of justifiable homicide and the boy is reunited with his mother.

Previewed in Warners' Beverly theatre, Hollywood. Only rarely has it been noted that a picture held such a grip on its auditors. There was not one walkout, and the audience was composed entirely of adults. Except for a few bursts of applause which interrupted continuity, it sat in hushed silence.—G.M.

Tex Rides with the Boy Scouts

(Grand National)

Tex Becomes a Boy Scout

The title of this latest Tex Ritter western invites the readiest amount of audience response from that international organization of youth to whom the production is dedicated. Opening with newsreel scenes of the Scout Jamboree held in Washington, the early footage describes and extolls the aims and work of the boy groups. When the film does get into the main part of the plot, the adventures of a local troop of Scouts figure in the narrative.

As far as the plot action, in the light of other Ritter features, the pace is almost pedestrian. It is only in the final reel that things begin to move.

Tex is his usual singing, riding, unassuming self. The youngster Tommy Bupp plays the part of a Chief Scout with an appealing naturalness. Snub Pollard and Horace Murphy as Tex's pals provide the comedy moments, while Marjorie Reynolds takes care of what there is of a romantic angle.

When Tex comes across a mysterious mining camp, he suspects it's the hideout for a gang of railroad robbers. With the comic cooperation of his partners, Ritter begins to do a piece of private sleuthing. When "Stubby" brings a shirt to the laundry he discovers that the Chinese laundryman is being used as a "fence" for the stolen gold. Further investigations reveal that one "Stark" is the leader. This discovery offers a minor complication in Tex's romance with "Norma," who is innocently employed by the chief gangster. When the girl's brother "Buzzy" comes upon some real clues, he is shot, and then things begin to pop. Organizing a posse of Boy Scouts and townsfolk, Ritter

The Love Life of a Gorilla

(Jewel)

Catchpenny Sensationalism

Breathes there an exhibitor with conscience so dead—well, if such there be, he'll get mats of the ads that have been running in Los Angeles newspapers recently and serve notice on his public, as Tally's Criterion has served it, that this hodge-podge of cuttings and splicings purports to depict the findings of various expeditions into darkest Africa, including that of one Col. Hubert Winstead, F.A.A., and that these findings include indications that native women and gorillas get along pretty happily together. There is even a shot of a child at its mother's breast, during exhibition of which the narrator suggests that the audience scan the child's features and draw its own conclusions. That is, by the way, but one of the shots showing the maternal breast, singularly and plurally, which may be one of the reasons why the picture does not carry a Production Code seal.

In its earlier footage the picture is a badly photographed and substantially routine exploration of the jungle country. When time comes to make good on the sensational advertising copy which would appear to be the justification, if that's the word, for the picture, camera facility is employed to make it seem that native women, one of whom it is a tribal custom to offer to the gorillas annually for mating purposes, live their lives contentedly under the kindly ministrations of giant gorillas. From here on the picture gives signs of efforts to make it appear controversial, scientifically, eugenically, biologically and so on. The efforts aren't very successful.

Previewed at Tally's Criterion theatre, Los Angeles, where the kind of persons who respond to the kind of advertising used for this kind of picture sat, and looked and saw something like they expected to see, maintaining the silence that persons like that always maintain in cases like that.—VANCE KING.

Criminals of the Air

Melodrama

A story of a border patrolman tracking down a gang of smugglers, "Criminals of the Air" winds itself up as it goes along and races to an exciting climax.

The cast is composed of comparative newcomers to the screen. Charles Quigley plays the pilot and Rosalind Keith the girl reporter.

A member of the border patrol is commissioned to track down a gang who for some time have been smuggling aliens across the Mexican border. For this purpose the operative obtains a position as pilot on an airplane used to transport couples to Mexico to be married.

A girl newspaper reporter, who had been trying to obtain a special story, becomes suspicious of the actions of the pilot. She hides in the plane as the plane leaves with a couple. They are members of the gang and force the pilot to land at the gang's hideout. The reporter helps the pilot get away with the gang in pursuit.

Most of the action comes when the criminals' plane overtakes the honeymoon ship and fires on it. Out of the clouds drop three border patrol planes who disable the gang's craft. A patrol plane is dispatched to intercept the others fleeing in a car. The plane, with machine guns blazing, wrecks the car.

Reviewed at the Central theatre, New York. An early afternoon audience, composed mostly of men, viewed the picture in silence.—PAUL C. MOONEY, JR.

Produced and distributed by Columbia. Directed by C. C. Coleman, Jr. Screen play, Owen Francis. Story, Jack Cooper. Photography, George Meehan. Film editor, Dick Fantl. Musical director, Morris Stoloff. P. C. A. certificate No. 3053. Running time, 61 minutes. Release date, April 30, 1937. General audience classification.

Paradise for Two

(New World-20th Century-Fox)

Romantic Melodrama

Patricia Ellis balances the typically British Jack Hulbert in this ingeniously plotted and amusingly developed farce-comedy story with musical additions. Song and dance and stage spectacle as a climax are, with the plot, compensation for any difficulties which parts of the dialogue may offer to American audiences.

A chorus girl, for personal publicity, has exploited an imaginary conquest of a millionaire playboy. When the rich young man comes around to protest she mistakes him for a reporter. The show being in danger of crashing, she persuades him to impersonate her millionaire lover (himself) in order to impress the producer. It ends with the rich young man backing the show and falling in love with her.

The material is presented with sparkle and with a wealth of good musical material, dancing, and comedy. Miss Ellis sings "Kiss Me Good-night" very fetchingly.

Viewed at a Piccadilly theatre trade show in London. The audience received it very warmly.—B. A.

Effective Contrast

Pointing the question whether the audience desires to pursue its sports amid crowded surroundings or in solitude, Ted Husing offers in a narrative written by Grantland Rice, and sounding more doggerel than poetic, some striking shots to illustrate opposite modes of recreation. An urban thoroughfare with its speed and congestion is placed in juxtaposition to lonely mountain climbing. Swimming off a city dock is followed by sports in a beautiful and secluded lake. A crowded fishing boat loaded down with metropolitan fishermen is contrasted with a lone angler somewhere far up a hill stream. Skillfully screened with an expert eye for compelling comparisons, the subject should hold some pleasant entertainment for the general audience whatever the sport preference may be. Running time, 10 minutes.

Oswald Cartoons

Love comes to Oswald's pooch, Doxie. In the lot of the unappreciated swain, the canine moons around with an appropriately hangdog expression. His efforts to win favorable notice from his beloved are of no avail. Finally, the payoff, along with a cure for his romantic aspirations, comes for the dog when he learns that the lady of his yearnings is a matron with a long line of mongrel offspring. Fairly amusing, it perhaps will find favor with the none too discriminating cartoon fancier.—Running time, eight minutes.

The Dancing Bear

Cartoon

A rather slow paced cartoon not overly burdened with comedy, in fact leaning to the anemic side, features farmer Al Falfa and the dancing bear. The bear, who is to the violin player as the monkey to an organ grinder, invariably goes into a dance when music is played. While his master sleeps the bear escapes and comes upon Al Falfa. Follows a chase through the house, with the farmer avoiding the bear by means of victrola, saxophone and player piano.—Running time, 6½ mnutes.

Amusing

A cute and chubby youngster, aided by the antics of a pair of chimpanzees as foils, makes this subject a natural bit of minor humor. In the style of the candid camera technique, the little fellow is seen as a miniature Tarzan on the loose from home. His encounter with the tricky chimps is detailed in a set of situations that hold genuine appeal for the general audience. That funny fellow, Peter Smith, supplies wise remarks.—Running time, nine minutes.

The magic trick of weaving feminine headwear from the common fiber of tropical trees provides the interesting opening for the latest number from this Pictorial group. Then the patron is transported in a lightning change to the rugged northern wilds of Oregon for a huckleberry harvest. A final sequence is devoted to the eternal existence of steel, with the process of recasting into scrap metal. The diversity of the items and the breezy pace at which they are presented should provide lively and informative screen moments.—Running time, 10 minutes.

ONE OUT OF FOUR THEATRES OPEN IN CHINA; FEW RAZED BY SHELLS

Shanghai's First - Runs Giving Three Shows a Day; One Theatre Used as Front Line Stronghold by Defenders

by J. P. KOEHLER
in Shanghai

The accompanying article by J. P. Koehler, Motion Picture Herald correspondent in Shanghai, received this week, was written in the harassed city on October 5th, long before the Japanese forces forced the Chinese to evacuate Chapei and Kiangwan and withdraw to the socalled Chang Kai-Shek line, intensifying the danger to the International Settlement.

Certainly early reports that Shanghai's theatres were practically destroyed or abandoned, as in Motion Picture Herald issue of August 21st, were decidedly exaggerated.

[The item consisted of first reports of the effects of the Japanese invasion and included an expression by an official of the Chinese consulate in New York that all theatres in Shanghai were believed to have been closed. Since that date several eye-witness articles by Mr. Koehler, describing the actual situation, have appeared in the Herald. Apparently the August 21st issue had just reached Mr. Koehler when he wrote the account herewith, which was dated October 5th.]

Theatre Used by Troops

The truth is that the only theatres which were abruptly evacuated and left in the care of a house employee were such as were located in the districts north and east of the Soochow Creek in areas under Japanese military control. And even after August 14th, courageous managers returned to some of the houses under fire and removed valuable equipment. To date, it is known definitely that the more expensive part of machinery have been removed from the Ritz, Willies, Broadway and Eastern theatres, all subsequent runs, and that the Willies theatre is practically a total loss, even though the concrete projection booth is still intact. The Isis theatre is so deep in the worst center of street battles and shelling that it also has suffered damages that will require practically rebuilding. The Pantheon theatre has been a front line stronghold for Chinese troops and the center of bombing, fires and severe street battles for six weeks, which may mean little left of this house.

Beyond these facts no other important theatre damage has been reported in the Shanghai area. Shanghai's regular first-run houses now are going, with three full performances daily, and five subsequent runs also, while in the provinces it is definitely established that at least 70 to 75 cinemas are still in operation, either in part or whole with Chinese or foreign films, and can be served in some fashion from Shanghai exchanges, though it must be admitted that many of these are at a distance that makes exhibition slow and even doubtful at times; while in Hongkong there does not seem to be any general closure of cinemas though business is naturally affected by the surrounding upheaval.

Japanese Censorship

Estimates as to the percentage of losses in receipts are impossible at present. Even in normal times it is very difficult to obtain data on the theatre income owing to the refusal of exhibitors or distributors to disclose such information, except in rare cases. With 75 per cent of China's cinemas closed at present and with many of the remaining doing below normal business, perhaps it is not exaggerating to say that receipts are now about 30 per cent of normal, if not less. However, this cannot be actually ascertained and the statement may not hold good at all for some distributors who have been fortunate in releasing timely pictures in good locations, as against some others who have done practically no business at all. For instance, the 1,000-seat Cathay theatre in Shanghai (owned by the Cathay-Grand Company) is running to larger receipts at present than ever before, mainly due to its location in an area considered farthest from danger, and also because it has been releasing a series of pictures which "took hold" on the remaining public in Shanghai.

Predictions as to the future are many, but one can draw some conclusion from past experience of Japanese invasion. Previous to the Japanese seizure of Manchuria, Shanghai distribution offices served all that territory. Today it is all under Tokyo with local censorship rules, very similar to those effective in Japan. If Japan succeeds in forming the five northern provinces of Hopei, Charha, Shansi, Suiyan and Shantung into a separate state under Japanese advisors, similar conditions may be expected, with the revenue from Peiping, Tientsin, Tsingtao, Chefoo and other exhibition centers falling into Japanese hands and still further reducing the income of the Shanghai exchanges, which as yet have had no reduction in Chinese censor fees and other costs, which mount steadily with diminishing distribution. Furthermore, should Japan apply the restriction on Japanese controlled territory that she has applied in Japan, ending further importation of foreign films after Dec. 31, 1937, American distribution will suffer heavily in China also.

With the heavy costs of war to meet and pay, the Chinese government can be expected to increase taxes also, which would reflect itself in increased rentals and higher admission charges, with a proportionate reduction in attendance. These are facts that must be faced and met as they develop.

A considerable degree of foresight will have to be observed in dealing with future contracts and distribution possibilities. While business by no means is lost entirely, and while any "alarmist" attitude is totally out-of-place, careful consideration must be given and local general managers undoubtedly will be prepared to meet coming events.

Ask License Extensions

An appeal already has been made by the members of the Film Board of Trade (China) for an immediate extension of all licenses issued by the Chinese Government censors, such extension to be not less than the period covered by the hostilities and resumption of normal distribution. The results of this petition are not yet made public, but the movement shows that American distributors are alive to the situation and meeting it as quickly as possible.

Speaking of the Film Board of Trade (China), readers are probably not aware that, apart from the ordinary routine business of any film board, this board maintains a "Film Censor Service," which three years ago took over from several small commercial companies all the work of translation, printing and handling of members' films for Chinese Government censorship, and the charges for this work are less than those charged by the former private Chinese film service companies, while all profits are reinvested for the benefit of members.

Thus it has been possible to maintain a splendid projection room with modern installation. It recently purchased a "Moviola" with sound attachments, and a film mutilator. It maintains a newspaper theatre advertising checking system in about 40 of China's cities, which give a valuable daily check on members' and other films playing in these key locations. Many times this system has served a valuable purpose in detecting "bicycling" and other unauthorized playing. The service is approved by a firm of Public Accountants and Auditors, who have much of the members' work in their hands.

It must be remembered that all this has come at considerably less cost to members than they formerly paid to Chinese film service companies for censor service only, with the additional important item of having their films strictly under their own control at all times, a much improved and more rapid censorship service, and many other minor services. It is a very good example of cooperation service for the benefit of the American distributors in China. In like manner this service will prove a valuable aid in reestablishment of business and a quite possible deterrent to any abrupt governmental activities affecting the foreign film industry.

Business Carries On

As for Shanghai, the daily bombardment by heavy artillery, planes, anti-aircraft, the rattle of machine guns, scarcely half a mile north of the central district south of Soochow Creek, are being accepted in a matter-of-fact way by business in general. Naturally, there is concern over the situation, what with rising prices on all commodities, with delayed mails and, occasionally, narrow escapes from death or injury. But a glance at the business streets reveals little of the nearby destruction going on hourly, except some shop windows boarded up for protection against stray shells, and many of these boardings already have been removed. The number of motorcars parked at 9:00 A. M. in the downtown business district looks almost normal, and trams, busses and streets are filled with employees going to and from offices, while shoppers abound.

There is less flying of planes over the Central and Western districts, and this gives a feeling of at least better security from repetition of the bombing accidents of August 14th and August 23rd, which caused such havoc in three imporant centers and a panicky evacuation. Many foreign refugees are returning simply because they need their jobs or want to be with relatives who remained here, and many concerns are feeling the urgent need of the services of the experienced foreign women on their staffs.

IN THE CUTTING ROOM

Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm

Comedy with Music

That old expression, "everything new but the title," is applicable to this production. Probably its primary showmanship feature is the fact that it's a Shirley Temple picture, one which returns her to musical comedy after adventures in the more seriously toned "Wee Willie Winkie" and "Heidi." The plot has to do with the discovery and eventual adoption of "Rebecca Winstead," idol of the radio world. Threaded through that idea is the full allotment of romance, comedy, music, dancing and human interest. In it Shirley will sing several new songs prepared by Lew Pollack and Sidney Mitchell and Mack Gordon and Harry Revel, as well as some of her older ones, including "Animal Crackers" and "Good Ship Lollypop."

Listed among the principals who will support the star are Randolph Scott, borrowed from Paramount, who has been in half a dozen 20th Century-Fox films from "Professional Soldier" to "Life Begins at College"; Jack Haley, the surprise performer of "Wake Up and Live"; Phyllis Brooks, Helen Westley and William Demarest, and Slim Summerville and Bill Robinson, who have been with Miss Temple before. Others to be seen are Alan Dinehart, Paul Harvey, Mary McCarthy, the Raymond Scott Quintet, the Peters Sisters, Dixie Dunbar, Ruth Gillette, Paul Hurst and Sam Hayes.

While "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm" has been made twice before, the second time in 1932, when it was a Box Office Champion, the knowledge that this version, save for a similarity of locale, bears no resemblance to the original should give exhibitors some idea of the type of exploitation to follow. Names, headed by Miss Temple, and fresh story content seem to be the chief points to emphasize.

American Legion

Non-Historical

No history of the World War will be narrated in this production, nor will the story of the birth, development or accomplishments of the soldier-sailor-marine organization be told. Instead will be presented a modern melodrama against the background of national convention of the Legion. Of course, the organization as a whole and individual members of it will be given heroic treatment.

The production is based on a story by Martin Mooney, contributor to "Bullets and Ballots" and "The Great O'Malley," and author of "You Can't Buy Luck." The screen play is by Michael Simmons, credited with "Venus Makes Trouble" and "Girl of the Ozarks." The director, C. C. Coleman, Jr., recently did "Fight to a Finish" and "Criminals of the Air."

Personalities to be seen include Don Terry, Mary Russell, Thurston Hall, Arthur Loft, Robert Warwick, Marc Lawrence, Dick Curtis, George McKay, Ed LeSaint, Ivan Miller and Jimmy Hollywood.

Release date: To be determined.

Taking the Town

(RKO-Radio)

Small Town Politics

Here's something that looks like a poser. The story reads well. Watching bits of it in production leads one to the conclusion that it should contain plenty of amusing entertainment. The cast does not contain any big names, but many capable actors have been assigned. All of them have done well in other pictures.

The story has to do with the heroic, if comic, one-man fight a small town mayor wages to prevent a pair of crooks from looting the town treasury and flim-flamming the citizens.

The mayor is Fred Stone, better remembered for his Montgomery and Stone fame than for his picture appearances, even though his films included "Alice Adams," "My American Wife" and "Trail of the Lonesome Pine." The head crook is Berton Churchill, noted for his suave heavy portrayals; his aide is Paul Guilfoyle, now in "Fight for Your Lady" and Flight from Glory." The romance will feature Gordon Jones and Dorothy Moore, who were similarly presented in "The Big Shot." Others are Sherwood Baily, juvenile, Dorothy Vaughn, Harland Briggs, Dick Elliott, Frank M. Thomas, Jack Carson, Fuzzy Knight and Leona Roberts.

The original is by Arthur T. Horman, whose credits include "You Can't Buy Luck" and "The Big Shot." He collaborated on the screen play with Franklin Coen, associated in the preparation of "We're on the Jury" and "Till We Meet Again," and Bert Granet, of "Meet the Missus" and "The Big Shot." Direction is in charge of Edward Killy, who did the current "Saturday's Heroes" and "The Big Shot."

Release date: December 7, 1937 (tentative).

Big Town Girl

Melodrama

Although the story to be told is basically melodramatic, and full of bits of menace and thrill action, it is also one that combines the values of comedy, music, romance, and battles between police and gunmen. It traces the experiences of a cabaret singer who tries to escape from her criminal husband, becomes a masked radio singer, falls in love with a man who tries to expose her and thereby drive her back to her husband, who has sworn to kill her.

The time is the present and the locale might be any metropolitan city. The plot is based on a series or original stories by Darrell Ware and Francis Whiting Reid. A quartet of 20th Century-Fox writers, Lou Breslow, John Patrick, Robert Ellis and Helen Logan, who, individually and in various groupings, have prepared several of the company's action productions, evolved the screen continuity. Alfred Werker, most recently credited with Universal's "We Have Our Moments," directed.

Claire Trevor, outstanding in "Dead End" and "Time Out for Romance," will be seen in the leading role. Sharing the romantic contrast with her is Donald Woods, who won this assignment on the strength of his performance in "Charlie Chan on Broadway." Alan Baxter will be seen in the heavy role. The limited supporting cast will feature Alan Dinehart, George Chandler, Maurice Cass and Lillian Yarbo.

Release date: Dec. 17, 1937.

Navy Blue and Gold

(MGM)

Annapolis Story

This production is being compounded of two dependable standbys, the Annapolis service story and the football story. The list of both is long — "Shipmates," "West Point," "Here Comes the Navy," "Flirtation Walk," "Brown of Harvard," 'The Spirit of Notre Dame," and so on, down to the present crop of topical football yarns.

In this instance the theme is familiar. Three middies are roommates. Two become rivals for the affection of the sister of the other.

Cast strength lends a little more importance to this forthcoming production than ordinarily is associated with routine topical service-sport pictures. The middie trio is composed of James Stewart, last in "Seventh Heaven," Robert Young, Seen in "I Met Him in Paris" and "The Bride Wore Red," and Tom Brown. The girl in the case is Florence Rice, now appearing in "Double Wedding." Billie Burke, Lionel Barrymore, Samuel S. Hinds, Paul Kelly and Barnett Parker have important supporting roles. Frank Albertson, Minor Watson, Robert Middlemass, Phillip Terry, Charles Waldron, Pat Flaherty, Stanley Morner and Matt McHugh have assignments of lesser consequence.

The picture is being directed by Sam Wood, maker of the two latest Marx Brothers films for MGM, "A Night at the Opera" and "A Day at the Races." Production is under the guidance of Sam Zimbalist who served his apprenticeship with Hunt Stromberg.

Release date: November 19, 1937.

Murderers Welcome

Melodrama

The knowledge that this is a Larry Darmour production in which Jack Holt is starred is probably the best tip-off as to the potential showmanship in "Murderers Welcome." It may be helpful, too, to know that in theme and subject matter the story is very different from any of the recent ones which Mr. Darmour has chosen for Holt. Also, as has been his custom, the producer has completed his cast with players who not only have demonstrated that they are talented and capable but are also personalities with whom the public is familiar.

The story revolves about a simple and interesting premise. A motor magnate wants to retire from business. For devious reasons, all of which have a selfish nature, various forces do not want him to do so. Thereby is precipitated a train of exciting melodramatic events which have for their anti-climax several attempts on the man's life and a mysterious murder.

In support of Mr. Holt will be seen Katherine DeMille, Luis Alberni, Craig Reynolds, Granville Bates, Esther Muir, Purnell Pratt, Robert Keane, Maurice Murphy, Rosalind Keith, Margaret Irving and Morgan Wallace.

Joseph Hoffman and Jefferson Parker are authors of the original screenplay and adaptation. Lewis D. Collins, maker of "The River of Missing Men" and "The Mighty Treve," is the director.

Release date: To be determined.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

Note for Mohammed:

Still standing on MGM Studio's back-lot in Culver City is the rocky declivity down which wound the lugubrious procession bearing Juliet to the tomb of the Capulets. Papier-mache it may be, and the "Romeo and Juliet" for which it was created a dim memory—but wind and rain have not yet battered it into shapelessness, nor sun-peeled bare its painted edges.

Last week Philip Scheuer, on the hunt for news for his Los Angeles Times chanced upon it and stood transfixed, staring not so much at its jagged glories as at the sign astonishingly suspended from it: "MOUNTAIN. DO NOT MOVE. HOLD FOR J. H. TURBERG."

Reporter Scheuer brooded for days afterward, wondering about J. H. Turberg, who He is, whence His omnipotence, when He would come for the mountain. He was just getting over the jitters, Scheuer was, when a truck missed his nose by inches. Attached to the truck was a small trailer, and attached to the trailer was a sign scarcely less disturbing than the first. It read: "LIVE CELLOPHANE HOOPS. KEEP UNDER COVER FOR J. H. TURBERG."

Of an industry in which moving mountains and live cellophane are not only possible but probable, it hardly came as a surprise to Mr. Scheuer to learn that J. H. Turberg is Metro's property man. He has everything.

When that Michigan city's water supply acquired a peculiar taste the other day, Mr. Semeyn cut into his air conditioning deep-well water supply, piped it to his theatre lobby and invited all to partake thereof. They did, and stopped at the box office window, too—in large numbers.

Cecil Blount DeMille was making satisfactory progress in his direction of "The Buccaneer," for Paramount, in Hollywood, until his scenario writers and yes-men thrust themselves on the big chief, the other day, during filming, bringing with them the idea that Mr. DeMille should make Dolly Madison, wife of President Madison, an integral character in the film. Hadn't Dolly introduced the first lipstick and the first bathtub into the White House at Washington, thereby scandalizing all the neighbors? they reasoned. What a magnificent opportunity, the DeMille assistants thought-outloud, for the man who sunk the purple bathtub into the homes of the world, to show a representation of the wife of a former President in a uniform consisting only of soapsuds in a bathtub such as even DeMille had never dreamed.

It would be a handsome tub, a gorgeous tub, a big tub, a golden tub with golden cherubs on it, in the best Victorian tradition. It was, they reasoned, Mr. DeMille's chance to make the greatest bathtub scene of all time. But DeMille scorned it. Not only that, he turned on his heels and announced an announcement that virtually stunned his production staff listeners. Said Mr. DeMille:

> "I have directed bathtub scenes which were influential in changing the ablutional habits and environments of all civilized countries.
> "Gloria Swanson and Leatrice Joy and Claudette Colbert, to mention a few, were among the lovely ladies who have bathed—and bathed beautifully—for my cameras.
> "These ladies and myself have had considerable influence in improving the appearance, if not the efficiency, of plumbing throughout the world.
> "Inevitably I am identified with the more luxurious bathing fixtures, but now the time has come to call a halt. I shall never, never direct another bathtub picture."

Thus does a speech by Cecil B. DeMille take its place in American history along with the "I do not choose to run" of Calvin Coolidge, and the "Chicken in every pot" of Herbie Hoover.

Accounts Far Ahead Of Last Year, Says GN

With the closing of various circuit deals Grand National accounts are now approximately 75 per cent ahead of the same number this time last year, it was announced this week. Deals covering the company's product have been effected with the Loew circuit in New York and in their "A" situations throughout the country; RKO, nationally; Fox West Coast Theatres in Los Angeles, San Francisco, Milwaukee, Kansas City, St. Louis, Denver, and Salt Lake City; Spark's Circuit, Jacksonville; Publix-Kincey Circuit, Charlotte; Saenger Theatres, New Orleans; Griffith Circuit, Oklahoma City; Warner Circuit in Ohio and Wisconsin; Great States Circuit, Chicago; Starr Circuit, Nashville; Chesbrough Circuit, Cincinnati; Sterling Theatres, Seattle; Shearer Circuit, Seattle; Harris Amusements Company, Pittsburgh, the Shea Chain, Inc., New York, and the Butterfield Circuit, Detroit.

Paramount and Wilby Agree on New Contract

Paramount and R. B. Wilby, of the Wilby-Kincey theatres in the South and Southeast, have agreed upon a new five-year operating deal.

Mr. Wilby left New York for Atlanta last Thursday and plans to return immediately the final papers have been drafted.

GB Adds to Sales Staff

Additions to the GB sales staff this week included Mel Levenson, Indianapolis exchange; Harry Stern, Los Angeles sales staff, and Sam Oshry, booker at Cincinnati, promoted to salesman in the same territory. "Non Stop New York" is the first picture in GB's new season releases. "Look Out for Love" will be the first of the new Anna Neagle starring productions to be released by the company. "Sailing Along," Jessie Matthews musical, is nearing completion and will be set for early release.

Berkowitz Western Sales Manager for Ambassador

Sam Berkowitz has been appointed western sales manager for Ambassador Pictures, Inc. He is to make his headquarters at the Conn studios in Hollywood, but, at the same time, will retain his interest in the Far West Exchange, Los Angeles, which he has operated for several years.

Franchises for Ambassador's 1937-38 product have been given to Harry Segal for New England, Monarch Pictures for western Pennsylvania, and Ann O'Donnell for Michigan.

Film Aid for Jewish Appeal

Arrangements are being made in Hollywood by Louis K. Sidney, chairman of the producing committee of "Night of Stars," for a group of motion picture celebrities to fly across the continent to make personal appearances at the fourth annual staging of the event to be held at Madison Square Garden, New York, November 17th.

THE AWARDS INSPIRE

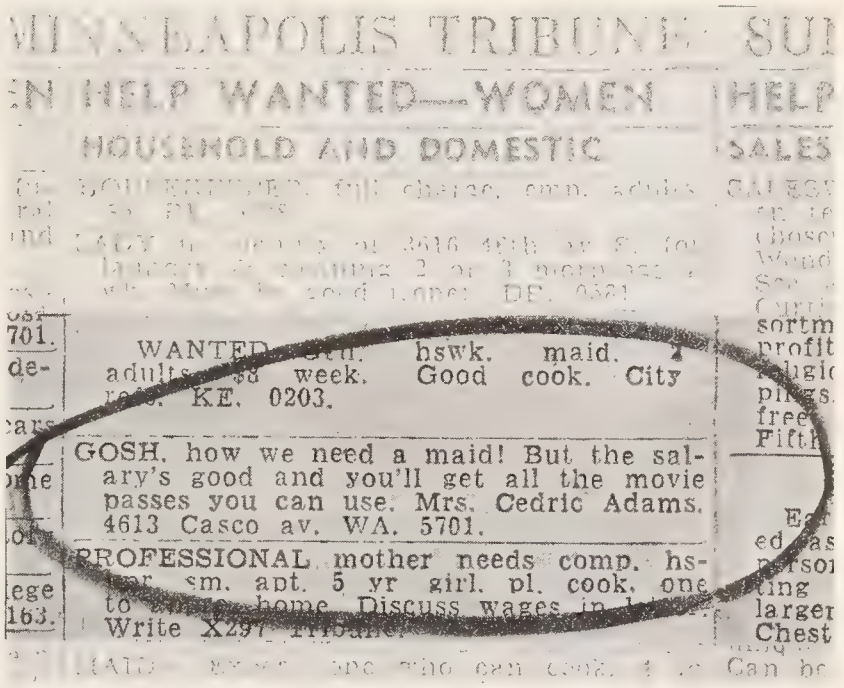
Results of four fruitful years have now established the importance of the Quigley Awards as a definite means of rating manpower; as an incomparable boxoffice stimulant. That these Competitions have also been the inspiration for a successful campaign to put over an entire community is something else again—a something that reads like a "believe it or not" and demands retelling.



In 1935, Manager Larry Woodin, of the Arcadia, in Wellsboro, Pa., was voted the September Bronze. The Award gave him confidence to approach an idea long fancied, a project to bring nationwide attention to the community he so well serves. Argued Woodin, if intense publicity behind a motion picture would result in long lines at the ticket window, why would not a similar publicity effort to promote a town and what it had to offer, result likewise in an influx of visitors, all to be considered as potential theatre patrons. So — — —

"I began looking around (Larry speaking) and found that just ten miles from the theatre entrance was a magnificent gorge 1,000 feet deep and 50 miles long. The road to it passed my theatre. I gave it a name—Pennsylvania's Grand Canyon—and then went to work with the same enthusiasm and effort I had put behind my Plaque campaign. Sounds funny, doesn't it? Selling scenery to build theatre grosses. Did it work? Well, it's a long story. I have scrap books full of the dope on the campaign with clippings representing a combined circulation of about 40,000,000 in everything from the front page of Sunday rotos down.

"What has been the result? Well, it has not only boosted my business considerably, but it has resulted in an influx of over 800,000 visitors to Wellsboro so far. It has resulted in much extra revenue for a community hotel next door to my theatre and has reached the point where New York newspapers have carried stories and rotogravure pictures.

"To make a long story short the final result has been the entire State going nuts over publicity. Yes, the State of Pennsylvania is now spending $500,000 to sell our Canyon and the rest of the State's scenery. We have never bought one inch of space."

Your Round Table has long become accustomed to the high score of accomplishment credited to the membership in the development of the Quigley Awards. But that the Competitions have inspired a project to rivet nationwide attention upon one community, enrich its coffers, encourage a Commonwealth to expend a fortune in advertising, leaves us a bit limp in admiration for the audaciousness of the Wellsboro member who conceived the idea of "selling scenery to build theatre grosses."

QUICK REPORTS FROM THE FIELD

Dance Team

Through cooperation of local merchants, Paul Binstock, Marboro Theatre, Brooklyn, ushered in his Greater Show Season campaign, stores advertising the event and dressing their windows in gala attire. Tie-up was effected with the Board of Trade which paid for expenses in connection with appearance of team dancing on platform mounted on 100 foot pole atop roof of theatre (see photo in Round Table picture section). Team performed on stage thrice daily, amplifiers announced appearances on roof and supplying music for the dancers.

Merchants also paid for cost of cameraman taking movies of crowds gathered which were later shown at the Marboro, lobby and display boards were decorated gratis by local florist and a large cake promoted from baker bore inscription "Congratulations Marboro Greater Show Season." Special parades were held, teaser banner on roof arc lighted at night plugged the season, apartment houses were circularized regarding the campaign and daily papers ran stories and cuts playing up the stunt.

Premiere

Dignified was the opening "Victoria the Great" was accorded in Toronto with His Excellency Lord Tweedsmuir, governor general sponsoring and attending the premiere with Prime Minister and members of his cabinet. In Montreal Miss Neagle headed parade which marched to monument of Queen Victoria, star placing wreath at base of statue, procession proceeding to theatre where they were hosted by the management. Stories and photos were run in local dailies and large store cooperated by tying in 18 of their departments with the film, serving a special Victorian style luncheon in main dining room and devoting three large windows to displays. Star was also made honorary member of Black Watch.

Music Tieins

One of Stokowski's recordings was played in advance on the stage of the Strand, Albany, to give patrons a taste of the music to be expected in "100 Men and a Girl." Following the record, Andy Roy made an announcement on the film, plugging Deanna Durbin and the maestro. Letters were mailed to all music lovers, department stores devoted large windows to displays of Durbin fashions and five-foot illuminated letters were used to spell out the star's name atop marquee.

BILL EXTON COMPILES EXPLOITATION MANUAL

To inaugurate the "Managers Individuality Drive" originated by L. F. Gran for the Standard Gateway Theatres, Bill Exton, Kenosha and Gateway Theatres, Kenosha, has compiled and edited a manual containing exploitation suggestions gathered from all Standard managers.

Running approximately 50 pages, each on different brightly colored stock, Bill includes outlines of campaigns covering Hallowe'en, kiddie activities, farm products week, Armistice Day, Thanksgiving Day, Christmas shows, birthday parties, etc.

All stunts successfully tried last year credit the men responsible for them and are offered for repeat around the circuit.

Radio

Through hookup with local furniture store, Manager Ed Miller and Publicist Manny Pearlstein, Warner's Hipp, Cleveland, for "100 Men and a Girl" offered passes to people whose questions were accepted for the store's quiz-bee radio program over WHK. During the half hour program, several plugs for the picture were given. Due to Deanna Durbin's return to the air on the Texaco program, a tieup was made with them whereby 300 special jumbo cards were spotted at all their stations three days ahead of opening and during engagement.

For "That Certain Woman" the boys promoted women psychoanalyst who was stationed in lobby booth giving gratis readings to patrons. Special cards with title and playdates telling of the presence of the analyst were distributed week ahead in beauty shops and leading department stores. Teaser ads were run in classified columns of all three dailies and special block type ad containing copy directed to women was run on the woman's page of all papers week ahead.

Invitations

Special invitations were mailed by Syd Poppay, Rialto Theatre, York, Pa., to local prominents inviting them to attend "Devil is Driving" preview. Papers ran stories and radio announcements were made daily. Light and Power company used special display plugging picture and the AAA also devoted window to effective exhibit.

Innovation

Something new in theatre lobby displays, an interchangeable permanent lobby setpiece was designed by Mort Blumenstock, advertising manager Warner's Pictures and put into operation at the New York Strand. The new design permits enormous panorama effects running the entire length of the lobby or the space can be blocked out and panels of various dimensions inserted.

Displays 50 feet long and six feet in height are equipped with footlights, top and border lights in three colors, which can be augmented by additional strips of light as the display may require. (See photo in Round Table picture section.)

Pigs is Pigs

Lloyd Mills, Centre Theatre, London, Ontario dug into the bag and came up with a "baby adoption night," advertising for parents to adopt a six month's old baby girl. Lloyd sends along newspaper stories substantiating the fact that the Children's Aid Society, officials of the Ontario Department of Welfare and other Provincial authorities investigated the adoption gag. But of course it was all in good clean fun and the baby was a well fattened porker.

Song Plugger

For the engagement of "Variety Show" at the Palace, Lawrence, Mass., Harry Furst promoted an entire window in five-and-ten. Placed in the center was a small piano with player and singer who plugged hit tunes from the picture over amplifying system wired from window to street. Between songs lad plugged picture and theatre. Window was illustrated with song sheets, stills, playdates and picture plug.

Store Tieup

Lillian Nadel, handling local and national publicity on "Mayerling," for its premiere at the New York Filmarte Theatre effected a tieup with Fifth Avenue store which devoted eight windows to a fashion display. Highlight of stunt was contrast shown between styles in vogue in 1889 era depicted in picture and modern trends in fashion. In addition to windows, stores also used page ad in New York Times and two national magazines which included cut of Danielle Darrieux, who stars opposite Boyer in the picture.

Model of sailboat together with correct boating gear, such as anchors, buoys, lights and nets, was created for lobby by Manager Len Grotte for "Captains Courageous" at Loew's Prospect, Flushing, N. Y. Title and stars were lettered in real rope.

Against a black velvet background, Walter League, Palace, Jamestown, N. Y., paraded his models in latest modes to plug his fur fashion show. Both juvenile and adult styles were displayed at matinee and evening performances for three days. Complete description found elsewhere in this section.

To celebrate Mickey Mouse's ninth birthday at all Paramount-Miami Theatres, publicist Jonas Perlberg put on local ceremony which was witnessed by those shown above. Included in the party were (left to right) Perlberg, W. R. Lynch, general manager of the theatres, Miss 1937 Miami and Al Weiss, Jr., manager of the Olympia there. Citywide celebration was held, with stories and photos landing in local dailies. Description found elsewhere in this section.

For the date of "Souls At Sea" at the China Theatre, Stockholm, Sweden, Manager Alfred Bjorck promoted window display in leading jewelry store to plug the attraction, with over-sized portrait of the star. Card in lower right-hand corner calls attention to the fact that Gary Cooper was recently chosen most popular star in Sweden.

*Doctor's emergency call board used by Les Pollock, Loew's, Rochester. Patron leaves name and is given check. # Fashion Show, Pop Eye Club Build Grosses for League

Jamestown Warner Theatreman Details Plans of Operation

Offered as an interesting example of a fashion show and revue in the smaller community is the one completed recently by Manager Walter League at the Palace, Jamestown, N. Y., in cooperation with leading local furriers. To insure maximum interest, not only were the newest adults' and children's fur styles shown, but giveaways by the cooperating merchant and other representative stores in town were offered. Show held on the stage of the theatre was presented for three days, matinee and evening, September 30th to October 2nd. League furnished stage set, talent of dance team, singer, magician and orchestra and lobby display. Items furnished by the merchant were as follows:

Eight models and five children to model juvenile clothing, adults' and children's fur coats for giveaways and a number of the newest fur styles for display purposes. Other stores furnished dresses, hats and shoes, children's dresses and shoes. Hairdressing for all models was also promoted as was a permanent wave for giveaway. The fur company stood the cost of advance in current trailers, printed and forwarded notices to all names on their mailing list, ran special ads in advance and current, plugged the show over the air.

Effective Stage Set Used

Setting at the theatre arranged by League consisted of black velour backdrop, center opening back with painted gold drape with white sateen columns bordering opening. Also used were ground rows and trees, compo painted white and sprinkled with flitter trimmed with silver tinselled strands. Setpiece placed on platform against gold drop was white with solid silver panels.

Show routine ran as follows: Orchestra picked up instrumental music for trailer, cut for announcement, then into special music for opening group, eight girls on stage wearing sport models and exiting in pairs. Close in as last pair exited and followed with announcement for next number tango dance team. On closein of team, next flash showed the models again in pairs wearing semi-sport clothing, this followed by magician working in one, followed in turn by children's parade in one consisting of five youngsters from three to eight years showing fur coats and dresses.

Models Exhibit Fashions

Full stage again for the models exhibiting new dresses followed by singer and then again the magician. Models then came back in a number entitled "A Study in Black" wearing semi-formal coats and gowns accompanied by announcements for the singer and for the dance team which again appeared this time in an adagio number. Then after closein for bows, open on full stage again for finale with models in evening gowns and wraps who entered center singly, parading and take positions on stage, while singer did number over hidden microphone. As last model turned to take position in line, entire line moved forward, joined by dance team left, singer and magician right to slow curtain closein and fast curtains for bows. Running time was 37 minutes.

Although the show in itself brought business, League reports the extra vaudeville and the giveaways as a further incentive. He reports the set produced very inexpensively and, most important, cooperating merchants satisfied with the show which allows the Round Tabler to busy himself now for tieins for week before Christmas. The local papers were promoted to do a thorough job on the publicity and the store went for a series of large display ads on the tiein.

Pop Eye Club Clicks

Starting out exclusively as a screen show for the youngsters League's Popeye Club which shortly celebrates its second anniversary has jumped his Saturday kid matinee attendance to up around the 1,400 mark. Contests and other attractions were added soon after the inception of the organization and later came amateur shows, a weekly feature which League refers to as Talent Quests. Youngsters proved sufficiently entertaining to be taken on by leading station on sustaining basis. Since then the hour has been sold Dairylea for one year with the milk people paying radio line charges, awarding cash prizes weekly for act receiving most votes. To stimulate further interest sponsors distribute voting blanks throughout all grocery stores, blanks of course crediting theatre.

Pollock Celebrates Mickey's 9th Birthday

Highlighting his campaign with a five-day contest on WSAY, Manager Lester Pollock, Loew's Rochester, Rochester, N. Y., asked listeners who they preferred: Mickey, Donald Duck and why. Contest was surrounded by a teaser campaign and spot announcements, with Mickey Mouse dolls going to winners. One thousand tagged Mickey Mouse charms were distributed, as were balloons with theatre imprint and cut of the "star."

All bulletin boards in schools, libraries, playgrounds, etc., were covered with 11 by 16 cards calling attention to the special matinee at the theatre, and orphans were guested by Pollock, stories running in local dailies. Three of the city's leading department stores cooperated by using window and counter displays of the Mickey Mouse dolls, sweaters, books, etc. Lobby displays plugged the cartoon show and for street bally Les used giant bannered truck which covered the main thoroughfares.

KING SOLOMON'S MINES: Cedric Hardwicke, Roland Young—This picture outgrossed many of the colossal hits from the major companies and pleased the majority of the patrons. Some good singing by Paul Robeson and convincing acting by Cedric Hardwicke. Roland Young drew many laughs and chuckles. Despite the fantastically incredulous theme the film often held a mixed audience delightfully spellbound.—C. T. Cooney, Jr., The Waldo Theatre Corporation, Waldoboro, Maine. General patronage.

Miami Paramount Theatremen Report Recent Activities

Stepping along briskly on various tieins for the benefit of the boxoffices are the Paramount theatremen in Miami who, through Jones "Perly" Perlberg, zone publicity director, report their recent doings. On "Varity Show" Manager Al Weiss, Jr., at the Olympia planted five-foot title letters, cut out of sign cloth, on the close in curtain. For ten days ahead title was shown at opening and close of the curtain between each unit of the program, full stage and balcony floods used for further effect. Special cutout letters and pennants were also used for front decorations. For street stunt Weiss had boy dressed in raccoon coat and skull cap making the downtown areas. Boy carried theatre banner on cane to convey college atmosphere, and as was to be expected, the wearing of a fur coat in Miami during September attracted the attention aimed for by "Perly" and his crew.

Promotes Twin Tiein

On "Double or Nothing" Al invited all twins in the greater Miami area to be his guests, and among the breaks obtained in the newspapers was one showing Perlberg presenting the first pair of twins to arrive with the house courtesies. "Make a Wish" was also sold by the Olympia manager by means of a tiein with United Cigar Stores, which distributed coupons for guest tickets, certain of these being good for admissions to the theatre.

At the Paramount, Manager J. Howell Luther made much of an amateur show tiein sponsored by leading dry cleaners, main prize being all-expense trip to New York. Preliminaries of contest and finals were held on the Paramount stage with merchant contributing radio plugs, newspaper advertising, trailers and other publicity. Extra business on this was obtained by two of the contestants, who gave a special performance before the student body of local college. Students came to theatre in body to plug for the entrants in the finals.

Honors Local Boy

The fact that Grant Richards, appearing in "On Such a Night," was a former student at the University of Miami, allowed Manager James Barnett an opportunity for a tiein on the date at the Community, Miami Beach. Barnett had a giant telegram from the star made up in the form of an invitation to the college drama club. Wire was presented by uniformed messenger and photo of club accepting invitation cracked the local dailies. Further use was made of the wire for display in Western Union office.

The flood sequences in the picture were publicized by Barnett with a special display made up of newspaper "scare heads" and actual pictures taken of the recent Mississippi floods. Copy from the picture was tied in. Newspaper publicity was topped by two feature stories on Richards' career, which were written by leading columnists, both friends of the star, during his residence in Miami.

Another stand-out reported by the Miami Paramounteers was a citywide campaign on the observance of Mickey Mouse's ninth birthday, celebrated at all the theatres with radio, newspapers, schools and civic clubs cooperating. Programs in all spots included the extra Disney shorts and the cutting of the birthday cake was photographed and carried by local papers. The ceremony, witnessed by W. R. Lynch, general manager; Perlberg, Al Weiss and Miss 1937 Miami, is shown in the photo section of this Round Table issue.

SHOWMEN'S LOBBY LAFFS

Newspaper Contest Plugs "Stella Dallas"

Highlight of Matt Saunder's "Stella Dallas" campaign at the Poli Theatre, Bridgeport, Conn., was a mother and daughter picture contest in the Times-Star week ahead of opening and running during engagement. Readers were invited to send in their photos, each day paper chose what they considered best looking pair and to them cash prize was awarded. Newspaper also ran winners' photos with names, addresses, playdates, etc.

For street bally girls dressed in slacks carried six foot cardboard cutout letters spelling title and covered business districts where the stunt received the attention aimed at. Week ahead Saunders constructed lobby setpiece containing stills from picture, poetic tribute to mother love and Mrs. Roosevelt's article. Also posted on lobby floor was full 24 sheet with baby spot focused on figure of Barbara Stanwyck as she appeared in the picture.

"Tell Us What You Did"

Free Ad

Free three-column ad in the Evening Telegram, Rocky Mount, N. C., was landed by Manager H. S. Orr of the Center Theatre for his showing of "100 Men and a Girl." Through a tieup with the paper, guest tickets were awarded to readers discovering errors in the classified columns.

Street Float Bally Used by Pentecost

Three days ahead of opening of "Stella Dallas" at Loew's Grand, Atlanta, Ga., Edwin Pentecost covered sides of truck with flowers spelling out theatre and title. On float was five piece string instrument orchestra and two attractive girls handing out heralds as crowds gathered.

For front of theatre title was illuminated and spelled out in six-foot letters, giant cutout of Barbara Stanwyck was also planted atop marquee. Oversized invitational telegram was delivered through streets by three boys to Mayor Hartsfield's office, photo and stories running in dailies. Contest was also planted in paper on whether blondes make the best mothers, cash prizes going to those submitting best 200 word letters on the subject.

"Tell Us What You Did"

Radio Angles Plug "100 Men" for Barcroft

Radio commentators devoted time to discussing "100 Men and a Girl" for John Barcroft, publicity director of the Columbus RKO Theatres, and C. H. Schreiber, manager of the RKO Palace, and music critic of WBNS discussed the Stokowski music at great length. Man-in-the-street broadcast was staged, with tickets awarded for best answers. Six daily spot announcements were worked in on a tieup with furniture store program.

Tieup was arranged with department store, which included co-ops on Durbin merchandise; special front window displays; children's floor counter displays; and giveaways of autographed, colored star photos.

Ohio State Journal used front window display of candid-camera pictures showing the progress in Deanna Durbin's career; Life Magazine carried a several-paged feature on the star, trucks of newsdealers were bannered, and tack cards placed in all newsstand windows.

THE NEW UNIVERSAL'S

MERRY GO ROUND of 1938

"If you're in the mood for sheer nonsense in large doses—I prescribe this picture. The director was given a cast of veteran comedy stars–and he turned them loose in the arena with a single command; 'Go to it!' And they did go to it. Mischa Auer, Alice Brady, Bert Lahr, Louise Fazenda and Jimmy Savo slap enough broad comedy into seven reels of film to do for two ordinary pictures...The story is about four vaudeville comedians who are entrusted with the problem of raising a romantic young girl. When she falls in love—trouble commences for the godfathers...Joy Hodges plays the romantic young girl. She puts over three songs in fine fashion—and with more experience and care, she's a charming bet for the future . . . For a rollicking, fast-moving evening of fun—old folks and young folks should go to see—'MERRY GO ROUND OF 1938'"

THE MOVIE-GOING PUBLIC IS CRYING FOR A GOOD DOWN-TO-EARTH DRAMA!

"A THREE BELL PICTURE,"

says Jimmy Fidler

'--Terse, direct, thoroughly enjoyable drama that will grip your attention from start to finish..."

THE Hollywood REPORTER

Writers And Cast Share The Honors

"PORTIA ON TRIAL"

Here is a picture which sets out determinedly to please, on the dramatic side, and succeeds so well in its direct audience appeal that it merits a good spot on any program. Without a "big name" in the cast, it offers an interest-gripping portrayal of a typical Faith Baldwin story, full of human emotion and a somewhat different play on the "mother love" motif.

As the title indicates, the story is one of life among the legalites, especially Portia Merriman, highly successful woman lawyer The mystery of her past crops up early in her bitter feud with John Condon, head of a powerful newspaper syndicate, whose wastrel son once had been her husband, and to whom she had surrendered her infant son 17 years before The return to America of the ex-husband with a new mistress and the son, sets the stage for the drama which leads to the shooting of the ex-husband and Portia's dynamic courtroom defense of the murderess.

All the individual performances are exceptional Frieda Inescourt gives a splendid portrayal of Portia Neil Hamilton never gave a better performance than his interpretation of the prodigal. Walter Abel is excellent as the district attorney, as is Clarence Kolb as the flinty newspaper chief Ruth Donnelly always seems to be at her best. She is again. Heather Angel is effective as the justifiably homicidal mistress. Anthony Marsh is pleasing as the juvenile Barbara Pepper's snappy though brief witness stand scene is almost a triumph. All the minor roles are adequately handled.

With the exception of the too-heavy pointing up of some of the scenes, George Nicholls has turned in a smooth, capable directing job Edward Paramore's adaptation and Samuel Ornitz's screenplay provide well-constructed action, tensity and bright dialog. Al Levoy gives the picture lavish production which is well above par Harry Wild's photography is tops. The sound production is unusually good.

DAILY VARIETY DAILY

If laughs, tears, intense drama, suspense are the stuff from which good pictures are made, 'Portia on Trial' is due to go over big with audiences everywhere, more especially among the femmes who will go for the mother love angle like a hungry horse for its oats. 'Portia on Trial' strikes a variant on the 'Madame X' theme but it has original and surprising slants all its own and, while some may consider a few of the situations forced, the whole makes topping film material and turns out to be A1 entertainment.

Frieda Inescort loves Neil Hamilton, the weakling son of Clarence Kolb, a wealthy and powerful newspaper publisher. Hamilton fathers her son and wants to wed her but the old gentleman steps in and nixes it, agreeing, however, to give the baby his name provided the mother signs affidavits completely discrediting herself.

The baby is educated in England and years later returns to New York as Anthony Marsh. Hamilton falls in love with Heather Angel, a British girl, just as he had fallen for Miss Inescort years before. Miss Angel's baby dies but she accompanies Hamilton to America. Old man frames Miss Angel with the immigration authorities, she escapes, returns and murders Hamilton.

Miss Inescort, who has become a successful attorney, defends Miss Angel. The trial, the frantic efforts of Kolb to discredit Miss Inescort, the mounting drama of retributive justice that whirls the vengeful old millionaire to ultimate confession of his wrongdoing, constitute material from which a powerful and moving document has been evolved.

Like all superior pictures, this one had a soundly conceived story to begin with. Samuel Ornitz has taken the Faith Baldwin original and molded it into a drama of swift climaxes, punctuated by vibrant dialog. George Nicholls, handed a swell script, turns in an evenly paced directing job, taking every advantage of the opportunities for piling suspenseful climaxes on top of one another until at the finish the audience is putting out those nervous, jittery little laughs that are the unfailing sign that it's emotionally involved with the story.

Frieda Inescort captures the major acting honors. She is a player of commanding and beautiful dignity, a real Portia, and her enunciation is a joy to hear. Walter Abel plays a suave and effective district attorney who is hopelessly in love with Miss Inescort, and does a bangup job of it. Neil Hamilton contributes an excellent and well studied characterization while Clarence Kolb, as the elderly Titan with a Jove complex, never let down for a moment. His scene on the witness stand is masterly. Anthony Marsh makes a personable juvenile and does well with a difficult part. One of the memorable characterizations is turned in by Ruth Donnelly as Miss Inescort's professional assistant and confidante.

Heather Angel brings beauty and sympathy to the role of the girl who kills Hamilton and she, too, has a witness chair sequence that grips the audience powerfully. Barbara Pepper handles a smaller role with appealing skill, and the same is true of Hobart Bosworth and Ian Maclaren. George Cooper and John Kelly were good for plenty of giggles and the remainder of the cast acquits itself with credit.

Albert Levoy, as associate producer, has made this picture one that Republic can be proud of and also one that will do much to boost Republic's standing among exhibs lucky enough to book it An outstanding contribution to the general excellence of the film is the RCA Victor High Fidelity sound, which comes through under control at all times. Harry Wild turns in a thoroughly satisfactory camera job.

Inescapable conclusion is that in 'Portia on Trial,' Republic has a box office bell ringer, a product that will fill houses with afternoon as well as evening crowds, for the femme word-of-mouth on it is bound to be terrific.

TRAILER GOING TO ALL THEATRES WILL AID CENSUS OF UNEMPLOYED

Frank R. Wilson, Director of Information, Reaching Exhibitors Through Circuits and Mayors' Committees in 5,000 Cities

The support of the motion picture industry has been enlisted by the United States Labor Department in its campaign to acquaint the public with the plans for a nationwide census of unemployed persons, which was authorized at the last session of Congress.

The story of what the census is and how it will be conducted is told in a 200-foot trailer which the five largest national theatre circuits, Warner Brothers, Paramount, RKO, Loew's and Fox, already have agreed to run. In addition, smaller circuits and exhibitors owning one and two houses will be contacted and asked to show the film.

Support of the exhibitors was gained through an appeal to the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America by Frank R. Wilson, former distributor and exhibitor who is now director of information in the unemployment census. Mr. Wilson's request was turned over to a committee composed of the general managers of the five affiliated circuits, and they voted to aid the movement.

5,000 Mayors' Committees

Exhibitors in smaller communities will be appealed to through mayors' committees which, Mr. Wilson said, have been formed in 5,000 cities not reached by the large national circuits.

Approximately 1,000 prints have been made and Cecil Maberry, former film executive, is handling the distribution details.

The trailer, "Counting the Jobless," was made in Washington, under the supervision of Mr. Wilson, by a Pathe News cameraman. It opens with a foreword by John D. Biggers, president of Libbey-Owens-Ford Glass Company, of Toledo, who was appointed by President Roosevelt as administrator of the census.

Following Mr. Biggers' explanation of the census there is a sequence showing how the country's postmen will deliver cards on November 16th. Then a person is pictured filling out a card and dropping it in a mailbox. After a closeup of one of the cards with its 14 questions, the tabulating machinery that has been set up in Washington to handle the deluge of replies is pictured.

The thoroughness with which the census will be taken is illustrated by a recent news dispatch from Washington saying the checkup will be so complete that even President Roosevelt will be obliged to fill out a card.

It is planned to distribute 32,000,000 cards through post offices on November 16th and the returns are to be filed by November 20th.

Mr. Wilson, who has been associated with the motion picture industry in various capacities, was living at his Dutchess County farm in New York a few weeks ago when he received a long distance telephone call from Mr. Biggers, informing him he had been appointed to the post of director of information by the White House.

JOHN D. BIGGERS, president of the Libbey-Owens-Ford Glass Company and administrator of the federal unemployed census, explains the aims and purposes of the census in a trailer which will be shown in theatres throughout the country. (Acme Photo).

He immediately went to Washington where he has established headquarters in Room 6829 of the Department of Commerce Building.

He first came into contact with the motion picture industry when he was appointed national director of publicity for the Federal Farm Loan Bureau, of the United States treasury department, in 1916. He served in this capacity until 1917 when he was appointed national director of the treasury department's Liberty Loan campaigns in 1917 and 1918.

Used Screen and Stars

In both positions he was concerned with the use of the screen and screen personalities to aid in successfully floating the Liberty and Victory loans.

After the World War, he became financial director for D. W. Griffith, Inc., and from that he went into motion picture finance, becoming president of the Producers Finance Corporation. Later he became engaged in the promotion of motion pictures and handled the Martin Johnson picture, "Simba" which was a roadshow.

Other positions which he held, in order, include president of Motion Picture Capital Corporation, president of North American Theatres, Inc., president of Talking Picture Epics, Inc., and vice-president of Principal Distributing Corporation.

The new governmental bureau, Census of Unemployed, will attempt to chart and analyze the jobless of the nation. President Roosevelt will deliver a radio address November 14th, discussing the plan, and Mr. Wilson is making arrangements for a broadcast November 16th over the three national networks to give instructions on the method to be used in filling out the cards. Mr. Wilson hopes to have Gabriel Heatter, radio commentator, voice the directions over the Mutual Broadcasting System; Edwin C. Hill, over the Columbia Broadcasting System, and Lowell Thomas, over the National Broadcasting Company.

Warners to Stage Plays in London as Screen Material

Warner Brothers will produce one play every two months in London in association with British producers, bring the shows to New York for presentation on Broadway and then make them into pictures, Jack L. Warner, vice-president in charge of production, said Monday on his arrival on the Queen Mary.

"Blondie White," which opened recently in London, is to be staged in New York in six weeks, Mr. Warner said.

The plays will be put on in New York without outside affiliations. Mr. Warner said the works of foreign writers are not controlled by the Dramatists Guild contract.

Warner production plans in England call for 16 next season and that at least one picture will be of major importance with Hollywood stars and director, Mr. Warner said. If the plan works out additional films of this type will be produced, he said. No other foreign production is contemplated.

Mr. Warner signed two English actors to long term contracts while abroad. They are Bruce Lester, leading man, and Paul Williams, character player.

Away for five weeks Mr. Warner visited France, England and Budapest. About France and England he observed that "the theatre business in those countries is at its height." "One of the reasons for booming exhibition in England," he said, "is because theatres charge $2.15 for reserved seats and the minimum price is 40 cents. This applies to small towns as well as big cities."

Mr. Warner said that in England he did not believe there were 1,000,000 unemployed. As for a war scare there is no such thing, he said.

Mr. Warner stayed in New York five days, during which time he conferred with home office executives.

Wallace in Pathe Post

John D. Wallace, sportsman, last week was made western representative of Pathe International. Mr. Wallace will make his headquarters at the Pathe laboratories on the coast.

'Victoria the Great' Plays in New York And Washington

The United States premieres of RKO Radio's "Victoria the Great," produced in England by Herbert Wilcox and starring Anna Neagle as Queen Victoria, took place last Thursday at Radio City Music Hall, New York, and in Washington on Tuesday night, in Boston on Wednesday, and in Chicago on Friday of this week. The New York opening climaxed a series of premieres in London, Ottawa, Montreal, and Toronto.

The day the picture had its premiere at the Music Hall Mr. Wilcox and Miss Neagle were guests of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers at its weekly luncheon held at the International Casino in New York. This was followed by a reception for them by the English Speaking Union, at which Sir Gerald Campbell's, British Consul General in New York, daughter, Naomi Campbell, was host, and by a party in their honor by W. G. Van Schmus, managing director of the Music Hall, in his reception rooms.

At nine o'clock Miss Neagle and Mr. Wilcox were introduced by Mr. Van Schmus on the stage of the Music Hall, after which they were hosts to a private party of friends at the Ritz-Carlton Hotel.

On the following day, Friday, Mr. Wilcox was host to members of the Italian Consulate and to prominent leaders in Italian cultural and social circles in New York, in appreciation of the honor bestowed upon his picture with the winning of the Cup of Nations at Venice, for "outstanding picture of the year."

On Sunday Miss Neagle and Mr. Wilcox left New York for the Washington opening.

Mack Littman, formerly representing Criterion Films in the United States, this week was appointed American representative for Mr. Wilcox. He will handle all matters pertaining to Herbert Wilcox Productions and Imperator Films and will cooperate with RKO and GB, distributing Wilcox productions.

"Victoria" has entered on its seventh week at the Leicester Square theatre, London, and this week opened at the Rotenturm theatre, Vienna, under the patronage of the British legation.

"Victoria the Great" was reviewed by Terry Ramsaye, editor of MOTION PICTURE HERALD, in the September 25th issue.

O'Donnell Reported Ready To Drop William Fox Deal

Joseph O'Donnell, who is believed to be representing William Fox, is reported to be ready to drop a deal made some time ago to acquire the Kromocolor Laboratory at Paramus, N. J. Although no official confirmation could be obtained, William Krimsky, Newark attorney and co-receiver for the property, said this week that there has been a slight delay in the consummation of the transaction. He said there was a question as to some details and he had every reason to believe that they would be worked out satisfactorily.

Mr. O'Donnell purchased the property at a public sale with a bid of $105,000. He put up $21,000 in cash as a deposit.

Wilcox, Campbell Address AMPA

Approximately 250 persons attended the weekly luncheon of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers at the International Casino in New York last Thursday. Designated "International Day" the guest list contained representatives from Great Britain, Australia, South Africa, Canada and other countries besides executives from the home offices. Captain Harold Auten, American representative for Greater Union Theatres, Ltd., of Australia, was toastmaster.

Speakers included Sir Gerald Campbell, British consul-general in New York, and Herbert Wilcox, producer of "Victoria the Great." Sir Gerald spoke on the troubled condition of the world and pointed out that actors and entertainers could do a lot towards "cheering things up." Sir Gerald concluded his address by presenting Anna Neagle, star of "Victoria the Great" with a medal from the Black Watch, a Toronto regiment.

Mr. Wilcox paid tribute to RKO Radio and especially Ralph Rolan, RKO executive and president of AMPA, for their cooperation in the handling of "Victoria." In referring to the picture he said, "it is a great tonic to make a picture which is accepted in the United States and Canada."

Budd Rogers and Hoffberg Close for British Pictures

Budd Rogers, vice-president of Alliance Film Corporation, United States distribution representative for Associated British Picture Corporation, Ltd., last week sold the American rights of a group of ABP pictures to J. H. Hoffberg Company, Inc. The pictures include "Invitation to the Waltz," with Lilian Harvey; "I Give My Heart," with Gita Alpar; "Kathleen Mavoureen," with Sally O'Neil, and "Student's Romance," with Patric Knowles.

Under the arrangement first run deals throughout the United States are to be concluded directly with exhibitors by the Hoffberg Company. Deals already have been closed with first run houses in Washington, Miami Beach, Rochester and Chicago. Mr. Hoffberg leaves New York shortly for a trip through the midwest and to the coast. While on the coast Mr. Hoffberg will continue negotiations with the Rosener Circuit which recently booked "I Give My Heart" in Los Angeles, San Francisco, Seattle and Salt Lake City.

National Decency Legion Classifies 15 Productions

Of 15 new pictures reviewed and classified by the National Legion of Decency in its listing for the current week seven were approved for general patronage, six were listed as unobjectionable for adults, one was classed as objectionable in part and one was condemned. The pictures and their classification follow.

Class A-1, Unobjectionable for General Patronage: "Borrowing Trouble," "Federal Bullets," "Galloping Dynamite," "Look Out, Mr. Moto," "Non-Stop New York," "Submarine D-1," "Valley of Terror." Class A-2, Unobjectionable for Adults: "High Flyers," "Living on Love," "Night Club Scandal," "Obligacion de Asesinar" (Spanish), "Perdoname Hijo" (Spanish), "Vienna Burgtheatre" (German). Class B, Objectionable in Part: "Ali Baba Goes to Town." Class C, Condemned: "Club de Femmes" (French).

Australian Censor Lauds Production Code Operations

From Vancouver, B. C., came the following statement this week from W. Cresswell O'Reilly, chief film censor of the Commonwealth of Australia, on his way home to Sydney after a visit to Hollywood on a world tour:

"During my brief stay at Los Angeles with my wife and daughter, the concluding stage of a nine months' holiday tour around the world, we have taken the opportunity of visiting the major producing companies' film studios, and have gained useful and interesting information regarding their organization, methods, and activities generally. We did the same in England, but, of course, the American studios are on a much larger scale.

"My visits were in a semi-official capacity, but the knowledge gained will be of much value when I resume duty in Sydney at the end of next month.

"Not the least interesting contact was a Saturday morning conference with the representatives of the producers organization at their offices in Hollywood where we exchanged ideas and gained illuminating information respecting each other's viewpoints. I have great admiration for the splendid work which has been done during the last three years, or so, by Mr. Breen and his associates and the thoroughness with which they have exercised control over the productions of the studios from the time the story is considered right down to the final preview and release for exhibition. It is a great achievement to have secured the agreement of producers not to release any film without the Certificate of Approval issued by the Hays organization.

"The work done is reflected in the censorship figures for Australia. For instance, about five years ago, 16 per cent of feature films were rejected, and over 50 per cent suffered excision. In 1936 the corresponding figures were 1.7 per cent and 20.9 per cent respectively.

Last year in Australia, an organization was formed under the auspices of the Roman Catholic Church similar to the Legion of Decency in the U. S. A., and our Censorship cooperated with them in the preliminary discussions, and, as a result, the lists issued by the Australian organization are practically identical with the classification made by the Commonwealth Censorship.

"We are deeply indebted to the executives of producing companies for facilities which have been made available to us in England, Canada and the United States, and I appreciate the kindness and courtesy extended to me by the officers of the Hays organization."

W. CRESSWELL O'REILLY,
Chief Film Censor
Commonwealth of Australia

Butler's Contract Renewed

Twentieth Century-Fox has renewed the long-term contract of David Butler, director, who recently completed "Ali Baba Goes to Town," starring Eddie Cantor.

IATSE WINS SCREEN CREDIT DEMAND; STUDIOS FACE STATE LABOR INQUIRY

Elevation of Frank Gillmore to Active Control of the Actors' Association Is Temporarily Delayed; More Unions Sign

The producers' labor committee in Hollywood this week acquiesced in the demand of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees that it be given screen credit on all releases. Retroactive to October 19th the IATSE symbol will be on the lower right hand corner of the screen title card which bears the Production Code Administration seal in the lower left hand corner and will be the same size as the code seal.

Other later developments within the film industry included reports that a California state assembly committee, appointed to study capital and labor relations in that state, would launch an investigation of the screen industry union situation within the next week.

Elevation of Frank Gillmore, president of Actors Equity Association, to active control of the Associated Actors and Artistes of America, originally set for November 1st, was postponed for several weeks.

Projectionists, stage hands and other theatre employee unions signed contracts or began negotiations in New England, Missouri, Cleveland and Milwaukee.

The IATSE demand for screen credit, made some time ago with announcement of the IATSE claim of jurisdiction over all film groups, was accompanied by the explanation that its purpose was "to insure projection of pictures by our member projectionists throughout the country." American Society of Cinematographers members will retain their screen credits with the ASC appearing after cameramen's names under the terms of a contract extending to 1939.

Official explanation of the delay in Mr. Gillmore's transfer to his new post as executive head of the Four A's was that the organization's new offices in New York would not be ready for some weeks. Until that time, it was said, the Equity president would continue in the post which he was to relinquish to Paul Dullzell, executive secretary, this week. Mr. Dullzell two weeks ago submitted his resignation to the Equity council but it has not yet been acted upon.

Copies of the Screen Actors' Guild producer contract, revised to include a supplementary letter covering the proposals of Educational Pictures for arbitrating in New York disputes which arise in that state, were received in New York City this week and forwarded by the Guild eastern office to Educational. Indications were that the producer would sign the contract following which the Guild eastern office would concentrate on signing Pathe Commercial Films and Mentone. A final stand on the March of Time contention that it is a newsreel and hence outside the province of the contract was expected this week with the arrival of Kenneth Thomson, executive secretary of the Guild, in New York.

District managers of three Cleveland circuits this week met representatives of the stagehands union to discuss wage scales and working conditions as they affect cashiers and ushers. A demand for wage increases ranging from 25 to 33 per cent was rejected, the circuit executives refusing to enter negotiations on that basis. Concessions in working conditions agreed upon were elimination of split shifts for cashiers, one day a week off for all girls, and strict adherence to the 40 hour week for all service employees.

Felix Snow, IATSE representative, last week closed one year contracts with Joplin, Mo., theatres, calling for a five per cent increase for both stage hands and projectionists except in two theatres where the increase amounted to 22 per cent.

Fox theatres in Milwaukee signed an agreement with the Theatrical Employees union, American Federation of Labor affiliate, covering approximately 150 doormen, ushers and cashiers in 20 houses. The agreement called for an increase of 10 per cent in wages and a 40 hour week.

The Loew-Poli circuit in New England signed contracts with projectionists and stage hands unions for the next three years for 10 houses of the circuit's 15.

Delegates representing 70 New England locals of IATSE unions will convene in Springfield, Mass., for their annual meeting on December 5th.

Employees of Local 54 of the Service Employees in Amusement and Cultural Buildings, AFL affiliate, won a 25 per cent wage increase, a six-day week and a closed shop, from the Cinema Circuit, New York, of which Max Cohen is president. Thirty members of the local are employed in the circuit, operating the New Amsterdam, George M. Cohan, Bronx Prospect, and Brooklyn Astor theatre. The negotiations followed the arrest of seven pickets at the New Amsterdam and dismissal of the case. Lou Conway is president of the local.

ASCAP Members Now Total 1046

The American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers held a luncheon and its third annual meeting last Thursday at the Hotel Astor in New York with more than 400 of its 1046 members in attendance. The membership, it was revealed, consists of 927 writer members and 119 publisher members.

Gene Buck, president, presided at the dais, at which were seated E. C. Mills, general manager; John G. Paine, chairman of the administrative committee; Louis D. Frohlich, counsel; Louis Bernstein, vice-president; Shelton Brooks, Joseph Weldon Johnson, John Abbott, Irving Caesar, Joseph Young, Fred E. Ahlert, Charles Wakefield Cadman, George Fischer, Mrs. Edward MacDowell, Mrs. Ethelbert Nevin, Mrs. Harry B. Smith, Otto A. Harbach, Edward B. Marks, Jack Mills, Mrs. Mel B. Kaufman, Mrs. Nola Arndt, Mrs. Charles K. Harris and Saul Bernstein.

The luncheon gathering paid tribute to the memory of the late Nathan Burkan, ASCAP general counsel for many years, and sent a congratulatory message to Eddie Cantor, who is observing his 25th year in show business.

Poor Richard Club to Honor Will H. Hays

Philadelphia's advertising organization, The Poor Richard Club, through the president, Charles H. Grakelow, and the Director General of the Annual Banquet, E. O. Bretz, announced this week that Will H. Hays will be the recipient of its gold medal award of achievement. The award will be bestowed at the club's annual banquet, held on Benjamin Franklin's birthday, January 17th.

Mr. Hays has been president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America since that organization was formed in 1922. In announcing the award, Mr. Grakelow said:

"For years it has been the club's policy to recognize annually an individual whose contributions to the nation's industrial progress have been outstanding and this year's award to Mr. Hays, whose able leadership has been reflected in the progress made by the motion picture industry during the year 1937, is sure to win universal approval.

"By recognizing Mr. Hays' achievements, the club endorses those policies which have resulted in high quality in motion pictures and in motion picture advertising. No banquets have won greater international renown than these annual affairs of The Poor Richard Club. Leaders from all parts of the world attend to join in the tribute to American industry.

Recent recipients of the Poor Richard award include Will Rogers, Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., Captain Edward V. Rickenbacker. The Poor Richard Banquet climaxes a day of activity in which the entire city of Philadelphia joins in paying tribute to the club's patron saint, Benjamin Franklin.

LeBaron Denies He's Leaving Paramount

William LeBaron, production head of Paramount, returned to Hollywood Tuesday after a vacation and denied reports that he would leave the company. Mr. LeBaron's contract runs to the end of this year.

He said: "Reports that I am not continuing my association in my present capacity with Paramount are wholly without foundation. I am on a vacation, having started it when Adolph Zukor returned from his trip and after conferring with him on our present and future production plans. I have been with Paramount for the last five and one-half years and I am in a position to say that at no time during that association has Paramount been in a more successful position.

"Today the spirit of everyone connected with Paramount is one of cooperation. I regret very much that any rumors have been printed as facts."

Warners Drop Radio Script Plan

Warner Brothers-First National Thursday announced its decision to discontinue supplying radio script versions of its motion pictures to small stations throughout the country.

The move, according to the studio, is predicated on the finding that these broadcasts, many of which assertedly have been inexpertly presented owing to circumstances beyond the control of the stations involved, are proving detrimental to the interests of the company and of exhibitors playing its product.

The decision, however, has no bearing upon other radio activities of the studio, which will continue, it was said.

More than 210 of the smaller stations are affected by the decision, which becomes effective immediately. Final production on which radio continuities will be provided under the discarded plan is "It's Love I'm After."

Decision to abandon this activity was reached following a national survey to determine reactions to the broadcasts by S. Charles Einfeld, director of advertising and publicity, and Robert S. Taplinger, new studio publicity head.

The survey, according to the studio, indicates that the smaller station broadcasts of the continuities have been generally inferior in quality. This has been due, it was said, to lack of trained casts and directors, and the lack of proper facilities on the part of the stations for giving the radio versions adequate presentation over the air.

In conclusion, the Warner statement said, the studio has decided that these broadcasts of its radio versions have failed in their mission to publicize constructively its productions and have proved harmful to the box-office in numerous instances. Transcription programs will be continued, however.

RKO Radio tentative plans for a studio radio show have been abandoned, it was announced this week in Hollywood. Studio executives estimate that the present radio "plugging" on other programs through use of RKO players and music is exceeding any possible advantages that a direct studio-radio tieup could provide. RKO recently signed Frank Healy, radio publicity and exploitation man, to handle all radio contacts.

Jack Oakie, Joe Penner and Mickey Mouse, Pepsodent program starting in January, all RKO names, are on regular broadcast and 15 guest appearances have been slated for other RKO players. They are Anne Shirley, Woodbury; Barbara Stanwyck and Miriam Hopkins, Chase and Sanborn; Ginger Rogers, Baker's and Lux; Adolphe Menjou, Al Jolson program; preview of "Damsels in Distress" and appearances of Fred Astaire, Joan Fontaine, Burns and Allen, and Ray Noble on "Hollywood Hotel," Friday; Bobby Breen, on Jessel program; Lily Pons, Vick's; Anna Neagle, Chase and Sanborn; Smith Ballew, "Hollywood Showcase," and Andrea Leeds on Chase and Sanborn, November 28th.

Meanwhile, Louis Sidney, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, denied in Hollywood that any other show is contemplated by the company outside the Maxwell House-MGM show.

Fox West Coast Theatre Circuit last week signed for a series of 15-minute programs over KGB, Mutual-Don Lee outlet in San Diego, Cal. Titled "The Movie Reporter," the program features highlights on local Fox offerings, interspersed with transcribed tunes from motion pictures. The theatres also have contracted for one spot announcement daily, six days a week for 52 weeks.

MIXING RACES BRINGS CENSORS: KUYKENDALL

MPTOA President Attacks ASCAP Fees, Court Fights, Form of Distribution Contract

Denunciations of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, the intermingling of races in motion pictures, the taking of industry problems to court and the form of contract used by distributors were contained in a one hour address delivered by Ed Kuykendall, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, at a luncheon in Denver.

Mr. Kuykendall is touring the country to talk with the exhibitor leaders and organizations on the MPTOA's status, policies and attitude toward trade practice reforms.

In his attack on ASCAP, Mr. Kuykendall charged that the license fees and the score charges of the organization are "little better than rackets." He contended the license fees are made under an antiquated copyright law and then demanded that the organization be abolished, charging that it is a monopoly.

Mr. Kuykendall urged careful discrimination in the mixing of races in films on the ground that indiscriminate handling of the matter is fostering the establishment of censorship boards.

Pleads for Conciliation Boards

Instead of having problems of the industry taken to legislatures and courts, the MPTOA president proposed that conciliation boards be established. He said he has been approached by Department of Justice officials who inquired as to why the industry did not set up a fair trade practice.

In speaking of the contracts used between distributors and exhibitors, Mr. Kuykendall charged that distributors had a contract with exhibitors, but the exhibitors did not have one with distributors.

A distributor, he explained, can tell an exhibitor what he must do but an exhibitor has no such recourse. Many of the ills of the industry, he added, could be assuaged by a 20 per cent cancellation clause in contracts.

Offers Percentage Solution

Explaining that he was against the playing of pictures on a percentage basis, Mr. Kuykendall said that if the plan is necessary, distributors should supply the entire program and share in losses as well as profits. Government price fixing for films, as demanded by some exhibitors, he said, is impossible.

Radio braodcasts by motion picture stars should be limited to time outside the peak theatre hours, Mr. Kuykendall declared.

In conclusion he warned against lack of national unity on industry problems, claiming it prevented legislators from passing adequate laws, and then appealed to his audience for financial and moral support of the national exhibitor organization.

Before visiting Denver Mr. Kuykendall spoke in Salt Lake City before members of the Intermountain Theatre Owners Association. After his Denver address he visited Omaha to talk to members of the MPTO of Nebraska and Western Iowa.

Directors of the Kansas-Missouri Theatre Owners Association were to confer with the national president in Kansas City on Wednesday and Thursday, and in addition on Thursday Mr. Kuykendall planned to appear at an open exhibitors' meeting at the Film Row headquarters of the Variety Club.

On Friday, Mr. Kuykendall speaks at a theatre owners' meeting at Hotel Coronado, St. Louis. Visits also are planned for Oklahoma City and Dallas, where he plans to end his nationwide tour.

ITOA Group Awaiting Word From MPTOA

The Independent Theatre Owners Association of New York is wondering why the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, presently championing a trade practice reform, has so far ignored the ITOA's proposal for a joint meeting of Allied and MPTOA to work out a code for presentation to distributors.

Harry Brandt, president of the ITOA, in an "open letter" in the ITOA's weekly Bulletin, declared that Nathan Yamins, president of national Allied, "is willing to enter upon such a plan on behalf of his association."

Indiana Owners Elect Officers

Election of officers by the Associated Theatre Owners of Indiana and a decision by Allied of Michigan not to appoint a successor to H. M. Richey, who recently resigned as general manager, were prominent among exhibitor activities this week.

The Indiana group named Maurice Rubin, of Indianapolis, as president; I. R. Holycross, of Anderson, first vice-president, and Frank B. Sanders, of Indianapolis, treasurer. Miss Norma Campbell continues as secretary. District vice-presidents are H. Lisle Kreighbaum, Rochester; Leonard Sowar, Muncie; Harry Markum, Indianapolis; Roy Harrold, Rushville, and H. H. Johnson, Madison.

Directors of Allied of Michigan decided not to name a successor to Mr. Richey, who is now associated with Cooperative Theatres of Michigan, when they held their first meeting since the organization's recent convention in Detroit. However, Pearl Sprott, formerly Mr. Richey's secretary, has been named business manager. The officers and directors are to handle all legislative matters.

A. J. Mason, of Sprinhill, N. S., was reelected president when the Maritimes Motion Picture Alliance held its annual convention in Halifax.

The annual convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Virginia will be held at Richmond January 27th.

Metro Builds College

For "A Yank at Oxford," starring Robert Taylor, Maureen O'Sullivan and Lionel Barrymore in the first feature of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer British Studios, a new Oxford College has been created.

Taylor, as the American undergraduate who makes athletic and romantic records at the old English University, has been given the background of "Cardinal College," a foundation which will enjoy a composite of the best architectural points of the older colleges and a Crest all of its own, designed by Ben Tennyson, great-grandson of the poet, who is assistant director of the film. Tennyson, an old Etonian and a Balliol scholar, has evolved something very striking in gold and crimson for the Taylor blazer.

Very great pains are being taken to make the picture true to University backgrounds. The Denham creation of Cardinal College will be found to harmonize closely with the actual Colleges of Oxford. In all the details of "bumping" races on the Isis, in the picture of the University boat-race and in the many scenes of university life, there will be a care in detail extending even to the half-blue blazers, the full-blue scarves. and the details of running kit in which Oxford differs from her great rival, Cambridge.

Sporting atmosphere apart, the Oxford of the film will be the Oxford of fact. Seventy gowns of various types already have been made; included are the purple-hooded, white ermined garbs of university dignitaries, the more common hoods of Master of Arts, the undergraduates' usually tattered gown. Color is provided by introduction of the surplices of the Oxford choir, which sings the May Day hymn from Magdalen Tower, the velvet-trimmed robes of the Head Proctor, master of university discipline. Resplendent also will be the Dean of Cardinal, played by Edmund Gwenn. The "Bulldogs," who chase the errant undergraduate at the Proctor's orders, also will be there. "A Yank at Oxford" will show America just what a great English University really is like.

Health Shorts

British short subject production will become of increased importance when the new Films Act comes into force. It provides for a "short against short" quota in place of the present system under which British feature footage may be counted against shorts. It is interesting, therefore, to note that enterprise already is being shown in this field, well ahead of the need.

Apart from the extension of programs by a number of "Documentary" producers, Gaumont-British practically has completed a series of six pictures in one reel each dealing with national health under the general title of "Strength and Beauty." Made in conjunction with the National Advisory Council on Physical Training, these films demonstrate health exercises, using famous athletes as models, and convey simple rules of healthful living. They are interesting not only in themselves, but as examples of a very important trend in British shorts production, encouraged by the situation to be created by the new legislation. That trend is away from the short comedy and straight "interest" film into the field of instructional and educational material.

Aino Berger Training

Aino Berger, Swedish star discovery of Irving Asher, who makes her debut in "Thistledown" at Warner-First National's Teddington studio, has been groomed in London for a month for her part opposite Keith Falkner.

Two English lessons and one singing lesson a day is the present schedule, with script discussions, hair-dressing tests and dress conferences to fill in the time. Additionally, Miss Berger has been in the London Television program, ahead of her first meeting with a film camera. On November 1st she sang three songs which will figure in the film.

On the floor at Teddington is the Claude Hulbert-Hal Walters vehicle, "The Viper," on which they have just shot a highlight comedy scene in which Walters is pinioned to an electric fan which rotates him rapidly above the head of his colleague and fellow crime detector.

Dog Star's Film

Scruffy, dog of uncertain pedigree who has made quite a hit by his incidental appearances in a number of British films, is being promoted from character to star status. The aim of Vulcan Films apparently is to build him into a national Rin-Tin-Tin. A special vehicle, based on a story by Marguerite Houghton, has been written under the title “Scruffy and Co., to display his sagacity.

Also featured will be a new boy discovery, Michael Gainsborough. Jack Melford and Joan Ponsford are the juveniles and Billy Merson, a top-liner in British variety for many years, will have a comedy crook part and sing a number or two.

Randall Faye is directing at Cricklewood with Desmond Dickinson in charge of photography. Butcher's Film Service will distribute in England.

Gracie Fields' Latest

Gracie Fields is busy playing scenes for the first of her films to be made with a view to the special requirements of the American market. “He was Her Man” is being made at Denham by Twentieth Century-Fox.

The opening set reproduced the Scala theatre in Melbourne, Australia, in 1887. Gracie appeared as a vocalist of the period, dressed in a high-necked, long-skirted frock with one of those wide feathered hats, and sang a sentimental ballad, “My Only Romance,” to an audience which also had something of a period appearance about it.

Victor McLaglen, now in his first scenes in a British studio for more than 10 years, made a personal appearance at the Gaumont, Haymarket, preceding the display of “Wee Willie Winkie.”

Itemized

Ralph Reader is making personal appearances at four theatres a night on the release of “The Gang Show.”

PROTESTS PILE UP AS BRITISH QUOTA BILL IS GIVEN ITS SECOND READING

Exhibitors, Labor and Federation's Film Group Demand Appeals Committee and Prevention of American Control

by BRUCE ALLAN
in London

British exhibitors, labor groups and the Film Group of the Federation of British Industries went into action early in protest against the new Films Bill, presented last Wednesday in the House of Commons by Eustace Stanley, president of the Board of Trade, and sent to committee.

John Maxwell, head of Associated British Pictures, headed a joint delegation this week before the Board of Trade, to demand provision for an appeals committee, to "prevent American control of production" and to protect British employees.

Six labor unions which have objected to the Bill's present content are the Association of Cine Technicians, the British Association of Film Directors, the Electrical Trades Union, Film Artistes Association, National Association of Theatrical and Kine Employees, and the Screen Writers Association.

The Cinematograph Exhibitors Association is pressing its original demand for a viewing or quality test for Quota purposes. It opposes the Government-approved cost test basis. It also favors a new British Cinema Industries Council, as an appeal group.

The Kinematograph Renters Society, too, is not satisfied by the Bill. It wants extension of the proposed double quota provision on the basis of an increased quota value being applied proportionately to increased cost. This proposed double quota clause now provides that films costing £22,500 ($112,500) in labor costs alone may count double for quota purposes.

The second reading of the Bill came up Thurday of this week.

The new Films Bill provides that a quality test, originally rejected in the Board of Trade's White Paper on the proposed legislation, has been invoked only on films costing less than £7,500 in labor costs, or £15,000 in total, for determination of eligibility for the distributor quota.

The provision stipulates that such films will be passed if they have "a special value for purposes of entertainment." The use of the clause, it is indicated in certain quarters, will depend largely on the spirit of the administration.

With virtually that single exception the measure as introduced follows almost exactly the stipulations in the White Paper. The quota percentages remain the same as in the original plan, dropping from 20 per cent as at present to 15 per cent for the first year for exhibitors. During the 10-year period of the proposed bill the exhibitor quota will be 10 per cent for the first year of the new law, beginning April 1, 1940, and rising progressively to a high of 25 per cent.

The Distributors' Quota

For distributors the quota will run from 15 per cent in the first year to 30 per cent finally. The dropping to 15 per cent for the current season is to offset any possible disturbance. The present law expires in September, 1938, and the new legislation is expected to be made effective as of April 1, 1940. The separate short subject quota rises during the term of the law from five to 15 per cent for exhibitors and 10 to 20 per cent for distributors, according to the bill.

The bill reviews the various quota provisions since 1929, and suggests the possibility of modification after four years.

The quality clause, providing for review of quality to determine quota eligibility, was sponsored by the CEA but was rejected by the Board of Trade in the White Paper as being uncertain. The cost test, espoused by the KRS, was approved. It provides that films costing £7,500 or more in labor costs alone, estimated at one-half the total production cost, would be entitled to registration for the distributor quota.

Under the new stipulation the quality test apparently would be applied to films whose labor costs are less than £7,500, to determine distributor quota eligibility. A film costing £22,500 in labor costs will rank double for quota purposes. No cost test is applicable to short subjects.

After the second formal reading, the measure was to be referred back to committee until November 15, when it will be brought out again for general discussion, according to present plans.

At a conference of representatives of the Film Group of the Federated British Industries, the CEA and the six labor unions, it was agreed that the Board of Trade should be approached with a request for a new body, the British Cinema Industries Council, instead of the films commission as suggested in the original Moyne Report. Under the plan the council would consider matters referred to it, and would not supersede the suggested advisory committee. The council also would have the power of publicizing matters brought before it. The general aim is the right of the British industry to appeal to an independent body if the films act in operation favors American interests.

The belief is expressed in some quarters that the British Government will concede to a stronger controlling body with a view to the necessity of maintaining British footage and providing against American control.

Bernhard Retiring

C. F. Bernhard, managing director of Union Cinemas, Ltd., is retiring from the company as a result of the recent deal whereby Mr. Maxwell of Associated British Pictures, Ltd., acquired 51 per cent of the ordinary and "A" ordinary shares of the circuit.

Newsreel Organization

A new newsreel association has been formed here, including Gaumont British News, Movietone News, Pathe News and Universal Newsreel.

The association has closed a deal with the Government and other organizations for the control of special facilities on a rotating system, whereby one reel will cover certain events for all, from specified and probably preferred positions. Paramount, although not included in the group, is eligible to join, while the new National News, now undergoing reorganization, is not.

It is believed here that the exclusion of National News amounts to a move to kill the potential competition of the latter virtually before its birth, by excluding it from special positions and compelling it to work in isolation.

Blank Film Imports Increase

Official figures show an increase in the importation of blank film into England in the eight months from January to August, and a decrease in the importation of exposed film. The comparative figures on blank film for the period show 45,806,934 feet in 1937; 42,594,428 in 1936, and 42,127,174 in 1935.

The exposed film import comparison shows 13,709,102 feet in 1937; 15,296,379 in 1936, and 13,603,583 in 1935. Exports of exposed film for the same period show the following comparison: 1937, 14,752,445 feet; 1936, 14,831,600; 1935, 18,789,365. Re-exported from England during the period were: 1937, 5,033,563 feet; 1936, 7,234,840; 1935, 3,580,521.

Want Free Sound Track

Application has been made to the Import Duties Advisory Committee to place on the free list sound track negatives in a foreign language. The concession would benefit specialized theatres playing "art" films from the Continent.

A United Front

Formation of a united front of exhibiting interests against the recent decision of the Kinematograph Renters Society to supply "A" films on percentage only, advanced a stage further when principals of the leading circuits were in informal conference with officials of the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association.

Messrs. John Maxwell (Associated British Pictures), Arthur Jarratt (Gaumont British), and Oscar Deutsch (Odeon), representing a total of approximately 1,000 theatres, were the circuit chiefs. C. P. Metcalfe, president; Ken Nyman, vice-president; T. H. Fligelstone, past president, and W. R. Fuller, general secretary, were from the CEA.

This unofficial committee represented British exhibiting interest 100 per cent. The CEA includes practically every theatre in the country. The circuits are members, but their special interests often are opposed to those of the independents. Hence their potential association with a rental campaign is momentous.

Until the result of this exchange of views is known, the position is that the KRS resolution is operative so far as distributors are concerned, but is rejected by exhibitors, who have been advised by the CEA to continue to book on a flat basis.

Modified Policy Predicted

Of various possible endings to this deadlock one envisaged in Wardour Street this week was that the KRS would agree to modify a declared policy. Seen as important factors governing their ultimate decision were the facts that one prominent non-KRS distributor, Associated British Pictures, publicly had denounced the "all-percentage" policy, that another major distributor, Twentieth Century-Fox, is not a member of the KRS, and that within the society itself there are declared to be divided views.

A way out for the KRS appears to be provided by the fact that the "all percentage" ruling was nominally aimed entirely at the elimination of programs including two "A" films. It has been pointed out that this end could equally be obtained by a direct refusal to book such programs or by the limitation to them of the new percentage rule.

Calls It Issue of Rentals

All the signs indicate that the CEA intends to force the issue as one of rentals pure and simple, and adherence of the KRS to its resolution will be taken by exhibitors to indicate a general desire to raise prices and will be fought as such. A move for lower rentals had been inaugurated by Major A. J. Gale before

ANSWER TO QUESTION NO. 91

Bluebook School Question No. 91 was: What tools would you consider essential to the tool kit of a first class projectionist, not including expensive testing instruments?

Names are omitted in order to have as much space as possible for the views of different men. Evans and Rau say:

"One eight- and one six-inch crescent wrench. One one-inch, one three-quarter-inch, one five-eighth-inch, one half-inch and one three-eighth-inch spanner wrench. One ten-inch monkey and one ten-inch Stillson wrench. One electric soldering iron, with can of flux, roll of rosin-core soldering wire, and a roll of insulating tape. One breast drill and suitable assortment of drills. One tin snip. One pair scissors. One long handle screwdriver with thin blade and one with wide blade. One short handle screwdriver with thin and one with wide blade. One medium size with magnetized blade. One toothbrush for sprockets. Two oil cans. One thermometer. One pair cutting pliers with insulated handle. One pair long-nose pliers. Two pairs gas pliers for handling carbons. One claw, and one ballpeen hammer. One small wooden mallet. [Rawhide, copper or lead is better.—F.H.R.]. One T-square. One six-inch extension ruler. One 60-foot steel tape. One adjustable hacksaw and blades. One set of punches. One steel vise [with brass or copper lining for jaws.—F.H.R.]. Files of assorted sizes and kinds, including one rasp."

I would remark that such tools as a vise, files, hacksaw, oil cans, soldering iron, breast drill and drills, and all tools indispensable to the work, should be supplied by the theatre, though where more than one man is employed the objection is raised by managers that frequently just before some man quits, tools become unaccountably "lost."

In one-man, or even two-men rooms, however, this can be taken care of by having the man or men sign a receipt for the tools, all of which are listed, and a cupboard with substantial lock provided for their storage. The tools may then be checked when a man leaves the service and the cost of any missing deducted from his pay, or equally from the pay of both men if there be two and both denies losing the tool or tools. Nothing unfair in that. But regardless of whom the tools belong to, the storage locker is essential. Most emphatically it will be to the theatre's best interest to provide it. No sane man will purchase tools or assume responsibility for tools owned by others which he must leave lying around unprotected when off duty.

"I don't mind admitting I found this question difficult to answer. Opinions differ so widely as to just what the repair duties of projectionists should include. Many of the men manage to get by after a fashion with a ten-cent screwdriver and a pair of questionable pliers, which too often have been mooched from someone else. Such men are content to call in a service engineer every time some little thing goes haywire. It is cold fact that many such men are occupying jobs in some of the finest projection rooms to be found; men who are demanding and receiving top-notch salaries. An actual case of this sort was cited in your Comments in the September 18 issue of BETTER THEATRES. The projection room had three projectors, two amplifiers and a total crew of 15 projectionists, three to a shift. Yet a sound engineer was called in three times in ten days, and for trivial troubles, too. Disgraceful! True, none of the trouble the engineer was called in to remedy required even one tool to take care of, but it does show that responsibility for taking care of equipment is taken pretty lightly by some who pose as crack men, or at least who occupy positions that should call for our best talent.

"Possibly my views are extreme in the other direction, but there they are. It obviously is the duty of projectionists to maintain all equipment under his care in good repair and adjustment, even to the extent of installing new parts —at least complete units, such as intermittent movements. Replacing individual intermittent parts, however, as well as a complete overhauling, should be done only in a qualified repair shop. But it is my opinion that the projectionist should be equipped with tools for and able to do even this kind of work in case of emergency.

"Furthermore, I believe it is a part of the rightful duty of projectionists, upon request, to give managers detailed, authoritative advice concerning contemplated changes in projection equipment, including screen surfaces, screen dimensions and location, suitable for use in the particular theatre; or in case of remodeling or building a new theatre, supply competent advice concerning projection room location and equipment, with definite, detailed reasons for each recommendation made. To do this it is often necessary to make small-scale drawings, and the few necessary, inexpensive tools required should be owned by him. Then, too, there are small jobs, such as masking projection ports, building sound traps for projection ports, or extending shields to block objectionable light in the projection room, as well as other things which the projectionist should be able to plan and do more effectively than anyone else. Personally, I do not regard it as beneath the dignity of a first-class projectionist to do such work, it being so intimately connected with his regular work. The added comfort will more than amply repay him for both the tools and the effort required.

"The foregoing is intended as explanation as to why the tools I shall list are requisite to the tool kit of first-class projectionists. My own kit contains many more, all of which I have found of use in projection work. The tools are as follows:

"One Bluebook of Projection, by F. H. Richardson. The most valuable tool in any projectionist's kit.

"Thirteen wrenches, open-end type on one end; 12-point box type on other end, in sizes every 1/16-inch from ¼-inch to 1-inch.

Four socket wrenches, sizes 3/16, ¼, 5/16, and ⅜-inch with screwdriver type handle.

"One 6-inch crescent wrench, for holding same size bolt that other wrench is used on nut at same time, or for odd sizes.

"One Simplex spanner wrench for adjusting intermittents. Special wrenches for individual equipments are usually furnished with the equipment, but the projectionist will save himself trouble by having the more common ones himself.

"Four hexagon set-screw wrenches, sizes 1/16, 3/32, ⅛, and 3/16-inch.

"Five pin-punches, sizes 3/64, 1/16, 3/32, ⅛, and 3/16-inch.

"Two copper punches, sizes ⅛ and ¼-inch for driving out shafts.

"One center punch.

"Two cold chisels, ¼ and ½-inch blades.

"Three angle screwdrivers, sizes 4, 6, and 8-inch.

"Five screwdrivers—and I don't mean blunt chisels that will slip and fuzz up the head of every screw they are used on. My screwdrivers are all ground so that the faces of the blade are parallel for the depth of the screw-slot. True, such a blade will not stand the abuse that a blunt, tapered one will, but really good steel so sharpened will twist off any screw not larger than the screwdriver blade, and without slipping out of or fuzzing the edges of the screw slot. What more can we rightfully expect of a screwdriver? Sizes, one 10 or 12-inch with ⅜-inch blade, one 10-inch with ¼-inch blade, one 8-inch with 3/16-inch blade, one 4-inch with ⅛-inch blade, and one 4-inch with large handle and ¼-inch blade for a good grip in tight places.

"Two screw-starters, ⅛ and ¼-inch blades, 4 and 8-inch handles, respectively. Can be purchased, but I still prefer the kind made by mounting two short pieces of alarm-clock spring in a slot sawed in the end of an old or cheap screwdriver shank. Watch mainspring is good for small one.

"Three pairs of pliers, one small (about 5-inch) snipe-nose, one 7-inch electrician's, and one 8-inch slip-joint for handling carbons.

"Four files, one 8-inch flat, one 4-inch flat, one 6-inch round tapered from ⅛ to ¼-inch diameter, and one 4-inch three-cornered, all with appropriate sized handles.

"One pair tin snips, 8-inch or larger.

"One pair 4-inch blunt-nose scissors for trimming or splicing film.

BLUEBOOK SCHOOL QUESTION NO. 97

(A) Why is a sound system frequently divided into several panels and cabinets?

(B) Does this division correspond to technical differences in nature of the work performed?

(C) Divide a sound system into six parts in accordance with the technical functions of the apparatus.

OVERBUILDING PROTEST

the question of "double 'A'" bills had been raised. The controversy which has now arisen is likely to stiffen the ranks of exhibitors, who will be considerably more formidable if the preliminary talks with circuits are followed by the formulation of a common campaign with these big buyers.

Want Overbuilding Defense

The Provincial Entertainment Proprietors and Managers Association, which represents stage acts mainly but has some cinema interests in its membership, has addressed a letter to Members of Parliament in regard to the Films Bill, in which it states a desire that quality rather than cost shall be the qualifying factor for British film registration, and criticizes adversely the Government's intention to exclude provision against overbuilding from the measure.

The association urges that Parliament reconsider this point and suggests that "definite and clear powers be given to local authorities to refuse licenses where redundancy is threatened." It points out that license authorities already have legal powers to refuse recognition to new Halls, on the ground of redundancy, but that some of them refuse to act on that ground.

CEA Wins First Round

The CEA, which regards overbuilding as a major issue, has obtained the consent of the entertainments committee of the London County Council to receive a deputation on the subject. This is a considerable success, which will be still more considerable if the exhibitor representatives persuade the committee to accept their own view of the problem. The LCC, apart from legislating for the important London area, sets the pace for licensing authorities throughout the country, who very generally model policy on that of the metropolitan authority.

In these circumstances special interest attached to a hearing, by the LCC committee, of objections to the erection of a new Odeon in Hackney, in North East London. CEA headquarters were present in force, but found the result not too encouraging. The committee granted the application, after less than two minutes' discussion, in face of evidence that 12 theatres in the area regarded the possibility of new opposition with apprehension. In doing so they appear to have confirmed an earlier decision that as a licensing body they are not concerned with "commercial apprehensions."

Oppose American Technicians

R. A. Butler, Parliamentary Secretary to the Ministry of Labor, this week received a deputation from the Association of Cine Technicians on the question of the employment of foreign (meaning American) technicians in British studios.

The association had had several conferences with the ministry on this question, but now put it forward as a matter of urgency, largely on the grounds of a state of serious unemployment among British technicians. Figures prepared by the association show 223 disengaged at the end of September, as against 40 in 1936.

The pith of the case is that, in the case of many American technicians, the conditions under which labor permits are granted have not been strictly complied with. The chief requirements are that the appointment is necessary, that an attempt has been made to obtain a British subject to fill it, and that no British subject is displaced by the "alien."

So far the Ministry of Labor has not offered any serious opposition to the importation of technicians or directors, though one director, an American, recently had his permit cancelled after making a number of pictures in England over several years. Recently, it is said, the refusals of permits has shown an increased percentage to the total applications.

Bernerd Cables Denial

Jeffrey Bernerd, Gaumont British executive, cabled MOTION PICTURE HERALD from London this week, denying he had mentioned John Maxwell, head of Associated British Pictures, during a recent GB shareholders' meeting. Mr. Bernerd said he neither suggested nor even thought that Mr. Maxwell was associated with Charles Nordon, who, acting for a stockholders' committee, moved an amendment rejecting the financial report and demanding a Board of Trade investigation.

Tools Essential To Projectionist

"Two hammers, one 8-ounce head ballpeen and one 16-ounce claw.

"One hand drill with ¼-inch chuck.

"Four twist drills, sizes 1/16, ⅛, 3/16, and ¼-inch.

"One hacksaw with medium blades.

"One keyhole saw.

"One handsaw, about 18-inch is large enough.

"One folding rule, 4 or 6-foot, or steel tape.

"One steel V-block for supporting sprockets or gears to drive out pins.

"One small (about 12-inch) level for motor-generators, turntables, etc.

"One dental mirror.

"One small oil can with 5 or 6-inch spout and small opening. (The pistol-grip force pump type is preferred by many, but the majority of men are too hard on the trigger. Better results are usually obtained with the kind that just won't part with more than a drop or two at a time.)

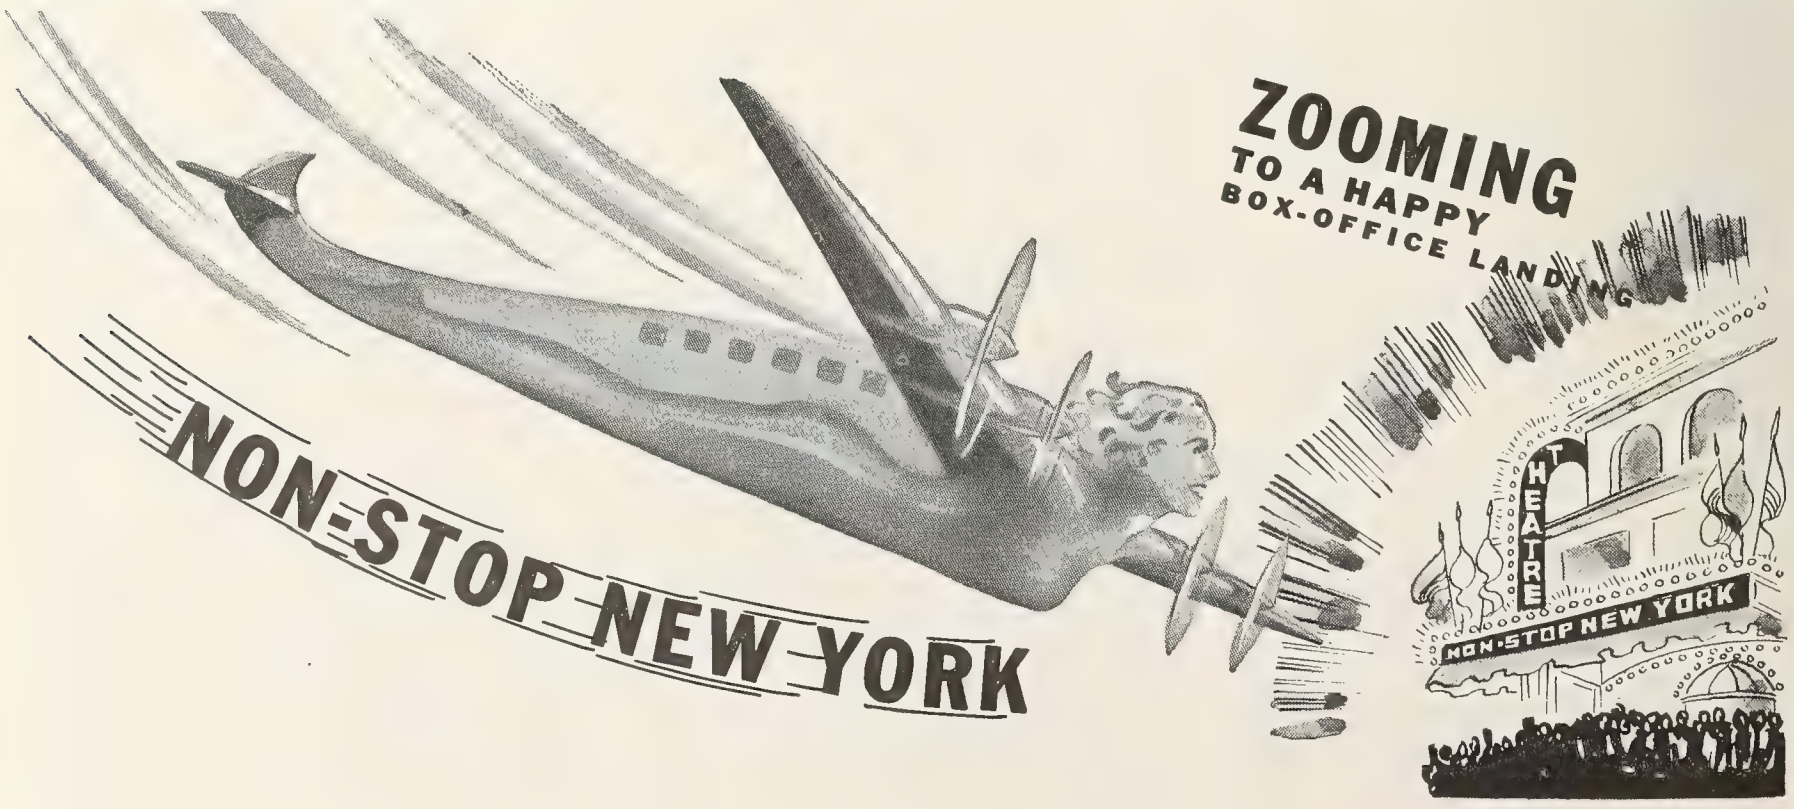
"One glass eye-dropper in small box or carton, for filling intermittent oil wells, sleeve bearings, etc.

"One T-square (can be made from straight yardstick and small wood crossbar).

"One 5- or 6-inch 45-degree celluloid triangle with protractor markings.

"One small pencil compass.

"One flashlight.



"One test lamp for 110 and 220 volts, or a patented tester using small neon tube, which is more sensitive.

"One test buzzer with flashlight batteries for tracing wiring. (Not to be used on sound circuits containing transformers or choke coils).

"One good electric soldering iron.

"One set of high resistance headphones.

"Even though expensive testing equipment was not to be included in this question, I feel that the first-class projectionist should own one piece of relatively expensive equipment because of the multitude of uses it will serve. That is a really good multiple-range meter which can be used to read a wide range of d.c. volts, d.c. amperes, d.c. milliamperes, several ranges of a.c. volts, a.c. amperes, a.c. milliamperes, and with a conversion chart supplied by its manufacturer, can be used to read decibels. Such a meter will cost most of us a week's salary or more, but certainly is worth every cent of it."

DUPLICATING FILMS

MORE ARGUMENTS OVER "SEX", POLITICAL FILMS

Ohio Director of Education Endorses Spanish Pictures but British Board Says "No"

A new crop of arguments arouse this week over socalled "sex" films and pictures reputedly carrying political propaganda, extending the controversies to London, Ohio, Argentina, New York and Canada.

After withholding decisions on applications for censorship permits, E. N. Dietrich, Ohio State director of education and ex-officio of the state censorship board, ruled in favor of the exhibition of "Heart of Spain" and "Spanish Earth," both depicting shots reputedly actually taken of firing on the Spanish Civil War front. The pictures were reviewed by Dietrich together with a group of so-called representative citizens, but the press was excluded from the screening room.

"The Spanish Earth" cannot be shown in England, the British Board of Censors ruled this week.

This picture, also "Spain in Flames" and other similar Spanish war subjects have been the causes of screening-permit arguments in recent weeks in a number of places.

Argentine Censors Act

In a wave of unprecedented censoring activity, the Argentina Board of Censorship the other day refused permission for the exhibition of Universal's "Road Back," sequel to "All Quiet on the Western Front," about the post-war period in Germany, and then acted similarly against the "Sabotage" war subject from the London studios of Gaumont-British Pictures, GB releasing the film in South America under the title of "A Woman Alone."

Action was taken against "Road Back" at the insistence of the Ministries of Justice and of Foreign Affairs, after Argentina Fascistic newspapers had charged that the film contained Communistic propaganda. The GB film was banned, the censors said, because it was held to upset public law and order by teaching conspiracy and terroristic technique.

Ontario Board Orders Cuts

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Madame X," with Gladys George, received a trimming at the hands of the Ontario Board of Censors, who ordered substantial deletions after two first-run Toronto theatres had arranged for showings.

An injunction forcing the city to return "Sex Madness" to the State Theatre and restraining Mayor Lee D. Schroy and Police Chief Frank Boss from interfering with the operations of the theatre was granted in Akron, Ohio, by Common Pleas Judge Frank H. Harvey to John H. Romweber, theatre owner. The injunction also forbids officials to revoke the license of the theatre pending a final hearing on the case.

Evidently for religious reasons, Warner's "The Life of Emile Zola" has been banned by the Quebec censor, where the population is predominantly French-Canadian.

Protest French Film Ban

Arthur Garfield Hays, attorney for the distributor, has requested the attorney general of New York to rule on the question whether an uncensored version of a film can be shown to an invited audience which includes newspaper critics. His action followed a ruling of the New York County district attorney that a screening of an uncensored version of "Club des Femmes" to critics and guests at the 55th St. Playhouse in New York City was illegal.

The district attorney's ruling was given after the Motion Picture Division of the State Department of Education (the censor board) had complained that the screening was a violation of the law.

Appellate Court Upholds Ruling

The appellate division of the New York State supreme court, third department, in Albany, virtually wrote "finis" to the strenuous efforts of Eureka Productions, Inc., New York, to win approval for showing of the socalled "sex film," "Ecstasy," last week, when it unanimously upheld the Department of Education and Commissioner Frank P. Graves, who had banned the theme as indecent, immoral and tending to corrupt morals.

In hearing arguments on Eureka's application for a writ of certiorari against the Regents of the University of the State of New York and Frank P. Graves, Commissioner of Education (controlling the State censor board), the appellate division last month reviewed the film personally in the courtroom. This unprecedented move had led some producers to believe that possibly the appellate division would curb the licensing "life or death" powers of the State Motion Picture (censorship) Division.

Justice Leon C. Rhodes read the decision, which contained the significant statement that, "The picture unduly emphasizes the carnal side of the sex relationship and the Regents of the University of the State and the Commissioner of Education, having made a decision which we feel is amply supported by the facts, it should be confirmed."

Reviews History of Film

Justice Rhodes reviewed the history of "Ecstasy" from the time when reviewers of the Motion Picture Division rejected application for a license on March 17, 1936. He pointed out that Eureka Productions, with Henry Pearlman as its counsel, had filed an appeal with the Commissioner of Education and that Commissioner Frank P. Graves personally reviewed the film and listened to arguments in behalf of the petitioner as well as those of Irwin Esmond, director of the Motion Picture Division.

Another important contention raised by Attorney Pearlman and ruled upon by the appellate division was that the proper test is not in certain scenes taken from the context but on the dominant effect of the picture as a whole.

Justice Rhodes ruled that petitioner should pay $50.00 court costs and disbursements. Presiding Justice James P. Hill and Associate Justices Daniel V. McNamme, F. Walter Bliss and Christopher J. Heffernan concurred in the decision.

Since action of the appellate division was unanimous, Eureka Productions, Inc. will have to request formal permission of the court to carry the case to the Court of Appeals. In court circles, observers point out that the Court of Appeals rarely reverses a unanimous decision of the appellate division.

The appellate division's decision likewise confirmed the powers of the Motion Picture Division and the Commissioner of Education to deny licenses under Section 1082, Article 43, Education Law.

Independents Plan Chance Game Fight In New York Area

Although the first definite step in eliminating chance games from theatres in the Greater New York area has been postponed indefinitely, the Independent Theatre Owners Association of New York announced this week its campaign against games is "far from finished."

Several meetings are planned for the near future at which discussions will be held on the possibility of inaugurating the no-chance-game policy regionally instead of throughout the city at one time.

Other activities in relation to chance games this week included a Minnesota supreme court ruling that Bank Night is legal in the state; an opinion by F. E. Reagan, assistant attorney general of Missouri, that Screeno, Bank Night, Cash Night and other similar games are in the category of lotteries; and the indictment of a Statesboro, Georgia, exhibitor for operating Bank Night.

The ITOA, in its official publication, The Independent, explained the reason for the postponement in eliminating chance games in Flatbush, the proposed first step in its drive. After the announcement of the Flatbush plan, The Independent points out, "RKO stated that it had partners in that area which prevented it from acceding to the proposition. RKO said that it had an agreement not to do anything in the Kenmore which the rest of the circuit did not do. So, for the moment, that plan is tabled."

The publication continued by explaining that the drive will be continued and again published a "pledge card" for exhibitors to sign.

The Minnesota ruling was a reversal of a lower court decision, convicting Joe Stern, head of Majestic Pictures, Minneapolis, and Bank Night distributor. The higher court held operation of the game in accordance with instructions of Affiliated Enterprises is legal.

A double blow to advocates of chance games was struck in Georgia. H. H. Macon, operator of the Georgia and State at Statesboro, was indicted by a Bulloch County grand jury for "operating and maintaining a scheme for the hazarding of money." The bill identified the game as "Bank Night." The second blow came from the Thomas County grand jury, which recommended that bank night at Thomasville theatres be discontinued.

In stating that Screeno is a lottery, the Missouri official, Mr. Reagan, declared that the free distribution of tickets entitling holders to participate in the distribution of prizes does not relieve the game of its lottery features.

Omaha exhibitors have indicated that, because of the recent supreme court decision that bank night is a lottery, no attempts will be made to revive the game.

At Oxford, Mississippi, Taylor H. McElroy, circuit judge, granted the Ritz theatre a writ of prohibition against the city to stop further prosecution for conducting bank night. The hearing revolved around the legality of a city ordinance.

Southio Theatres, Inc., has been ordered by M. O. Burns, judge of the common pleas court at Hamilton, Ohio, to furnish data covering the operation of Sweepstakes at the Paramount theatre, Middletown. The demand was made by Sarah Stein in her suit challenging the legality of the game.

$1,000,000 for "Monty" a News Headline Fable

The $1,000,000 Hollywood film career of John (Laverne Moore) Montague, so called "golf wizard" and social "pal" of the aristocracy of California screenland, evidently exists only in the newspaper headlines which brought him nationwide attention during his Elizabethtown, N. Y., trial, and subsequent acquittal on charges of robbery and highway slugging which allegedly took place some seven years ago.

Press wire services from Hollywood reported that "Monty" Montague was under management contract to Everett Crosby, brother of Bing, and that $1,000,000 would be accruing to the mystery man of Hollywood golf during the next seven years. He was mentioned immediately for a part in Paramount's "The Badge of Policeman O'Roon," starring Bing Crosby, and also for the title role in another Paramount picture built around Paul Bunyan, legendary figure of the North Woods.

"Held in abeyance," was Paramount studio's comment regarding the Montague filming plans, according to Associated Press, which added that the company indicated it would go ahead with a series of golfing short subjects showing how "Monty" shoots in the low 60's, for a reputed $20,000.

Mr. Montague also was mentioned for guest appearances with Bing Crosby's weekly radio programs. This was denied by the sponsors, Kraft Phenix Cheese.

Then the press reported that Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, had "banned" Montague's appearances in motion pictures. Mr. Hays denied that any such prohibition existed, telling reporters, while on a visit to President Roosevelt at the Roosevelt home in Hyde Park that, "The matter has never been brought to our attention."

United Press reported that Bing Crosby and Emanuel Cohen, Paramount producer of Crosby films, "conferred with representatives of the Hays office, who 'prevailed upon Crosby and Cohen not to put Montague in the Crosby picture.'"

Whether or not John Montague makes $1,000,000 in motion pictures, International News Service reported from Hollywood that "he's going to be given a rousing welcome when he returns to Hollywood," in a few days.

Loew's Opens Bronx Houses

Loew's opened the new Post Road theatre and the remodeled Dyckman theatre, both in the Bronx, New York, last week. The Post Road was constructed by the circuit at a cost of $500,000, and seats 1,400. The Dyckman was taken over by the circuit in late summer. The two additions give Loew's 70 houses in the metropolitan area.

Leasim Resigns from RKO

Harry W. Leasim has resigned as managing director of RKO Radio Films International, Ltd.

Brower Returns With Footage from Africa

After spending five months in Africa, Otto Brower, director of "Stanley Livingstone" for Twentieth Century-Fox, returned Monday on the Queen Mary with 60,000 feet of film which will be reduced to two reels for the seven reel feature.

Arriving with Mr. Brower were Sidney Wagner, cameraman; F. E. Johnston, production manager; Jack Bryon and Sven Borg, who doubled for the principal actors; Edward Collins and Joseph Farley, assistant cameramen; Bruce Hunsacker and Henry Gerzen, technicians. The group left immediately for the coast.

Three Dates Set For Trust Cases, One an Appeal

Dates were set this week for hearing three anti-trust law arguments between independent exhibitors and major circuits and distributors. Judge Robert C. Baltzell set November 22nd as the date for hearing oral arguments in the Gary Theatre Company suit against practically all major distributors, Balaban and Katz, and the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, in United States district court in Indianapolis. The Morse and Rothenberg action in New York was adjourned to November 15th, and the appeal of defendants in the Government's Dallas case is expected to be filed by December 13th, the final day of appeal.

At the Indianapolis hearing in the Gary Theatre suit, last Friday, Louis Phillips of the Paramount home office legal staff, said that Paramount, a defendant, had none of the pictures designated by the complainant completed by August 1st and, according to the provisions of the contract, were excluded from last season release for that reason. Completion of the pictures was made impossible, he said, by delays in production resulting from a Hollywood influenza epidemic during the year which incapacitated stars, directors, technicians and other production personnel, and to studio labor difficulties.

The adjournment of the Morse and Rothenberg anti-trust action against eight major distributors and the Maine and New Hampshire and M. A. Shea circuits, which has been under way for the past two weeks, was taken to permit the preparation of a stenographic report of the hearings up to this point. The Morse and Rothenberg action asks triple damages of $2,100,000. It was originally filed in federal court in Boston and alleges inability to obtain any run of major company product for seven of the plaintiff's theatres, all of which are in competition with the defendant circuit.

The decision of the Dallas federal district court prohibits the distributors from entering into contracts with first run houses with the understanding that pictures will not be sold to subsequent run theatres that do not charge a specified minimum admission scale. Several of the defendant distributors have not made known their desire to appeal from the Dallas decision but well over a majority of the defendants have decided in favor of the appeal.

Goldwyn, Korda Remain Silent On UA Purchase

The same official silence that has enveloped all planning for the purchase of the controlling United Artists stock by Samuel Goldwyn and Alexander Korda continued to prevail this week despite the fact that prospective purchasers have held numerous conferences in an attempt to work out details for the transaction.

Statements from both principals have been limited to an admission that they are discussing the details under which they would exercise options which they hold on the stock owned by Charles Chaplin, Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks. The options, which expire December 21st, call for a purchase price of $6,000,000. Mr. Chaplin is insisting upon his $2,000,000 in cash but Miss Pickford and Mr. Fairbanks have been reported as being willing to take five-eighths of their share in cash and the remainder in stock.

In addition to Mr. Goldwin and Mr. Korda, E. H. Lever, representing Prudential Assurance Company, of England; David Rose, financial representative of Samuel Goldwyn, and Maurice Silverstone, United Artists manager for the United Kingdom, have sat in on the conferences.

Although no official announcement has been given out, reports on the progress being made were to the effect that the transaction is near completion. The Prudential company is seen as the chief backer among a group expected to supply the necessary money.

Mr. Goldwyn, although a guest of honor at a luncheon given by Lynn Farnol, his former press representative, at the Rainbow Room, maintained silence on the pending transaction. Mr. Farnol is now with Donahue & Coe, advertising agency which handles the United Artists account. Mr. Farnol described the luncheon as "merely a gesture of appreciation toward my former boss."

The guests, some twenty-five in number, were representative of the newspaper and business press.

Harris Heads Plans for Ira Cohn Testimonial

Frank J. Harris this week was appointed head of the committee on arrangements for the testimonial dinner to be tendered Ira H. Cohn, Pittsburgh manager for Twentieth Century-Fox. The affair will be held December 6th at the William Penn Hotel. On December 6th, Mr. Cohn celebrates his 17th year in the industry and his ninth year as branch manager in Pittsburgh for Fox.

Mason Aide to Lohr

Frank E. Mason, vice-president in charge of station relations for National Broadcasting Company, last week was made assistant to Lenox R. Lohr, president. William S. Hedges, formerly manager of stations owned and operated by NBC, and more recently general manager and vice-president of the Crosley Radio Corporation interests, was appointed to fill the position vacated by Mr. Mason.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Columbia

LOST HORIZON: Ronald Colman, Jane Wyatt—Better by a lot than I expected. It is magnificently produced. It carries interest all the way through. There are five different angles to the story and every one fitted. The portrayal of the roles could not have been better. I cite the man that played the Grand Lama; he reached greatness.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Indiana. General patronage.

First National

DANCE, CHARLIE, DANCE: Stuart Erwin, Glenda Farrell, Allen Jenkins, Jean Muir—We put four stars in this picture as we cannot say which one is the best. As good a little picture as any exhibitor will want to show. Jenkins is at his best in this. Our only comment is "a dandy little comedy." Played October 20-21.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

OVER THE GOAL: William Hopper, June Travis—Double featured it and was glad I did. It pleased but I was afraid it wouldn't stand alone. Comedy was good, but the rest of the story was punk. Football shots were poor. The hero or star was too good at the game and caused my patrons to snicker at his runs and passes. Johnny Davis was good in this. Running time, 63 minutes. Played October 22-23.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minnesota. Rural and small town patronage.

THAT CERTAIN WOMAN: Bette Davis, Henry Fonda, Donald Crisp, Ian Hunter—This picture is all that we hoped for. With four such actors and actresses in the cast it cannot but be a wonderful show. However, this type of picture is no good in our spot as it is too heavy for our patronage. The show itself is wonderful. Miss Davis and Messrs. Hunter, Fonda and Crisp are excellent but the attendance is very, very poor. Running time, 90 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

THAT MAN'S HERE AGAIN: Hugh Herbert, Mary Maguire, Tom Brown—Just a light programer suitable for dual program. You won't miss anything by passing this one up. Played October 6-7.—A. G. Miller, Lyric Theatre, Atkinson, Neb. Rural patronage.

Grand National

SOMETHING TO SING ABOUT: James Cagney, Evelyn Daw—Jimmy did right well by himself in this one. Of course, as one could expect, it would be all Cagney, but he has a leading lady in Evelyn Daw that is easy on the eyes and has a good voice. The picture is okay, a lot better than some that we have run, and it got by although not to average business.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Indiana. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BETWEEN TWO WOMEN: Franchot Tone, Maureen O'Sullivan, Virginia Bruce—Well liked here. Not a new plot but well done. Some thought it unpleasant, but pleased about 80 per cent of Bank Night crowd, which is good.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

BETWEEN TWO WOMEN: Virginia Bruce, Maureen O'Sullivan, Franchot Tone—Talk about your dandy picture, here is one! We thought this one of the best of the year. Played October 8-9. Running time, 89 minutes.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Nebraska. Small town patronage.

BIG CITY: Spencer Tracy, Luise Rainer—A fine picture that pleased those that saw it. Did not draw.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

BROADWAY MELODY OF 1938: Eleanor Powell, Robert Taylor—I hope this is the last musical comedy we'll have to play for some time. They have no drawing power here. This was much too long. The comedy and dancing was OK, but why Taylor? Running time, 110 minutes. Played October 10-11-12.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minnesota. Rural and small town patronage.

CAPTAINS COURAGEOUS: Spencer Tracy, Freddie Bartholomew, Lionel Barrymore—A masterpiece. No regrets with this picture. Play it and be a proud exhibitor.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

CAPTAINS COURAGEOUS: Freddy Bartholomew, Spencer Tracy—Grand picture! Though very long, our patrons did not seem to mind it in the least. Played October 17-18. Running time, 116 minutes.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Nebraska. Small town patronage.

LONDON BY NIGHT: George Murphy, Rita Johnson, Eddie Quillan—Used this midweek to fair business. Patrons were surprised to see Eddie Quillan. Number of them asked why we do not see more of him. His performance in this picture was very good. Running time, 69 minutes. Played September 30-October 1.—R. W. Hornick, Grand Theatre, Huntingdon, Pa. General patronage.

NOBODY'S BABY: Patsy Kelly, Lyda Roberti, Robert Armstrong—A real stomach shaker. Our operators even got stitches. A natural for a dual bill.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

PARNELL: Clark Gable Myrna Loy—It drew very well on Sunday but was disappointing to majority of people. Consequently, no one came on Monday. People do not want to see true life stories when they are as sad as this.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

ROMEO AND JULIET: Norma Shearer, Leslie Howard, John Barrymore—This picture was played late, but did a smashing business just the same. We thought it a swell picture, the stars and producer sharing the glory. Why people in our town prefer "Romeo and Juliet" to the more modern pictures is beyond us. Played October 11-12.—C. O. Schuler, Heflin Theatre, Heflin, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

ROMEO AND JULIET: Norma Shearer, Leslie Howard—Not a money maker but draws in that class of patrons who seldom come. A school matinee admitting all high school pupils for 10c each helped to put it over.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

SARATOGA: Clark Gable, Jean Harlow—Think MGM were very wise in listening to the appeal of the many Harlow fans to do ahead with this picture. The substitute did very well considering she was "on the spot." And how it did draw. Best gross in many weeks. Played October 10-12. Running time, 94 minutes.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Nebraska. Small town patronage.

TOPPER: Constance Bennett, Cary Grant—Here's something to think about! Entirely different from the regular run and pleased very much. We thought it exceptional. Did extra business for midweek booking but, of course, had to because MGM thought we should pay more than we usually do for midweeks. Very entertaining. Played October 6-7. Running time, 97 minutes.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Nebraska. Small town patronage.

TOPPER: Cary Grant, Constance Bennett, Roland Young—Some did not like this while others thought it good entertainment. Grant-Bennett-Young makes a good combination. Running time, 97 minutes. Played October 4-6.—R. W. Hornick, Grand Theatre, Huntingdon, Pa. General patronage.

IN this, the exhibitors' own department, the theatremen of the nation serve one another with information on the box office performance of product for their mutual benefit. It is a service of the exhibitor for the exhibitor. Address all communications to —

Paramount

DOUBLE OR NOTHING: Bing Crosby, Martha Raye—Pleased, but was nowheres as good as Waikiki Wedding, and didn't do so well in drawing either. Running time, 90 minutes. Played October 17-18.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minnesota. Rural and small town patronage.

GREAT GAMBINI, THE: Akim Tamiroff, Marian Marsh—No good. Not liked by our patrons.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

HOPALONG RIDES AGAIN: William Boyd, George Hayes—Paramount is the tops with us on westerns. The photography and story in this series are so much better than those put out by others that there is no comparison. Just advertise "Hopalong Cassidy" and you will have a nice draw. Running time, 70 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

HOTEL HAYWIRE: Leo Carrillo, Mary Carlisle—Just a silly comedy. Sorta pleased those who liked their comedy simple. Played October 20-21. Running time, 66 minutes.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Nebraska. Small town patronage.

I MET HIM IN PARIS: Claudette Colbert, Melvyn Douglas, Robert Young—This will no doubt be classed as one of the outstanding comedies of the season. Business above average.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

MAKE WAY FOR TOMORROW: Beulah Bondi, Victor Moore—Even though the young folks didn't get much out of this picture, the grownups seemed to like it very much. We thought it was fine, although could have made a much more satisfactory ending, which we thought very weak. Played October 15-16. Running time, 73 minutes.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Nebraska. Small town patronage.

NORTH OF THE RIO GRANDE: William Boyd—Our patrons prefer "Hopalong" to any other western star. His popularity exceeds all others so far that there must be some reason other than the star himself. I believe that his popularity is partly due to the fact that the stories, direction and sets show these are planned features rather than quickies. We need more westerns of this type. Played October 16.—C. O. Shuler, Heflin Theatre, Heflin, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

ON SUCH A NIGHT: Karen Morley, Grant Richards—Where has this Morley woman been hiding? She is certainly tops in this well directed, fine story picture. We thought that this would be just another picture and were agreeably surprised. It is good for any day of the week and should be a good draw. Grant Richards, a newcomer, will go places.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

THREE CHEERS FOR LOVE: Eleanore Whitney, Robert Cummings, Elizabeth Patterson—A pleasant little musical comedy, not pretentious or lavishly produced. It features Eleanore Whitney in several tap dance routines, has several singable songs, a little comedy and, all in all, is good amusement. Although this is not a big production it should be a worthy addition to a double bill. Running time, 63 minutes. Played October 23.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

WILD MONEY: Edward Everett Horton—Shelved. Why companies persist in making such trash and asking the exhibitor to play it is beyond us. A company that has the ability to produce "Souls at Sea" and "On Such a Night" and then passes out such product as "Wild Money" certain causes one to wonder.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

Republic

COME ON, COWBOYS: Bob Livingston, Ray Corrigan—Better than average western with some nice comedy mixed in. Running time, 58 minutes.—Fischer and Bichler, Mattray Theatre, Strasburg, N. D. Small town patronage.

MICHAEL O'HALLORAN: Wynne Gibson, Warren Hull—Very good picture. Business better than average. Good enough for anybody. Running time, 67 minutes. Played October 16-17.—Fischer and Bichler, Mattray Theatre, Strasburg, N. D. Small town patronage.

OH, SUSANNA!: Gene Autry, Frances Grant—Our second Autry picture and nearly doubled receipts over his first one. Looks like he'd be a sure bet for Saturday.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

PUBLIC COWBOY NO. 1—Gene Autry, Ann Rutherford—Played to a nice Saturday and Sunday business. This first Autry picture of the 37-38 product is just as good or even a little better than last year's. Good enough for any day of the week. Running time, 70 minutes. Played October 9-10.—Fischer and Bichler, Mattray Theatre, Strasburg, N. D. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio

ANNAPOLIS SALUTE: James Ellison, Marsha Hunt—Pleased, but had no drawing power. Running time, 65 minutes. Played October 13-14.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minnesota. Rural and small town patronage.

FIT FOR A KING: Joe E. Brown, Helen Mack—It's OK. My patrons enjoyed it and yours will too. Did good at the box office and pleased every one. Running time, 73 minutes. Played October 20-21.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minnesota. Rural and small town patronage.

FORTY NAUGHTY GIRLS: Zasu Pitts, James Gleason—Pretty good mystery drama that did not mean a thing at the box office. Running time, 70 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

MAKE A WISH: Bobby Breen, Marion Clarke, Basil Rathbone—As usual with kid pictures, the story is built around them and this one is no great shakes as far as that goes. He is just a fortunate little boy, rather effeminate, that, according to the narrator on the trailer, was demanded by ten million fans, who, having heard him, demanded that Hollywood call him. The patrons must yet be by the radio, for his fans were sadly missing at the picture.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Indiana. General patronage.

MAKE A WISH: Bobby Breen, Basil Rathbone—Not as good as "Rainbow on the River" and fell below average Sunday business. Am sorry we did not use it on a midweek show. Played October 3-5.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

ON AGAIN—OFF AGAIN: Wheeler and Woolsey—Nice little programer. Well done and pleased. Got by nicely. Running time, 65 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

WINTERSET: Burgess Meredith, Margo—Wonderful play but not acceptable to small towns. No business although played at bargain prices.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

Twentieth Century - Fox

HOLY TERROR, THE: Jane Withers, Tony Martin, Leah Ray, El Brendel, Joan Davis—This was our first Jane Withers picture, and needless to say it will not be our last. The men enjoyed it thoroughly and paid Jane a personal tribute. As for the picture itself, it is grand entertainment, music, comedy, romance and thrills blended to perfection. The cast suited to a "T" and the work of Anthony Martin, El Brendel, Leah Ray and Joan Davis is worthy of mention. The smash ending will lift them out of their seats. Good in any spot. Running time, 65 minutes. Played October 23.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

LIFE BEGINS AT COLLEGE: Ritz Brothers, Gloria Stuart—Grand production in any spot. Will stand extended runs. Pleased all and will please you. Running time, 94 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

SLAVE SHIP: Warner Baxter, Wallace Beery—Used on a Friday-Saturday. Good direction and good acting, but a gruesome story. It will get by with the fans who want something different and thrilling. Played October 15-16.—A. G. Miller, Lyric Theatre, Atkinson, Neb. Rural patronage.

THINK FAST, MR. MOTO: Peter Lorre, Virginia Field—Good entertainment. Would like to see Fox make more than three of these. Running time, 66 minutes. Played September 24-25.—R. W. Hornick, Grand Theatre, Huntingdon, Pa. General patronage.

WESTERN GOLD: Smith Bellew, Heather Angel—We played this one on a gift night to give the new star a send-off. The patrons were unanimous in the opinion that this is the best singing cowboy to date. He is still somewhat awkward but should overcome this in his future pictures. Played October 13.—C. O. Shuler, Heflin Theatre, Heflin, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

WHITE FANG: Michael Whalen, Jean Muir—An old one off last year's group but it is plenty good and pleased 100 per cent.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

WIFE, DOCTOR AND NURSE: Loretta Young, Warner Baxter, Virginia Bruce—This was good news for the box office. Business good and comment from all patrons was, "A good picture. Liked it very much." Running time, 85 minutes. Played October 11-13.—R. W. Hornick, Grand Theatre, Huntingdon, Pa. General patronage.

WILD AND WOOLLY: Jane Withers, Walter Brennan, Pauline Moore, Robert Wilcox—Wild and woolly is right. With the help of Alfalfa Switzer Jane's stooge it is right down the alley for a small town. Some action and comedy and a new male star to us, Robert Wilcox, who has a fine voice and is good looking. Not the matinee idol type of Taylor. A lot of personality is what I mean.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Indiana. General patronage.

YOU CAN'T HAVE EVERYTHING: Alice Faye, Don Ameche, Ritz Brothers—A very fine show that pleased all.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

YOU CAN'T HAVE EVERYTHING: Alice Faye, Don Ameche, Ritz Brothers, Tip, Tap and Toe—Here is a show. Didn't draw at the B. O. but no fault of the picture. It packs a lot of entertainment. The three colored boys with their dancing are the best on the screen so far. Alice Faye is very good and she can act as well as sing and, boy, how she can sing. Take a tip and date this one on your best night. I like her and so do my patrons here in Atkinson where East meets West and they shoot from the hip and dance on ploughed ground. Played October 17-19.—A. G. Miller, Lyric Theatre, Atkinson, Neb. Rural patronage.

United Artists

ELEPHANT BOY: Native Cast—Did not go over; business poor. Not at all what it was cracked up to be. Played October 6.—Fischer and Bichler, Mattray Theatre, Strasburg, N. D. Small town patronage.

PRISONER OF ZENDA, THE: Ronald Colman, Madeleine Carroll—Grand. Excellent picture but did not click for me. Those king and queen things don't register in my house. Picture is made for the high class houses. Won't break any records but don't be afraid of it. Running time, 100 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

STAR IS BORN, A: Janet Gaynor, Fredric March, Adolphe Menjou, May Robson—This is a great picture in color. It should do record breaking business in any spot. Played October 14-15.—C. O. Shuler, Heflin Theatre, Heflin, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

Universal

LEFT HANDED LAW: Buck Jones—One of the best Buck Jones westerns for some time. The print is excellent. Are we certainly glad we have installed more seats this fall as we needed them for this picture.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

100 MEN AND A GIRL: Deanna Durbin, Adolphe Menjou, Leopold Stokowski—This is a very fine picture. Little Deanna Durbin is a wonderful singer and actress both. You sure can't go wrong in buying this. Mr. Miller of the Omaha exchange will treat you right. We had the misfortune of a hard rain every night we played same. Photography and recording good. Running time, 91 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

Warner Brothers

ANOTHER DAWN: Kay Francis, Errol Flynn—Swell cast in fair story that did not draw worth a darn. The people here seem to have tired of Kay Francis as she doesn't draw at all. We like her very much but what are you going to do when they will not come? Played October 13-14. Running time, 73 minutes.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Nebraska. Small town patronage.

CALL IT A DAY: Olivia de Havilland, Ian Hunter—This is the prize package. The story ran serially in the paper and we did a good business but the reaction was terrible. Lay off this one. It's silly. Played October 13-14.—A. G. Miller, Lyric Theatre, Atkinson, Neb. Rural patronage.

GO GETTER, THE: George Brent, Anita Louise—Good picture. Will please on your best night. Not a special but a good program picture. Played October 10-12.—A. G. Miller, Lyric Theatre, Atkinson, Neb. Rural patronage.

LAND BEYOND THE LAW: Dick Foran, Linda Perry—Good western. The only fault with this western is it has too much shooting in it. I sometimes wonder just why the producer thinks a lot of shooting makes a good western. Running time, 60 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

MARRY THE GIRL: Hugh Herbert, Mary Boland—Nice little comedy romance. Well done and will please, and did. Running time, 70 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

MELODY FOR TWO: James Melton, Patricia Ellis —Very light entertainment, dual bill programer. Used on a bargain night and pleased about 50 per cent. The regular fan will pan you for playing it. Played October 20-21.—A. G. Miller, Lyric Theatre, Atkinson, Neb. Rural patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

BIG SQUIRT, THE: Charlie Chase—A very good Chase comedy. Columbia two-reelers cannot be beat for weekend slapstick comedy.—C. O. Shuler, Heflin Theatre, Hefflin, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

BIG SQUIRT, THE: Charlie Chase—Was enjoyed by a few. Not any too good. Running time, 18 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minnesota. Rural and small town patronage.

CASH AND CARRY: 3 Stooges—Another nonsensical success in slipstick farce by the pacemakers of riotous comedy. A Stooge comedy is a better draw than a feature.—C. O. Shuler, Heflin Theatre, Heflin, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

FALSE ALARMS: Broadway Comedies—This Stooge comedy is a riot from start to finish. The only trouble is you miss some of the lines on account of the roars of laughter from the audience. If you have a place for slapstick, here is the cream.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

LODGE NIGHT: Andy Clyde—Here is a good short with plenty laughs. This two-reeler will fit in on any program. Running time, 18 minutes.—Fischer and Bichler, Mattray Theatre, Strasburg, N. D. Small town patronage.

MY LITTLE FELLER: Andy Clyde—A good slapstick that got its full share of laughs. The baby in it was 50 per cent of the enjoyment.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

STUCK IN THE STICKS: Andy Clyde—Very good. Two reels of sock entertainment. Made to order for our small town patronage. Running time, 18 minutes. —Fischer and Bichler, Mattray Theatre, Strasburg, N. D. Small town patronage.

Educational

AFFAIRS OF PIERRE, THE: Two-Reel Comedies —This little two-reeler just knocked my patrons into the aisles. Absolutely the most successful short I've screened in years, and it just was an experience to sit there and feel how the people revelled in this good wholesome fun. Willie Howard was at his best allright. Imagine a colored patronage enjoying a funny mythical French class on the screen! Let's have some more just like it.—H. Hendle, New Granada Theatre, Pittsburgh, Pa. Colored patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

FISHY TALES: Our Gang—One of the top Gangs. They are in a class by themselves as clean comedies that please all classes and all ages.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

FOOTBALL TEAMWORK: M-G-M Sports Parade—The Chicago Bears in action. A dandy reel and we played it repeat run.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

GLOVE TAPS: Our Gang—Our Gang puts on gloves. It's a laugh.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

PIGSKIN CHAMPIONS: Pete Smith Specialties—For theatres that have football fans this short will be tops. For small town such as this, it is just so so. This should not take away the fact that it is a good short and interesting. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

PIGSKIN CHAMPIONS: Pete Smith Specialties—A fine football single reel. Play it on good preferred time.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

RUSHIN' BALLET: Our Gang—This is not as good as the other "Our Gangs" we have run. The one-reel "Gangs" are not as good as the old two-reelers.—C. O. Shuler, Heflin Theatre, Heflin, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

Paramount

GRAMPY'S INDOOR OUTING: Betty Boop Cartoons—Betty Boop carton which was exceptionally clever.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

HOT AIR SALESMAN: Betty Boop—Not bad. Was enjoyed. I think we could do without Betty Boop, though. Running time, 7 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minnesota. Rural and small town patronage.

LOST AND FOUNDRY: Popeye the Sailor—This is a very good cartoon and goes over wonderfully with grownups as well as kids. Running time, seven minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

PARAMOUNT PICTORIAL: No. 1—Was good. We like 'em here. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minnesota. Rural and small town patronage.

STAR REPORTER: Headliners—Just a fair musical. Warners seem to have the edge on the rest for one-reel musicals.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

RKO Radio

A FROZEN AFFAIR: Evelyn Chandler—A short dealing with fancy skating. It pleased. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minnesota. Rural and small town patronage.

United Artists

MAGICIAN MICKEY: Mickey Mouse—Very good. Running time, nine minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

WOODLAND CAFE: Silly Symphonies—Pretty good. Running time, nine minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

Universal

MUSIC HATH CHARMS: Oswald Cartoons—A very fine black and white cartoon.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

Vitaphone

LENNIE HAYTON AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—Good. Running time, nine minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

NICKEL LOWDOWN: Big Time Vaudeville Reel —Good. Running time, nine minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

PORKY'S RAILROAD: Looney Tunes—A very good cartoon.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

RHYTHM ROUNDUP, THE: Estelle Taylor, Mildred Law—Fair musical which would play better to an audience which likes action in their entertainment. Miss Taylor sings very nicely and the girl tap dancer is excellent. Running time, 18 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

SUNBONNET BLUE: Merrie Melodies—As clever a cartoon as anyone could wish for. The idea is new and novel. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

Serials

Universal

PHANTOM RIDER: Buck Jones, Marla Shelton—Good serial and holding up good. Just what they want. —A. G. Miller, Lyric Theatre, Atkinson, Neb. Rural patronage.

WILD WEST DAYS: Johnny Mack Brown—We have played 10 chapters and find this serial not a drawing card. Too rough and too many Indians in it to please the ladies. Running time, 20 minutes each chapter.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

GN Signs Ruth Mix; Six Pictures Start

Ruth Mix, daughter of Tom Mix, has been signed by Grand National to star in a series of four cowgirl pictures. With the signing of Miss Mix the company says it will release more western pictures than any other studio in Hollywood, which includes eight Tex Ritter musical westerns and eight dramatic westerns starring Ken Maynard. Maynard, now on a tour with Cole Brothers Circus, reports to the studio next month as does Ritter, who at present is making a personal appearance tour.

The company is starting six productions in October. "Fury's In the Saddle," first of the series of four starring Miss Mix got under way last Monday. "Don't Lead With Your Heart," starring Anna Sten; "Return of the Shadow," with Rod La Rocque, and "Love Runs into Money," B. F. Zeidman production start Friday. "Renfrew in the North Country," October 18th and "Rollin' Plains on October 30th are scheduled.

Acquire Distribution Rights

European Films Corporation, New York, last week acquired American distribution rights to the French film, "Le Roman d'un Tricheur" (Story of a Cheat), with Sascha Guitry.

Rosenzweig Week

Charles Rosenzweig, exchange manager for United Artists in New York, will have November 15-20 set aside as Rosenzweig Week. It is the first sales drive for Mr. Rosenzweig since he joined the company.

E. M. Asher Dies In Hollywood

Ephraim M. Asher, 49, associate producer at Universal, died Friday at the Cedars of Lebanon Hospital in Hollywood after a stroke of paralysis. He died several hours after friends had congratulated him upon his apparent recovery from a first stroke suffered a week ago Tuesday.

Mr. Asher was a producer for Universal for six years. He was born in Susanville, Cal., 1888. He entered the motion picture business as a salesman and became manager of the Turner Dankin Exchanges in California. After a period with the Sol Lesser Enterprises, Mr. Asher joined Universal as co-producer of "The Cohens and the Kellys." His most recent productions were "The Man Who Cried Wolf," and "Some Blondes are Dangerous."

The funeral was held Monday at the Wee Kirk O' Heather with Rabbi Edgar Magnin officiating. Pallbearers were Dr. A. H. Giannini, Anthony McGuire, James Mulhauser, J. P. Normanly, Charles Stern and Jack Nemar. Honorary pallbearers were Charles R. Rogers, Edmund Grainger, Dan Kelley, John M. Stahl, Leo Morrison, Bernard Toplitsky, Wilbur D. May, Carl Laemmle, Jr., Dr. Arthur Hoffman, Stanley Burchell, Henry Dalton, Frank Mastroly, Sid Grauman, Marc Lachmann, Gordon Crary and Alan Crary.

Paul Werner

Funeral services were held at Our Lady of Sorrows Catholic Church in St. Louis, Saturday, for Colonel Paul Werner, 64, veteran projectionist who died at Alexian Brothers Hospital on October 27th.

Thomas P. Kerwin

Funeral services for Judge Thomas P. Kerwin, former Saybrook exhibitor, were held last week in Old Saybrook, Conn.

Diana Wilson

Diana Wilson, 40, English actress, died in London last week of pneumonia. She appeared in America after the World War with Isadora Duncan.

Edwin C. Hollins

Funeral services for Edwin C. Hollins, 39, prominent theatre and radio station attorney, were held in New Orleans, Saturday. He died following an appendectomy.

Hugh W. Allen

Funeral services were held last week in Hollywood for Hugh W. Allen, 48, of Warner Brothers purchasing department, who succumbed to a heart attack.

Motiograph Staff Meets in Chicago

More than 80 Motiograph dealers and associates gathered at the Edgewater Beach Hotel in Chicago on Friday for the company's first annual sales convention and heard J. P. Kleckner, president, describe the seven complete sound systems that will be sold to theatres in accordance with their seating capacities. He added that Electrical Research Products, Inc., service would be sold through Motiograph dealers at ERPI rates.

Other speakers were Les Abbott, Fred Stong, J. P. Maxfield, C. W. Conroy and Bert Sanford, who spoke on service to the assembled sales force.

E. P. Kennedy, former technical consultant for Electrical Research Products, Inc., last week was named director of sound engineering for Motiograph, Inc. Mr. Kennedy will operate the Chicago plant.

Examination of Goetz Allowed in Gates Suit

An examination before trial in London of Benjamin Goetz was ordered by Justice Aaron Steuer in the New York supreme court last week in connection with the $350,000 suit brought by Eleanor Gates, a writer, against Liberty Pictures Corporation, M. Henry Hoffman, Consolidated Film Industries, Inc., and John J. Dacey. The examination of Mr. Goetz was granted at the request of Consolidated whose petition pointed out that Mr. Goetz was vice-president in charge of its Hollywood office and had complete knowledge of all facts.

Miss Gates' complaint said that the advertising copy for Liberty's picture, "Once to Every Bachelor" was based on her story, "The Search for Spring." She claims that her name was used without consent and resulted in damage to her reputation.

Providence Will See Film Museum Programs

The Providence Film Society, Inc., which plans a season of ten "outstanding" pictures on a subscription basis, took out articles of incorporation as a non-profit-making organization this week in Providence.

The directors announced that at least five of the films will be selected from the Film Library of the Museum of Modern Art.

By an arrangement with Brown University the programs will be screened at the Faunce House Theatre. The society hopes to receive subscriptions from at least 300 members at a fee of $3.

The executive committee of the society includes Garrett D. Brynes, president; W. Chesley Worthington, vice president; Roger T. Clapp, secretary; J. Banigan Sullivan, treasurer, and Professor S. Foster Damon, John R. Frazier, Waldo G. Kaufer and Frederick R. Sisson.

Edgar Mels

Edgar Mels, journalist and drama editor, died in New York Monday night following a heart attack. He had recently been employed as copy editor of the Living Newspaper unit of the WPA Project.

IN THE COURTS

2 Marx Brothers Fined $1,000 Each

Federal Judge George Cosgrove in federal court in Los Angles Monday sentenced Chico and Groucho Marx to pay a minimum fine of $1,000 each following the conviction of the brothers last week on misdemeanor charges involving violation of the Copyright Infringement Act.

They were convicted by a jury of appropriating to their own uses in a radio broadcast, material contained in a script submitted by Garrett and Carroll Grahame. It is the first case of its kind in the Los Angeles court and Judge Cosgrove said that he had some doubt of the legal sufficiency of of the indictment.

The Marx Brothers said that they would appeal to the highest court and posted an appeal bond for the purpose.

Hart's Plea Approved

The right to inspect 12,000 distribution cards, contract ledgers and percentage books of the United Artists Corporation was granted to the William S. Hart Company by Justice William T. Collins in the New York supreme court last week. Mr. Hart is suing for $500,000 damages allegedly arising from the block booking of his 1925 picture, "Tumbleweeds," with a dog picture, "Wild Justice."

Paramount Denies Charge

Paramount filed a general denial in the United States district court in New York last week in answer to the $50,000 libel suit brought by the National Police Gazette Corporation. The plaintiff is suing for damages on the ground that showing of the Police Gazette in a scene from "Klondike Annie" caused damage to its reputation.

Bartholomew Aunt Wins

Adoption of Freddie Bartholomew by his aunt, Myllicent Bartholomew, was upheld Monday in superior court in Los Angeles. The boy's parents had sought to have the adoption nullified.

Steuer Wins Judgment

Max D. Steuer, attorney, was granted summary judgment for $25,000 against Knickerbocker Theatres, Inc., and Clinton-Apollo Theatre Corporation by Justice Charles B. McLaughlin in the New York supreme court Monday. Justice McLaughlin ruled that the defendant's denial of Mr. Steuer's allegations were false and refused to permit the case to go to trial. The suit was over the balance of a $75,000 fee for legal services.

Globe Leases Talisman Studio

Globe Pictures last week leased the Talisman Studio on the Coast for the filming of "Spirit of Youth," feature picture in which the heavyweight boxing champion Joe Louis will play the lead supported by an all-colored cast. Production is under the supervision of Edward Shanberg, president, and Lou Golder.

THE RELEASE CHART

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Letter in parentheses after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger symbol indicates picture is of the 1937-38 season.

J C JENKINS—HIS COLYUM

Lost in Minnesota. HELP! HELP!

Dear Herald:

S.O.S! We are lost in a Minnesota snowstorm. Our position is some place between down yonder and up here. We can't remember the name of this town because it has a pretty strong Indian flavor. However, there are no Indians around here that we know of. Some have "Gone West" and some have gone to Oklahoma.

Speaking of snowstorms inclines us to want to get up a little closer to the radiator. We don't like snow. The only time we ever wanted to see snow was 'way back when we were a boy on the Kankakee river in Indiana; we could get out and track rabbits.

Everybody who come to Minnesota figures on visiting Minneapolis and St. Paul, two very fine cities, just like they come to Nebraska they figure on visiting our town of Neligh because it is another "Gateway to the West." It's another gateway, all right, but it's the gateway to the largest cow pasture under the Stars and Stripes, except the King ranch in southeast Texas. Out in our cow pasture the wind howls all day and the coyotes howl all night, and some of those who are sucking the government teat howl all the while.

It looks like Minnesota and the north half of Iowa would be able to feed the world, but then the world will require a lot of feed. Through these two sections the crops are better than any other part of the Middlewest we have traveled, and if the farmers are not required to plow up some of their crops and kill off several million pigs it looks like we might come out all right. Why not let the Almighty handle this matter once? He's got pretty good judgment.

We note that the reviewers of pictures seldom give much space to "shorts." We saw a one-reel short recently that we think should have some attention. It was an MGM picture of "Give Me Liberty." John Litel plays the part of Patrick Henry, and the way he plays it will start the blood coursing through your veins and make you want to grab the old musket, if there is any patriotism left in this country.

We stopped in Sioux Falls, S. D., to call on our old friend Sherm Fitch of the RKO office. While we were there we met Mr. Tripler of the Canova theatre, Al Wuebben of the Royal at Parkson, and Gene Nash of the Canton at Canton, S. D.

All these boys were booking pictures, which would indicate that they are looking forward to good business. We hope they all have good eyesight and that their vision will not be clouded, for they are a bunch of pretty swell guys.

Charlie Snyder, the booker for RKO, had an accident. He said he was going only seventy miles an hour (maybe it was only sixty-nine) and his car turned over three or four times and Charlie turned over in a hospital bed and asked what time it was.

He is up and around now, we are glad to report, and ready to shoot both barrels, although he has to stop occasionally to catch his breath.

You theatre boys should not forget to send Gertrude Merriam, of the MOTION PICTURE HERALD, one of your theatre passes for her collection. She will be tickled to receive them and she'll paste them in her scrapbook as soon as she is done powdering her nose.

Our old friend, Bill Weaver, is writing many of the reviews for the HERALD out in Hollywood. We don't know anything about it but our guess is that Mildred Early of the HERALD office checks up the schedule of showings for him. Whenever we think of Mildred we think of Lola Gentry, secretary of the Film Board. We have a dinner date with Lola whenever we can get out there, but then maybe Lola is married and her husband might have something to say about it.

We met O. J. Roscoe of the Opera House at Lake Benton, Minn., and he said the ducks were thick on the lake and that he went out a few days ago and got the limit. He asked us to come up and go hunting with him. There is some more of our luck. We have to work and besides that we left our gun at home and now we are in a snowstorm.

We don't know just what we should do
Nor just which way to go,
For this stormy weather makes us blue
And the road is white with snow.

We just received a nice letter from Harry G. Day of the Day theatre at Darlington, Wis. Harry used to operate a theatre at Ida Grove, Iowa, "out where the tall corn grows," but recently took over the theatre at Darlington. Among other things he said for us to send him the HERALD.

Harry is all right, with a few exceptions, but we won't note the exceptions here. At the bottom of his letter, Hazel, his wife, adds this footnote, "I enjoy reading the HERALD from cover to cover, especially your grand Colyum." Now, where did she get that "grand Colyum" stuff? Well, anyhow, Harry needs the HERALD and Wisconsin needs both of 'em.

Joe Fisher (Alias Eagle Eye Joe) of Chicago took time out to write us a letter, and were we surprised? You tell 'em.

Joe used to be a "cub" reporter for this magazine when it was located at 407 South Dearborn St., in Chicago, and it was there that Bill Weaver dubbed him Eagle Eye Joe."

An exhibitor out in Idaho told us once that unless he could get better pictures than he had been getting he'd be a blowed up sucker. It reminded us of the little girl saying her prayers one night. She said, "Please Lord, bless papa and mama, and bless grandma and grandpa, and say Lord, do try and take care of yourself; if you don't we're sunk."

This is the season of the year that causes you to change your lights for heavies and start oiling your guns and getting our your rubber boots. Oiling our gun and looking over our hunting paraphernalia gets in our blood too, for ———

When the wind begins to blow
And it starts to rain and snow
Then we know that it has come to break the drowth.
It is then we like to go
Out in the rain and snow
And shoot ducks and geese before they've started south.

But if we are not mistaken this will be enough for this time, for it looks right now like it might start raining any time.

ADJUSTABLE DISPLAY CASES DOMINATE NEW STRAND LOBBY

Original Strand lobby, done in elaborate French Bourbon style.

■ In a retreatment dominated by huge display cases of novel design, the spacious inner lobby of Warner's New York Strand has been made wholly modern. First of the "deluxe" theatres to glorify the motion picture on Broadway, it was an impressive exhibit of French period ornamentation which this lobby presented to a brilliant inaugural assemblage in 1914. Now, in keeping with the style of another day, it is simple in line and functional in scheme. The side walls, except for marble wainscoting, consist in display cases of birdseye maple and plate glass, each measuring 50 feet long and 6 feet high. Designed by Mort Blumenstock, formerly Warner Metropolitan publicity director, each case may be opened throughout its entire length for panoramic displays, or be divided into sections of various sizes for individual displays. Illumination of the cases is by means of multiple strip showcase equipment, with lamps in reflectors overhead and spotlight extension outlets along the bottom. The overhead lamping is so arranged that perspective effects may be obtained, as well as even illumination of transparencies and flat pieces. General illumination of the lobby is provided by trough lighting in white, amber and blue, projected so as to create a three-tier border in three colors and a white central section on a cowled ceiling. Carpeting has a red and tan pattern on dark brown.

Third of Washington Theatres Modernized

THEATRES IN the State of Washington have swung into a veritable remodeling parade this year, principally in the last six months. During the past half-year there has been more modernizing and new theatre construction in the state than during the previous ten years. Remodeling has greatly exceeded its usual ratio to new construction.

Remodeling has amounted during this period to about $150,000 in the state, and new construction another $50,000. And the remodeling wave is still rolling.

About one-third of the state's 400 theatres have undergone modernization. Fully two-thirds of this number have had extensive remodeling involving exterior and interior structural changes in addition to new house furnishings and projection room equipment.

Several theatres closed for more than a year were reopened after being completely gone over. The trend is general running to modern exteriors, luminous gas tube lighting for marquees, and air-conditioning facilities.

Seven Out of Ten in Spokane

In eastern Washington, the extent of remodeling business warranted opening of a branch office at Spokane of the Northwest Theatres Supplies Company of Portland, Ore., making two theatre supply houses in the town, the other being B. F. Shearer & Company.

Typical of the remodeling "spree" is Spokane, where seven out of twelve theatres underwent extensive changes within the last six months. All seven theatres installed new marquees, four of them of V-type. Two bought new seating, all bought new carpeting, drapes and technical equipment. One veteran vaudeville house was modernized for pictures, boxes being removed and loge section improved. Many changed the fronts of their theatres so drastically they could be taken for new houses.—John Bigelow, Spokane.

Drive-In Field Seen Limited Despite Projects

THE THREAT of widespread summer competition for regular motion picture theatres from so-called drive-in theatres appears now to be negligible. Although reports last spring indicated the opening of many more of such establishments during the summer of 1937 a survey of all film centers reveals that few of the projects ever got much beyond the conversational stage.

The principal drive-in theatre areas are disclosed to be Los Angeles and Boston. Elsewhere the innovation has little or no representation, nor do theatre circles expect any. In most territories local conditions are declared to be unsuitable, with climate and mosquitoes given as major barriers.

Following settlement of arguments with residents who complained about the loud-speakers, the several drive-in theatres in the Los Angeles area have been enjoying uninterrupted good business. The more recent growth in this class of amusement parks, however, has been in New England.

"Wonder if this's where we drove in?"

Drive-in theatres in New England started two years ago, when Thomas DiMaura and James Guarino opened the first one in Weymouth, near Boston. The experiment proved a success. Innovations worked into the sound and projection installations by Edward Comi have been a primary factor in overcoming the obstacles set up by Cape Cod fog and the climate.

Mr. Loew Contrives a "Sail-In"

E. M. Loew came on the drive-in scene this year when he finally succeeded in getting around paper difficulties in Providence and opened a house there. He later built outside of Lynn, Mass. This drive-in, constructed on marsh land, was hampered by water. Drainage on the low, marshy land was so poor that at one time Mr. Loew was said to be considering a proposal to install flatboats and rename the site the "Sail-In Theatre." This possibility was greatly strengthened when Mr. Loew complained to the Lynn police that non-paying spectators in boats were seeing his shows for nothing. The Lynn cops, being without a navy, were stumped.

Another drive-in, in Springfield, Mass., operated by Trigger and Bannett, was opened during the season with rumbling of a legal war. The Drive-In Theatre Corporation of Camden, N. J., which opened the first theatre of this kind in 1933, holds patents on a number of details used in construction of such star-roofed spots. E. M. Loew purchased patent rights for Rhode Island, it is understood, while DiMaura and Guarino hold the franchise for the remainder of New England.

The latest New England interest in drive-ins will extend its influence to other areas. Philip Smith, Boston circuit owner, has acquired rights from the Camden Drive-In Theatre Corporation for rights to build in the Detroit, Cleveland, Buffalo and Philadelphia areas. He'll open these parks early next season, he says.

Delaware Area in Modernization Wave

ENCOURAGED BY the decided upturn in box office receipts, which in the past year have been estimated to have jumped fully 25 per cent, theatres, both circuit and independent, in Wilmington and throughout Delaware and the Eastern Shore of Maryland, are experiencing the greatest remodeling boom of the past decade. With the present remodeling boom, which began last year, still at its height, veteran theatremen predict the current reconstruction movement will be, before it wanes, the greatest in the history of the theatre in these sections.

Leading in the modernization has been air-conditioning, new sound equipment, and marquees (the latter particularly in Wilmington, where a modification of the city building code governing marquees has encouraged the erection of modern types of theatre canopies).

Nearly Every Theatre Affected

Practically every theatre in the entire area has undergone some remodeling during the past year. Despite the wave of theatre improvement which has brought about expenditures of several hundred thousand dollars, no new theatre construction has been reported in this area, although a number of new theatres have been located in existing buildings.

A survey of Wilmington's twelve theatres discloses that close to $200,000 has been spent during the past year in remodeling and new equipment. Approximately another $40,000 will be spent within the next few months for such improvements.

Elsewhere in Delaware and in portions of the eastern Maryland, where only neighborhood houses prevail, remodeling and new equipment costing approximately $75,000 has been completed since last fall in more than a half-dozen houses. Extensive improvements are reported in Seaford, where the Palace, destroyed by fire, was rebuilt; in Millsboro, Dagsboro, Selbyville, and Milford, Del.—G. L. Patzer, Wilmington.

Motiograph Announces New Plans on Sound

ANNOUNCEMENT OF manufacturing and distribution plans for sound equipment produced under Western Electric license recently acquired, was made by J. B. Kleckner, president of Motiograph, Inc., at a company sales convention in Chicago attended by more than 80 dealers and technicians. The meeting was conducted October 29 and 30 at the Edgewater Beach Hotel.

At the same time the company issued a new catalog including, in addition to its regular line of projectors and sound equipment, all elements of Western Electric sound systems, which Motiograph, Inc., is now distributing. Construction of a new factory, at 4431 West Lake Street in Chicago, is to be undertaken immediately, and when it is completed, actual manufacture of sound system apparatus under Western Electric patents will begin in Motiograph's own plant, it was stated.

A new soundhead of Motiograph manufacture has already been developed. It is based on the latest type of Western Electric soundhead but represents certain modifications of the original design. The sound equipment now catalogued is classified according to six different systems, each of which is rated for specific ranges of seating capacities, as follows: 500-900, 900-1500, 1500-2500, 2500-3000, 3000-3600, and 4000-5000.

Mr. Kleckner told the convention that it was his plan to have a Motiograph dealer in 30 film centers. It is also intended to establish a research department and an installation and acoustic consulting service. Already added to the Motiograph engineering staff is E. P. Kennedy, former technical consultant with Electric Research Products, Inc., while Dr. J. P. Maxfield of Erpi, has been engaged as a consulting engineer.

Erpi Men Address Meeting

Architect Warns Exhibitors On Unseen Remodeling Costs

A WARNING to theatre owners to be sure that an investigation of all existing conditions be thoroughly made before beginning remodeling of theatres, was issued by S. Charles Lee, prominent Los Angeles theatre architect in an interview with a representative of Better Theatres. Any modernization program, said Mr. Lee, is likely to prove the most complicated of any construction work, and it is easy, he added, to see how a theatre owner can begin an alteration expecting to spend $5,000 and end in spending $20,000. Citing various phases of reconstruction which often entail such contingencies, Mr. Lee offered the following suggestions:

"Dry rot occurs in a lot of places such as under wooden floors. It is well before completing your plans for your modernization to have a few sections of a floor torn up to get into concealed spaces and have tests made of the existing conditions. This is, of course, a messy job and it involves an expenditure of some money that will be wasted, as it will eventually be torn out anyhow, but you will find it is money well spent in always making an exhaustive investigation for these possible contingencies.

"Give an electrician a stipulated sum of money to thoroughly trace all of the circuits, check all of your switches and estimate your new light conditions and new locations. Many times we have gone in to alter a theatre and found old code wiring and we have a new alteration and run into a bill of anywhere from $500 to $1,500 to correct work that was unexpectedly thrust upon us by reason of an alteration that we might not have made had this electrical situation been understood.

"Think well before you start moving any plumbing, since pipes that have been installed for any length of time are difficult to add on to, and in a great number of cases rerouting of a sewer or revents which go through a roof may become necessary.

"Before starting in to remodel, examine your sidewalk well to determine whether, if you cut away a small portion of the sidewalk, enough of it is going to be left in good shape or whether you will have to replace the entire sidewalk. This is an expensive item that is often overlooked.

"In considering construction of a new marquee it is important to take into consideration the weight of this marquee and the structural conditions of the building for supporting the new load. Many old buildings are not structurally in shape to carry a new marquee load.

"Sometimes a theatre is altered and a new partition installed in back of the last row of seats. This can seriously affect the heating and ventilating system, so before putting up such a partition, investigate the heating and ventilating spaces that have been closed off and also see if the exhaust air will be properly wasted if this new partition is installed. Very often in older theatres the stair wells were used for recirculation of air and a closing partition would completely shut off this important part of the ventilating system."

Showmanship in Treating the Interiors of Theatres Today

● Examining the role played by furnishings—fabrics, carpeting, upholstery coverings, foyer and lounge furniture, and drapes—in creating an atmosphere that helps "sell" the theatre itself

FEW ASPECTS of the physical theatre directly interest the owner more than its appearance. His pride in his property alone could account for that interest, even were there no practical reasons for a theatre to possess what, for want of a better word, we may call charm.

But of course there are practical reasons. The appearance of a theatre—and we are speaking of the interior now—is part of what the theatre is selling both directly and indirectly. Directly, as a means of stimulating the senses, of providing the beauty and the luxury which most of us desire and have come to expect in theatres. Indirectly, as a means of creating an atmosphere in tune with the story-telling, play-acting function of the theatre.

The charm of a theatre is partly derived from the general architectural form, but despite the notions of some strict modernists, reliance for the greater part of the required environmental character of a theatre interior still must be placed on decoration.

The part played by furnishings, which is the phase of decoration dealt with in this article, is not exclusively decorative, since most furnishings importantly serve purposes beyond those of decoration; however, their selection, with respect to texture, pattern and coloration, is ultimately determined according to decorative value in a particular interior scheme. Such elements of the theatre interior are (1) wall fabrics, (2) carpeting, (3) auditorium chair coverings, (4) foyer and lounge furniture, and (5) drapes.

¶ WALL FABRICS

THE TEXTURE of fabrics, in contradistinction to plastered surfaces, makes them well adapted to theatre walls as decorative media. This is especially true in foyers and lounges, where it is highly desirable to create an atmosphere of homelike intimacy, but fabrics are also indicated for many types of auditoriums, at the area above a wainscoting, for example, or in panels between pilasters.

Pointers on Modern Furnishings from a Noted Designer

Architect of many motion picture theatres in the United States and of some abroad, John Eberson has long been eminent as an original creator of stimulating theatre interiors—designs having the showman's touch. Below he offers some suggestions to showmen, based on his own experience with the newer decorative materials. Mr. Eberson:

JOHN EBERSON

ARCHITECTS try, as a rule, to conform to the taste of the public served by the particular theatre in selecting furniture for the foyer and the men's and women's lounges. So far as style is concerned, it is usually either in the Modern style or the Neo-Classic style.

Furniture for these spaces should be sturdily built, with substantial frames. It should have free-standing legs to facilitate house cleaning. It should be devoid of carvings and loose cushions. It should not be of oversize scale.

The covering material for lounge and foyer furniture should be selected to stand up under this service. Among the materials frequently used are mohair pile fabrics, ribbed, patterned or herringbone weaves of sturdy character, and friezé fabrics.

In recommending carpeting for theatres, I indicate a preference for a pile which will support itself in its length, without rendering itself liable to be mowed down by the footsteps of users. I mean not so much the amount of wool in the density of the carpet as the proven value of the carpet woven in a certain density with an erect pile of limited length. The carpet which sells for $7 a yard, with 70% wool content, and with a pile a half-inch or more in length, is, in my opinion, of less value to the theatre operator than a properly constructed carpet with a 3/16-inch pile and 50% wool content.

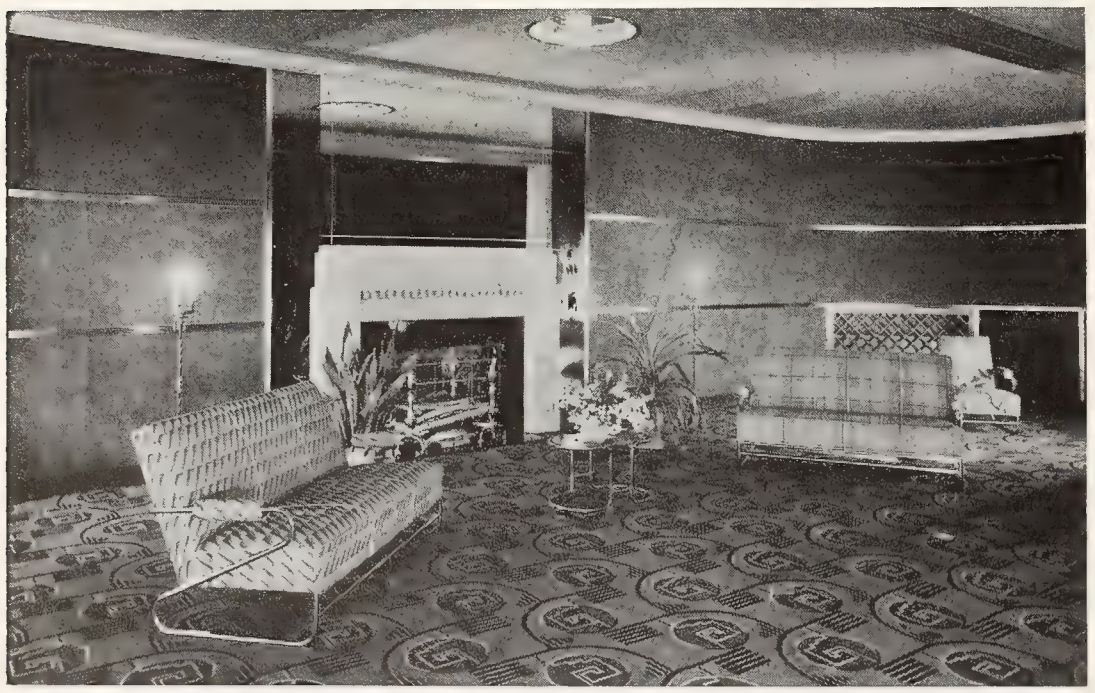
With respect to patterns in carpets, the average small theatre with, let us say, a 14-foot foyer and 4-foot aisles, should not use a carpet design with a repeat of more than 18 inches.

In judging a theatre carpet for color, it is well to be careful to select a background and design coverage of such a nature as to avoid the registering of foot marks. Avoid black or dark blue, dark green or dark red backgrounds, as they will show the imprint of feet. Flesh color, salmon, gold, having a little black accented with a moderate amount of red, are favored.

Fabrics for theatre walls must be of such quality as to stand flame-proofing, and they must be of a design which carries repeats in large scale.

The trend today dictates justifiable economies to theatre owners, architects and decorators. Recognizing this fact, various fabric mills have successfully copied handsome designs and colorings in inexpensive damasks and cotton wall coverings. As this quite often leads to a fabric structure that, in the practical weaving of 50-inch or 54-inch goods, endangers the technique of matching the pattern at the seams, it is important for purchasers to inquire carefully into the seam-matching qualities of the material selected.

Wall fabrics which belong to the rayon family are favored because they combine economy with rich appearance. When considered from the standpoint of color and texture, these fabrics should have at least 60% of the surface in rayon sheen as background, 40% in cotton woven into the design.



The types of fabrics generally recommended, and pattern and color schemes, are discussed in adjoining articles, but it may be pointed out here, from the point of view of showmanship, that fabrics peculiarly lend themselves to combination in the creating of a varied decorative scheme, heightening interest. Not only may treatments vary between rooms, but within a single division of the theatre, employing different patterns and textures. A single decorative theme is maintained by the fundamental kinship of the materials.

Factors Influencing Selection

Fabrics suitable to walls are available in a wide choice of color harmonies and, when all available types of materials are considered, in an adequate variety of patterns. There are, of course, no rules-of-thumb by which to select appropriate colors and patterns, since each theatre offers a specific decorative problem, while the tastes of the owner—and perhaps, too, the dominant taste of a community, so far as it may be interpreted—must be considered. It is well to remember, however, that an auditorium can stand darker shades (particularly in the forward area) and bolder patterns than foyers and lounges. Moreover, the shape and height of the room and also its lighting are basic factors in selecting the texture as well as colors and patterns of wall fabrics. Some shades of blue, for example, become green under artificial light, while other shades used in combination with it decorating problem in auditoriums requiring sound absorption at side walls, in which case fabric is stretched on battens and installed over blanket or a layer of rock wool. This type of combined acoustic and decorative treatment is often advised across the rear and the fascia of the balcony.

Thus throughout the public areas of the theatre, wall fabrics today have their place, and because of this, architects and decorators have sought out, and manufacturers devised, durable goods that give through the eye an immediate "feel" of elegance and charm.

Foyer of the Shaker theatre, Fein circuit house in Shaker Heights, Cleveland, in which walls are covered in rust-colored velour in horizontal panels banded by fluted copper. The ceiling is covered in golden brown satin. The modernistic fireplace with electric fire-log is flanked by blue mirror panels and surmounted by a plain mirror. may remain constant, throwing off the desired harmony. The directional effect of certain patterns, as another example, may make them unsuited to small, more or less square, areas such as auditorium panels.

¶ CARPETING

CARPETING GENERALLY is a dominant element in the interior decorative scheme of a theatre, frequently contributing more to the general effect than even the wall treatment. This is likely to be particularly true in broad foyers, while it is also the case in lounges having plain walls in pastel colors.

It often occurs to one in the selection of theatre carpeting that dark backgrounds are preferable because they do not show the dirt as much as light shades. The carpeted areas of a theatre, however, are precisely those which usually should have cheerful colors—relatively light grounds or brilliant figures—and it is fortunately true that shades like tan, gold, pale green and coral do not show dirt inordinately.

Generous Patterns Now Favored

While the simpler patterns, following modern tendencies, were in vogue a few years ago, the trend during the past year has been toward generously figured designs, which probably is a change for the better, since figures permit combinations of several colors or shades of a single color dominant in the general color scheme, provide ornamentation that would be "ginger-breadish" today if otherwise resorted to, and contribute importantly to the effect of elegance and imagination so desirable.

Across the rear and down the sides as far as the arched panels, fabric conceals a 1-inch layer of rock wool padding on battens, behind which is an inch of air space. The ground fabric is jacquard velour in robin's egg blue, the draped window-like panels are in gold rayon, while starting at the rear corners and extending across the rear wall is a three-section panel of swirl velour, in red, blue and gold. The arched panels, and also the flared wall flanking the proscenium arch, are finished in acoustic plaster, the former painted in three shades of brown, the latter in dark blue. The ceiling is in hard plaster, with pattern painted in colors repeating the wall shades. Carpeting is Velvet with light blue circles against a tan ground. Chair seats are blue mohair and backs coral mohair. John Eberson, designer.

¶ FURNITURE

WHAT KIND of furniture for the modern foyer and lounge? A year ago and one would have been justified in answering, "Why, modern furniture, of course." That answer would not be entirely correct today.

Nevertheless, furniture identified as modern is peculiarly well suited to theatre foyers and lounges. Its lines fit readily into the interior architecture of any theatre not definitely of a "period" design, it is rugged in both construction and upholstery, and it lends itself to bold patterns and vivid splashes of color whenever these are needed, as indeed often they are in a theatre.

The type of furniture most distinctly modern is that employing metallic construction. In most cases, the frame which commonly is exposed and is shaped to contribute importantly to the beauty of the piece, is of high-grade chromium-plated steel, round or rectangular, with finish either bright or dull. In such construction,

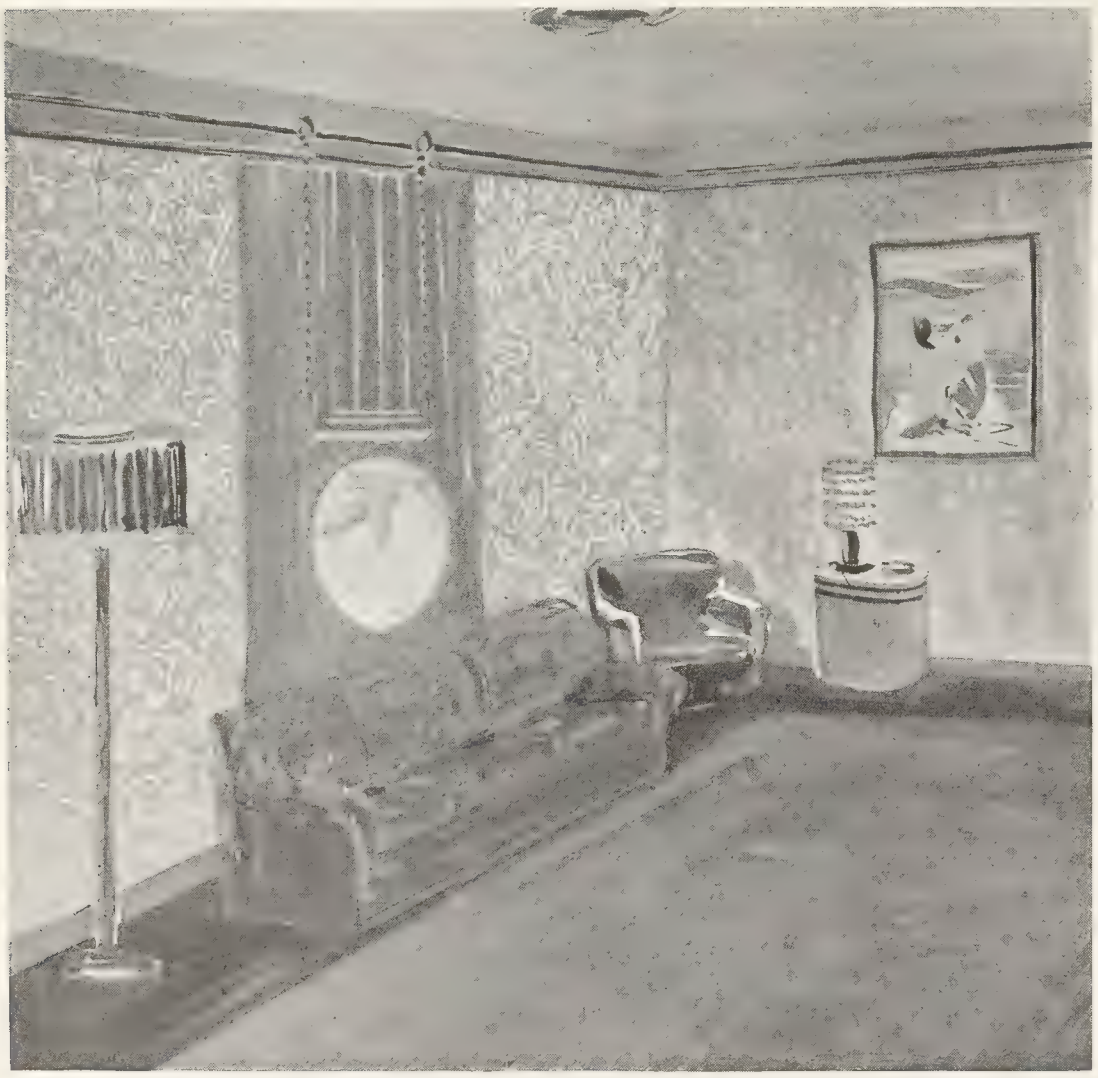
Selecting Furnishings for Modern Foyers, Lounges and Auditoriums



● Offering a variety of suggestions for combinations of colors, textures and forms for interior treatments that are freshly in line with public taste today

By EUGENE CLUTE

IN TREATING the interior of a theatre, the value of new ideas cannot be overemphasized. The theatre, of all places, is not the place where the public expects—or will long tolerate—the same old thing. The showman insists upon newness, freshness, something different in his performance, for well does he know what the public wants in entertainment. Just so with the theatre itself. It must always represent today, and be as distinctive as possible. A theatre is only as old as it looks —which is to say, as old as its decorative treatment, and its furnishings in particular.

If the decorative scheme and the furnishings through which that scheme is largely carried out, do not present new ideas in design and materials, and new ways of using these elements, then they threaten the theatre with monotony, and of course there's nothing more deadly.

Though theatre decoration and furnishing differ from the treatment of other interiors in important respects, because of the many special conditions and requirements that exist in the theatre, the same principles of design and the same popular trends of taste in decoration apply, with certain modifications. A study of these trends provides the best basis for new decorative ideas that will find favor with patrons and give any theatre an advantage over less alert competitors. Furnishings that are in advance of those seen on every hand will not soon become outmoded, and this is another point in favor of new decorative ideas.

Three New Trends in Styling the Interior

AT PRESENT, the art of interior design in this country is in a state of flux—it is being recast in new molds. Three major trends are in evidence. The first of these is the development of a more varied and colorful manner of modern style design, particularly in theatre decoration. The second is the modern interpretation of historic period styles, especially those of the 18th century, in high class residential work; a trend that has not yet exerted any appreciable effect upon theatre decoration aside from the introduction of modernized period style patterns in fabric wall coverings, furniture coverings, carpets and drapery fabrics, but that holds interesting possibilities.

Modern Treatment of Older Styles

The third is the incorporation of historic period motifs in otherwise modern interior treatments, giving rise to the style that is sometimes called the "classic modern." Though some notable "classic modern" theatre exteriors have been built recently, the possibilities of this manner of design for the interior treatment of theatres have not been developed to any extent.

Let us look more closely at these current developments in interior decoration and endeavor to evaluate them and to see, first, how they may be turned to account in the decoration of theatre foyers and lounges.

New Interpretations of Modern

The best modern style interior treatments seen in new theatres and in the architects' and designers' sketches for theatres under construction or in the design stage display an increasing trend towards novelty of conception, greater complexity of color treatment and the more extensive use of pattern in fabric wall coverings and furniture coverings, while the furniture itself shows improved design.

There is a notable departure in these interiors from the too-familiar horizontal banding of walls and from the excessive use of moldings. Walls in foyers and lounges are more often divided into vertical sections or covered with unbroken expanses of patterned fabrics. Contrasting and graded tones of color lend interest. Rich, but not harsh, colors are being used freely, often in a range of like colors, such as the red-and-yellow color scheme borrowed from Nature's coloring of the autumn landscape, relieved by accents of contrasting green and blue, which intensify and give vibrancy to the main colors. Again the scheme may be in multi-color skillfully harmonized.

Sketch of design for the auditorium of the Nova theatre in Staten Island, N. Y., showing use of fabric throughout walls, concealing extensive areas of rock wool padding. An all-over covering is employed from a golden brown painted dado to the ceiling, in a novelty weave of green intermingled with reddish brown and gold. Against this are recessed wall panels which, like the ceiling, are painted in an astral design on a blue ground. The architect is John Eberson.

Lounge Decoration In Recent Designs

SOME INTERESTING treatments for lounges and powder rooms seen in architects' and designers' sketches for new work show wall coverings patterned with scroll-like classic leaf forms in different tones of a single color. Sometimes one side of the room is covered in one color, such as a soft old rose, while the adjoining wall is in a harmonizing color, such as a pale old gold fabric. This idea of using one color on the end walls of a lounge or powder room and a different color on the other two walls first made its appearance in rooms with painted walls and the severe type of modern treatment. The addition of pattern and of the friendly texture of a fabric wall covering is a change particularly well suited to theatres.

In other new lounge designs the walls are covered with patterned self-color fabrics used in vertical strips, two different colors alternating. Then, again, a large central part of one wall may be covered with a patterned fabric in a strong, rich color, while the remaining portions of the wall, at either side, are covered with a fabric of lighter color, which is used all over the other three walls.

One of the most pleasing treatments in a large mezzanine general lounge has walls covered with a washable wallpaper with slender leaf and flower designs extending from the base to within about a third of the distance from the ceiling. The drawing is modern and the design is in multicolor. The modern furniture is upholstered in an abstract design of rather large scale, combining several vivid colors.

Where a cool effect of restraint and elegance is desired in a women's lounge or powder room, nothing could be better than walls and woodwork in two tones of oyster white, with a soft French gray-blue of medium tone for the furniture covering and for notes of accent.

Period-Modern Combination

While the practice of combining period and modern style design elements in the treatment of interiors through the modern interpretation of the historic styles, such as the Georgian, Regency and Directoire, is one of the most important developments in fine residential decoration, as already mentioned, there seem, as yet, to be no foyers or lounges in theatres done in this manner.

The influence of this vogue for combined period and modern design is, however, manifesting itself strongly in the increasing use of wall fabrics, furniture coverings and drapery materials having modernized historic period patterns, in theatre interiors that are essentially of modern style character. Perhaps this is the beginning of a movement in theatre decoration that may lead to a vogue for the modern interpretation of 18th Century and other period styles particularly in the foyers and lounges of theatres.

Furnishings For the Foyer

THE CURRENT trends discussed above may be expected to influence the decoration of foyers also. The developments will, naturally, be somewhat different, owing to the differences between the lounge and the foyer. Since the foyer is primarily a traffic area, the decorative effects must be secured mainly in the treatment of the walls, ceiling and floors, rather than by means of the furniture, of which there is usually comparatively little in a foyer.

Then, too, a foyer needs to be more impressive, usually, than a lounge; it calls for some degree of monumental character in its decoration, for it is the climax of the approach to the auditorium through the vestibule and lobby. The decorations and furniture should, therefore, be of large

Marks 25th Year in Showbusiness With New Theatre

Joe V. Gerbrach—and three views of his new Collegian theatre in the college town of Ames, Ia. All facing of the front is in colored terra cotta. Below is shown the foyer, looking toward stairs to mezzanine lounge and the rest rooms.

• At 17 Joe Gerbrach got into the up-and-coming picture show field. At 42, sitting pretty at the 1,000-seat modern Collegian in Ames, Ia., he admits it has all been a lot of fun

CHOOSING a vocation is a big problem to many a young man, but when Joe V. Gerbrach's father suggested it was time for Joe to decide, he knew exactly what he wanted.

"I wanted something at which I could have a lot of fun, and the motion picture business, then fairly new in the amusement field, looked like a grand way to have it," he told the writer, who was interviewing him in his office at the new Collegian theatre in Ames, Iowa. Mr. Gerbrach is now manager of the Ames Theatre Company, and in September celebrated the silver anniversary of his entrance in the motion picture business, with the opening of the $140,000 Collegian, which has been erected just a few blocks from the site of the one in which he got his start in show business.

Joe Gerbrach was 17 at that time back in 1912, with still a year to go in high school, when he took his father's suggestion, plus a loan of $5,000 and with his two sisters, Della and Helen, purchased the old Scenic theatre in Ames, closed the house for complete remodeling and installation of new equipment, and with its reopening changed the general character of theatrical entertainment in Ames.

Joe Gerbrach chuckled. "My brother Wilford and I, although still in school, tried to attend to everything. We had one helper in addition to my two sisters and we were the janitor, the projection machine operator, the advertising manager, cashier, ticket taker and what have you.

"We had two big blackboards out in front for advertising purposes, and as we never knew what the picture would be until the film came, its arrival would be followed by a mad scramble to write the announcement on the blackboards. We had only single-reel movies then, and many of them were only a half-reel long."

The original theatre proved to be a paying venture, and about the time Joe was graduated from high school in 1913, they took over another picture house in Ames—the Twin Star—and opened it with the "Black Chancellor," the first three-reel feature to be presented in Ames.

Mr. Gerbrach recalled with pride that no picture was ever too big for them.

"When pictures like 'The Birth of a Nation' proved to be too big for our house we rented the old armory and trucked chairs and projectors from Des Moines for the occasion. We always wanted to give our people everything that larger towns were having, and never let any extra work or expense stop us from doing it.

"I'll never forget the time we brought Mack Sennett's Bathing Beauties to town. The constable was right on deck and they were all arrested. But the show went on."

Joe Gerbrach was born on a farm a few miles from Ames and has spent his entire life in or near Ames, with the exception of eight months in the marine corps during the World War. His sisters managed the theatres during his absence, and shortly after his return they purchased two more theatres, the Princess and the American. Both were immediately remodeled and redecorated, and the Princess was again remodeled in 1929 and reopened as the Capitol. The American was later remodeled into the New Ames. It is now planned to remodel the New Ames again, enlarging its capacity to 1,000 seats.

New Theatre Built For College Patronage

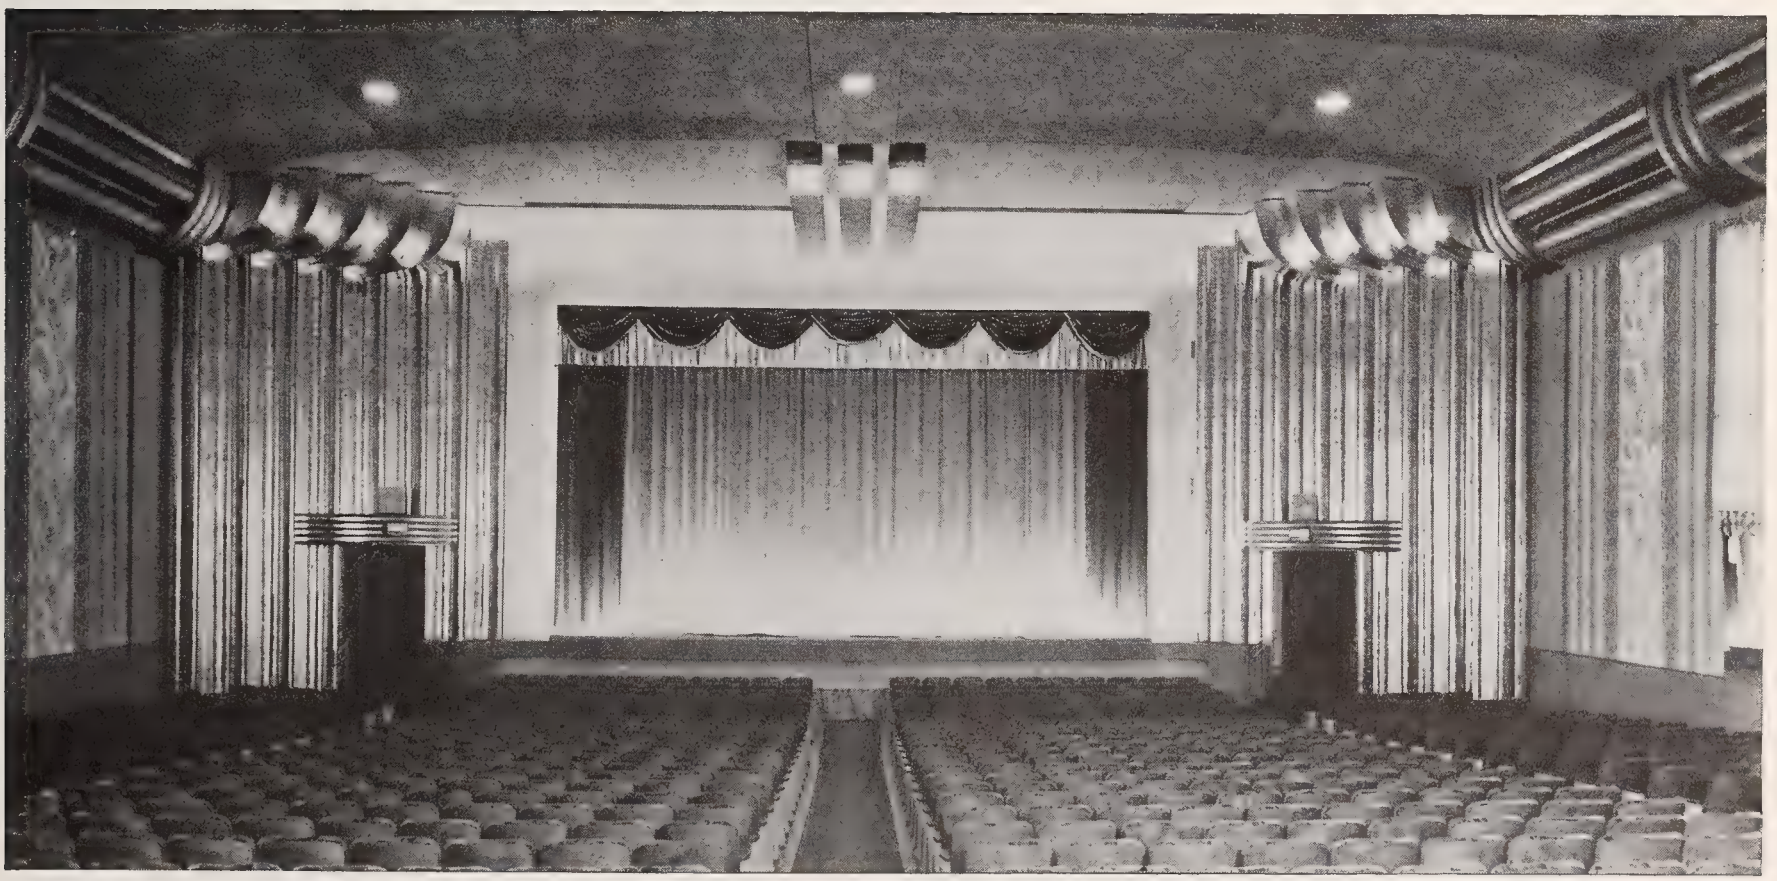
AMES IS an eight-month town in amusements, since the greater part of theatre patronage comes from the five thousand students of Iowa State College located two miles from Ames. Vacation time at the college is the dull season.

Mr. Gerbrach had the student patrons in mind when planning the new Collegian theatre. He wanted to give them a modern, youthful atmosphere, with a strong feeling of luxury. Wetherell and Harrison of Des Moines, were the architects.

The front is of a functional modern design. All facing is terra cotta, in colors —side pylons are a pastel shade of bluegreen, with cornice stripes of deep burgundy color; the center portion is warm flesh color with vertical stripes in dubonnet color. Exterior light is provided the front rooms by means of glass brick windows. The front is developed with vertical lines to increase the feeling of height. All trim of display cases, doors, and ticket booth is of satin aluminum metal. The canopy is triangular in shape with neon lighting in color and attraction boards carrying Adler silhouette letters.

The interior design has been developed along modern lines in form and furnishings. The lobby, 44x14 feet, has a terrazzo floor in color, walls of decorated plaster, and ceiling and cornice plaster decorated with bronze leaf.

The foyer extends practically the full width of the building. The floor is carpeted in a medium shade of dull green, walls are of Lastic veneer in medium color with satin aluminum strips. The ceiling and cornice are plastered. At one end of the foyer is a wide stair leading to a lounge and toilet rooms on a mezzanine level. At other end of foyer are the offices of owner, manager and secretary. These have Lastic veneer walls and Nu-Wood ceiling.



The auditorium, seating approximately 1,000, is treated in a brilliant and colorful manner. Walls and ceilings are of acoustic plaster tinted a light green. Side wall pilasters bear flesh-colored mirrors, with crystal light fixtures as an essential part of the pilaster design. The proscenium arch is flanked by vertical fluted offsets, floor to ceiling, which are decorated with bronze leaf.

The auditorium floor is of terra cotta colored concrete, with carpeted aisles. The rear wall is finished in Acousti-Celotex. General contour of the ceiling is level until it reaches the area immediately ahead of the proscenium arch. Here it breaks into

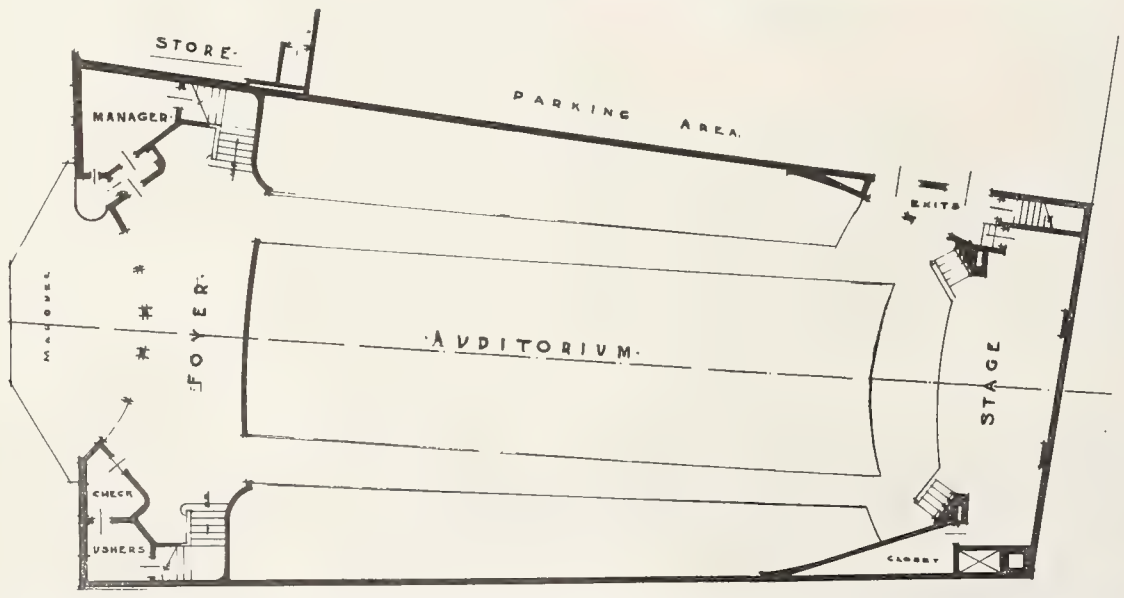
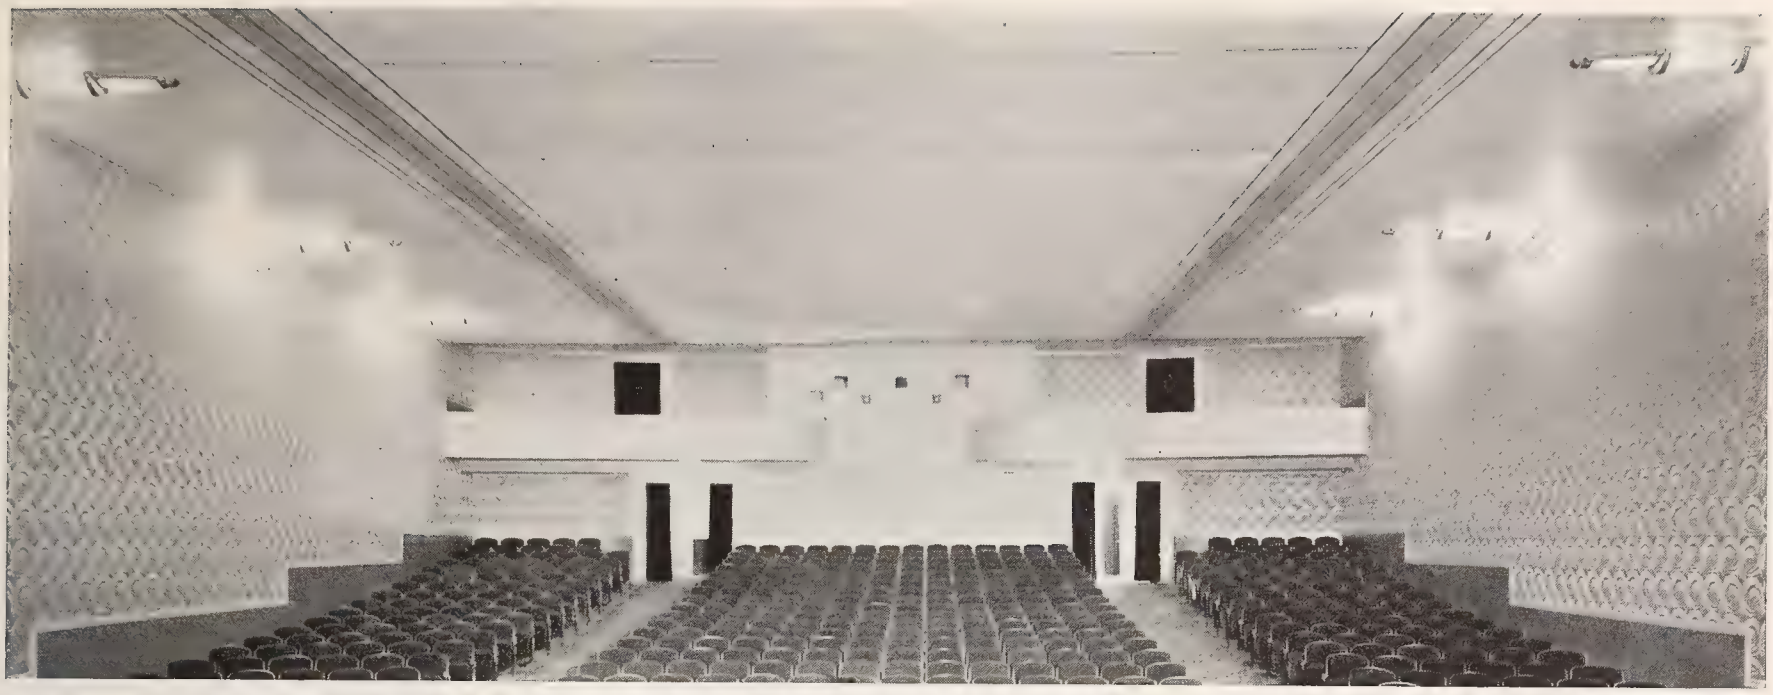
The auditorium walls and ceilings are finished in tinted acoustic plaster. Walls and ceiling of the lounge are of ordinary plaster painted cream and light yellow. All lounge lighting is from sources concealed in a cornice cove. In addition to the "down-lighting," the auditorium is illuminated by pilaster crystal pylon fixtures.

Novel Plan for Vestibule and Loge Sections



• Describing the Green Lake, new neighborhood theatre in Seattle, Wash., seating 800, constructed and equipped at a cost of $123 per seat

Above: General view of the front exterior, which is finished above the marquee line in stucco, and below it in tile. Note plan of vestibule, which conforms to a recess in the building, with marquee extending back to form roof of vestibule, making the marquee soffit, which is lighted with incandescent lamps, the ceiling of vestibule.



Right: The foyer, a promenade leading to main floor of auditorium and to stairs giving access to small mezzanine seating areas. Walls are of flat paint finish, interrupted by mirror motifs, but the ceiling is painted in high gloss, the reflections of which contribute to sense of spaciousness.

EQUIPMENT AND MATERIALS

GREEN LAKE THEATRE, SEATTLE, WASH.

Owner: Lake Theatre Corporation; L. O. Lukan, president. Architect: Bjarne Moe.

Location: Business district adjoining Green Lake Boulevard in an outlying neighborhood of Seattle, which has a population of 375,000.

Construction and Plan: Building measures 60x120 feet, containing in addition to theatre, a store 30 feet square. Construction is concrete with stucco facing. Cost of building, $67,000. Cost of equipment, $31,500. See accompanying floor plan. Seating capacity is 800.

Front: The design is in a modern interpretation of classic forms. General facing is in stucco; areas below marquee are in Dubonnet tile. Bronze trimming for all doors, display frames and box office. Vertical sign tower is of concrete and extends 80 feet above sidewalk. Marquee is of 6-inch concrete on cantilever frame, with diagonal attraction boards at each end trimmed in neon and carrying Wagner silhouette letters. Marquee soffit lighted with 800 incandescent lamps.

Foyer: Simple modern decorative treatment is executed entirely in paint and plaster. High gloss on ceiling and full-length mirrors along inner wall employed to give effect of spaciousness. Vertical wall flutings, repeating motif of upper part of front, flank each mirror, which is immediately bordered on each side by cylindrical opal-glass lighting strips, which supply the foyer illumination. Carpeting (by Karagheusian) is of Wilton weave in a cream and black floral pattern on a rust ground. Furniture (by Lloyd) is of metallic construction with chair coverings in leather. Lounges have same treatment as foyer.

Auditorium: Width 60 feet at widest point; depth from stage apron to rear wall 85 feet. Height, at rear 29 feet, at front 28 feet. All walls (except splayed areas flanking forward section) finished in damask having gold scroll pattern on a rust ground. The damask conceals balsam wool acoustic treatment. Carpeting in aisles same as that in foyer. Stage traveller curtain is of red wine velour with silver leaf ornamentation appliqued. Chairs (by Heywood-Wakefield) are of full spring construction with upholstering covered in plain rust mohair. Except for 34 loge seats in miniature mezzanine ledges at each rear corner (reached from foyer), seating is on one floor in three banks, with two aisles. Illumination is by translucent-glass and metal plaques of modern design placed along the side cornices. The stage, which measures 40x14 feet, with a proscenium opening 27x29 feet, is fully equipped for small productions.

Projection: The projection room measures 19x12 feet and has adjoining lavatory. Walls and ceiling are laminated with rock lath sheathing and lock-joint facing material, and are painted olive green. The

Who Started These Here Bald Men's Clubs?—Why, 'twas a Theatre Manager

• Have you a Bald-Headed Men's Club in your community? If so, you have one probably because Owen McKivette is bald.

Owen McKivette is manager of the Venetian theatre in Racine, Wis., and after years of absorbing a good many wisecracks about the extraordinary nudity, so to speak, of his conk (see accompanying photograph), he developed a hankering to find out how many of his fellow citizens were similarly bereft. Or maybe it was just sympathy. However, let's not split hairs over it, the important fact being that Mr. McKivette decided to admit all bald-headed men free to the Venetian on a certain night.

He elaborately advertised his intention and was rewarded on the appointed evening with the sight of many a scalp as barren as his own. Later he was called to the lobby, where about 75 of his special guests had congregated, and there and then it was decided to form a permanent organization for all their kind in Racine.

Since then, similar clubs have been formed in many cities, with most of them doing a lot of fine charitable work. The Racine club, for example, has a committee to see that all elderly men in poor circumstances are supplied with pipes and tobacco and other little luxuries. In civic celebrations the members march in the parade with heads proudly unbared.

Manager McKivette of Racine's Venetian.

"Why not?" Mr. Kivette asked his interviewer. "You'll notice that bald-headed men usually get along all right in the world. They have less of the superfluous to carry around. And another thing: If nudism ever becomes general, we bald-headed guys will be more fashionable than anybody else, won't we?"

Darned if they wouldn't!

tion of manager of the Rialto and Strand theatres in that city.

A new Trans-Lux theatre has been opened in New York, at Madison Avenue and 85th Street.

BRUNO VECCHIARELLI and the Harvey Amusement Company of San Francisco, have purchased the Liberty theatre, Coalinga, Calif., and the Avenal at Avenal, Calif.

R. A. WALTER, former circus and carnival advance man, recently opened the Rankin at Rankin, Oll. The new house seats 300.

A fire in the projection room of the Princess theatre, Fort Valley, Ga., on October 29, caused the death of HOMER HALL, projectionist, and the serious injury of BRYANT WILLIAMS, manager of the house. Mr. Williams received his burns in attempting to rescue Mr. Hall. Though the theatre had a large audience at the time of the fire, only one patron was at all injured in the rush for exits.

HOWARD L. WARNER is constructing a 180-seat house in Medora, Ill., in a former store building.

MORRIS MILLER and A. LORNFIELD have organized the LaRoi Movie Shops in Chicago, for the distribution of equipment, with headquarters at 4660 North Western Avenue.

HARRY DAVIS has equipped his Paramount theatre, Ogden, Utah, with fully-upholstered seats by the International Seat Corporation.

NAVE WARD has constructed a new theatre in Wewoka, Okla.

MEYER KAPLAN has installed new lobby frames in his Crown theatre, Cleveland.

PHIL R. ISLEY, president of the Southeastern Theatres, Inc., owners of a number of theatres in Tulsa, Okla., has opened the recently constructed Tower theatre in that city. The new house is modern in design, with front faced with Carrara structural glass. The capacity is 800. A. C. Wooden is the resident manager.

GEORGE SHENKER expects to open his new 850-seat theatre in Lorain, Ohio, on Christmas Day.

A three-day exhibit of theatrical equipment was held at the Hotel Kimball in Springfield, Mass. The display was under the sponsorship of Tiffin Scenic Studios of Tiffin, Ohio, and arranged by the Larsen Theatre Supply Company of Springfield, Mass.

C. A. RUNYAN has reopened the Tower theatre at Barnsdall, Okla., which has been dark for some time.

FRANK BROWN has taken over operations of the Lyric theatre at Granite Falls, N. C., having purchased the equipment and lease from E. S. SHERRILL.

FOR A PERMANENT BOX-OFFICE ATTRACTION, BOOK .. Vitrolite

Theatre owners are finding in Vitrolite, the colorful structural glass, a means to attract greater patronage, reduce maintenance cost, and to avoid the expense of frequent redecorating. The lustrous reflective quality of Vitrolite imparts a distinctive modern character to the theatre front, and its numerous colors and decorative possibilities make it the unsurpassed material for lobby, ticket booth, and wash room. Being impervious to moisture, it will retain its luster unimpaired for a lifetime, requiring only occasional wiping with a damp cloth to keep it spotlessly clean and ever new.

Whether for new construction or for remodeling, Vitrolite is easily and economically installed. Write for the name of the nearest Vitrolite representative, also new literature. Libbey-Owens-Ford Glass Company, 1310 Nicholas Building, Toledo, Ohio. (Member of Producers' Council.)

How Much of the Income Does Projection Modernization Take?

● And how much is it likely to give back to the box office? This article represents an attempt to give the answer in practical terms

DEFINITE figures on the cost of remodeling the average projection room, together with an estimate of box office returns that can reasonably be expected, are offered here. The cost figures, it should be stressed, are not in any sense guesswork, but are based on accurate data. They represent the complete replacement of all equipment, visual and sound, with the very best material available, and calculated at today's prices.

The box office angle, it is obvious, can never be reduced to the same degree of accuracy. One of the evident differences between box office response and costs is that costs will be nearly the same for any two theatres of roughly the same size, while box office returns will vary according to type of audience, extent of competition and other individual factors. The box office estimates, therefore, are given in terms of the number of increased admissions per show that will be needed to provide an attractive ultimate profit upon the cost of remodeling.

Those benefits of remodeling which may be expected to draw a larger attendance are cited in some detail. Each exhibitor may then decide, on the basis of his own clientele and competition, whether the improvements mentioned will in fact attract the requisite number of increased admissions to his theatre.

Remodeling of the Projection Room

THE WORK of projection room remodeling may fairly begin with that room itself, rather than with its equipment. A very important point, often completely overlooked, is the color of its walls. The eye of the projectionist, if it is accommodated to a bright room, will be unable to see small defects on the distant screen except after prolonged watching which his other duties may prevent. Such defects, however visible to the audience, will under those circumstances go uncorrected. At the same time, a dimly lighted room will prevent his seeing faults in the film and in his equipment that may cause a bad screen image, bad sound, excessive wear, or even fire. The correct solution is to paint the room a suitable green or brown up to roughly ¾ths its height, with white from there on, and also to paint the ceiling white.

Screen Viewing Provisions

An allied point is enlargement of the projection ports, wherever these are less than 12x14 inches. It is only human nature to watch the screen more constantly when watching is made more convenient.

Theatres with a long throw will do well to provide the projection room with a pair of binoculars. They can usually be obtained in pawn-shops at surprisingly low cost. They enable the projectionists to see the screen as the audience in the front seats see it, and so to correct shortcomings that would otherwise be invisible to them.

Covering of the Floor

Another point often ignored is the floor of the projection room. Many types of cement floors give off a fine, abrasive dust under the feet of the men who work there. This dust settles in moving parts of the machinery, and in sensitive electrical contacts of the sound equipment. To understand its effect, it is only necessary to remember that some of the parts of a projector are built to work at clearances of 1/10,000th of an inch, and that some of the circuits of a sound system carry electrical power at 1/2,000,000th of a watt. The damage that fine abrasive dust can do to clearances and contacts of such delicacy needs no elaboration.

A cheap and simple remedy is to paint or shellac such floors, but projectionists have to move around a good deal in the course of their work, and the protective coating is not always renewed promptly when it wears through. Linoleum is far more reliable. The average projection room is too small to make its use particularly expensive.

Room Should Be Big Enough

Adequate remodeling may also call for enlarging the projection room. Many of them are simply too small for the men to do good work. They can't get around as quickly as they should. They can't easily get at parts that need constant attention and should be accessible. These conditions are paid for in unnecessarily poor performance, and in excessive repair charges due to unavoidable neglect.

Many projection rooms, including particularly the small ones, are also altogether too hot in summer, forcing the occupants to think about their personal discomfort instead of their business. For when the street temperature is 90°, a thermometer next to the projection lamp houses may show 120° or more. Adequate ventilation is the answer, or else connecting this very room to the air-conditioning system.

Advantages of The New Equipment

TURNING FROM the room itself to its equipment, an accurate analogy may be found in the improvement in performance of the modern automobile, as against the models of only three or four years ago. The improvements in visual and sound performance in the same period of time have been decidedly more striking. Pictures that are sharper, steadier and much brighter, sound that is far more crisp, natural and enjoyable, are now available at what might be referred to (if the same analogy may be continued) as greater mileage per gallon—that is, much lower operating costs.

Sound tubes, for example, are more efficient. A smaller tube now does the same work, using less current and costing far less to replace. Other sound parts, condensers specifically, have undergone still more startling decline in size and cost.

Improvements in the light source with the new high intensity, low voltage carbons exceed anything yet achieved in sound in the way of combining better performance with lower operating expense.

Real Economy Provided

Disregarding the audience, and considering bookkeeping alone, installing equipment that embodies these new developments presents three evident advantages. Repairs to existing apparatus which may be currently in order in view of its age, are eliminated, their cost being absorbed in the new investment. The corresponding repairs to the new equipment, when they become due in the course of time, will in many cases (as indicated) cost distinctly less. The electric power requirements of the new equipment, of the sound system and more particularly of the light source, will be lower—an economy that shows up immediately and continues indefinitely.

From the audience point of view, the following advantages will be realized in the average theatre:

A brighter picture, both easier and pleasanter to look at.

A steadier picture, eliminating the eye fatigue that causes people to look away and become bored except when the program is of unusual interest. (Then they continue to watch in spite of unconscious eye strain, and leave the theatre feeling tired and perhaps wishing they'd gone to sleep instead.)

More natural sound, in which human speech conveys delicate emotional shadings with an accuracy approaching that of real life; wholly different from the cruder speech-tones of earlier systems.

More appealing music, in which the harmonies or intentional discords that constitute so large a part of musical pleasure are heard in very nearly their true quality.

More dramatic sound, with increased powers of aural emphasis. This has been attained by lowering the noise level and raising the upper limit of volume.

Added, these details spell greater sense-pleasure, more comfort and enhanced dramatic value in theatre entertainment.

What Modernization May Really Cost

THE BASIC estimate is for a house of from 500 to 800 seats, and it is assumed that projection room equipment will be changed completely. The new installation will include projector pedestals or bases, projectors, lenses, lamphouses for the new low-voltage high-intensity (suprex) carbon arcs, and a source of arc d.c. current suited to them. The sound system of this estimate is a late model. Every component, and all constituent parts of the new installation, are to be of first quality, regardless of cost.

Trade-in value on existing apparatus is based on the assumption that equipment is nine years old, but reasonably well maintained and in fair operating condition, the projectors equipped with rear shutters, magazines 16″, lamps low intensity arc.

This used equipment could be accepted as the down payment in full, but on the further assumption that the theatre would wish to reduce carrying charges by adding $1,000 in cash, and to complete the contract in 24 months, the net amount remaining to be financed would be $2,500. Monthly payments of $150 would discharge this obligation in the time specified and would include fire insurance on the entire equipment and sound service as well.

These figures are the result of competent and experienced study, under prices and conditions existing at the beginning of November, 1937. They do not, of course, include labor charges for installing the new machinery. These vary not only with conditions of labor, but with the physical arrangements of the projection room—for example, the extent to which existing conduits can be used for power and sound wiring. Time and costs involved in installation can always be ascertained, before closing a contract, by obtaining specifications on the proposed new equipment.

Maintenance Savings

Maintenance savings, mentioned above, can be estimated where the theatre has kept accurate account of past costs, but not otherwise. Where such records exist they can readily be projected into the future, due allowance being taken for the reduced cost of the new sound replacement parts. Savings in electric power can be checked very precisely by referring the power requirements of existing and proposed equipments to the electric company.

Under average conditions, it may be assumed that maintenance savings realized by remodeling will, roughly, cover installation costs and justify such moderate projection room improvements as repainting, floor dust protection, or enlarging observation ports. The cost of enlarging or ventilating the projection room must be charged against a better presented show.

Costs for theatres larger than 800 seats do not rise in proportion above the figures given. Many fairly expensive items remain unchanged regardless of the number of seats, projectors for example.

If a system nine years old is traded at a cost of $150 a month, plus interest and amortization on $1,000 over the next nine years, the total cost may be taken as, roughly, $170, leaving maintenance savings to balance installation charges.

Assuming the theatre runs only three shows a day, 26 days a month, there are 78 shows which may pay a profit above $170, or more than $2 additional per show. If the admission price averages 20 cents, eleven additional seats per show cover the cost of remodelling—More than that pays a profit on the cost (not counting enlarging or ventilating the projection room.)

Under the same circumstances, 20 additional seats per show represent a profit upon the investment of nearly 100%.

In view of the vast improvement in entertainment that will be realized, it would seem unlikely that there are many locations in which such improvements would not yield even greater returns.

transverse steps, which are pierced for "down-lighting." Each step contains three reflector light sources. The cornices at the sides are of large-fluted plaster, curving out from the side walls to mold into the ceiling. These flutings are metal-toned.

The mezzanine floor has a main lounge, 48x18 feet. It is carpeted in deep blue; walls and ceilings are decorated in cream and light yellow, and all lighting is concealed in a cove at ceiling. Men's and women's toilet rooms, adjoining, have treatment to harmonize.

Mr. Gerbrach took a little flyer in another vocation some years ago, when with his brother, Wilford, he established the Gerbrach airport near Ames. They flew their own planes for photographic work, short passenger trips, etc. When they first started, $15 was the price charged for a few minutes trip in the air, but by the time they sold out in 1930 the price was only one dollar. Mr. Gerbrach belongs to the National Aeronautical Association, the American Legion, and the Ames Chamber of Commerce.

Twenty-five years in the motion picture business has not rubbed off its glamour for Joe V. Gerbrach. It looked then like a grand way to have a good time making a living and is still the thing he likes best to do.—M. E. Wheelock.

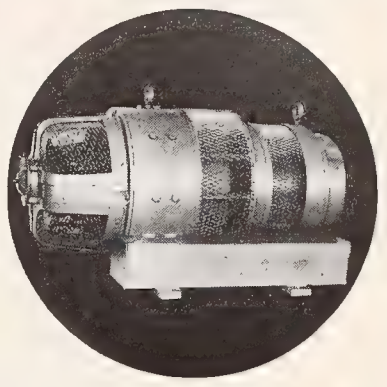
projection angle is 4° at a throw of 95 feet; the screen image is 25 feet wide. Equipment includes two Motiograph projectors with Brenkert suprex-carbon type lamps supplied by Brenkert rectifiers. There are also an effect projector and spotlight (both Brenkert), which receive arc current from a Robin-Imperial motor-generator located in a penthouse on the roof. Sound system is Western Electric. Film safe, rewinder and general projection accessories are Neumade.

Air Supply: Auditorium is supplied by a blower system with outlet grilles on each side of proscenium (blowers by Shearer), with Minneapolis-Honeywell thermostatic control, and providing five complete air changes per hour. Heating is by Kewanee boiler with Ray oil burner. No cooling facilities. Foyer is heated by a unit heater; all other divisions of the building heated by direct radiation. Walls and roof are thermally insulated with rock wool.



All equipment and furnishings of the Green Lake were supplied by the B. F. Shearer Company of Seattle.

COMMENT ON PROJECTION AFFAIRS

and answers to inquiries . . . By F. H. RICHARDSON

EVIDENCE OF WHAT A UNION CAN DO FOR EXHIBITORS

MANY LOCAL unions have instituted a sound servicing system and have operated it with marked success. Now Local 327, through its sound engineer, K. A. Pitt, supplies some experience data that should be of great interest to both projectionists and exhibitors. Mr. Pitt writes:

"When sound equipments were first sent into our theatres, it caught projectionists unawares and totally unprepared. Usually two installing engineers accompanied the equipments, though in that day the term sound engineer, as here applied, save in exceptional cases, had little meaning. True, a percentage of these so-called sound engineers had some degree of familiarity with the general layout and operation of the new equipments, having to some extent received training in the work they were attempting to do. But others were sent out without any preliminary training worthy of the name. In the very nature of things, they bungled things pretty badly, the local man too often being left with a nightmare on his hands.

"Fortunately, in a goodly percentage of cases there was available a number of projectionists who had spent some time on road shows in which the new novelty, talking pictures, were featured. In many cases these men were installed as temporary instructors for the local projectionists; but where this could not be done, we can look back and pity the local man confronted with such a snarled up guess-work puzzle. Let us give praise to those men who fought through and finally made good.

"Projectionists Not Instructed"

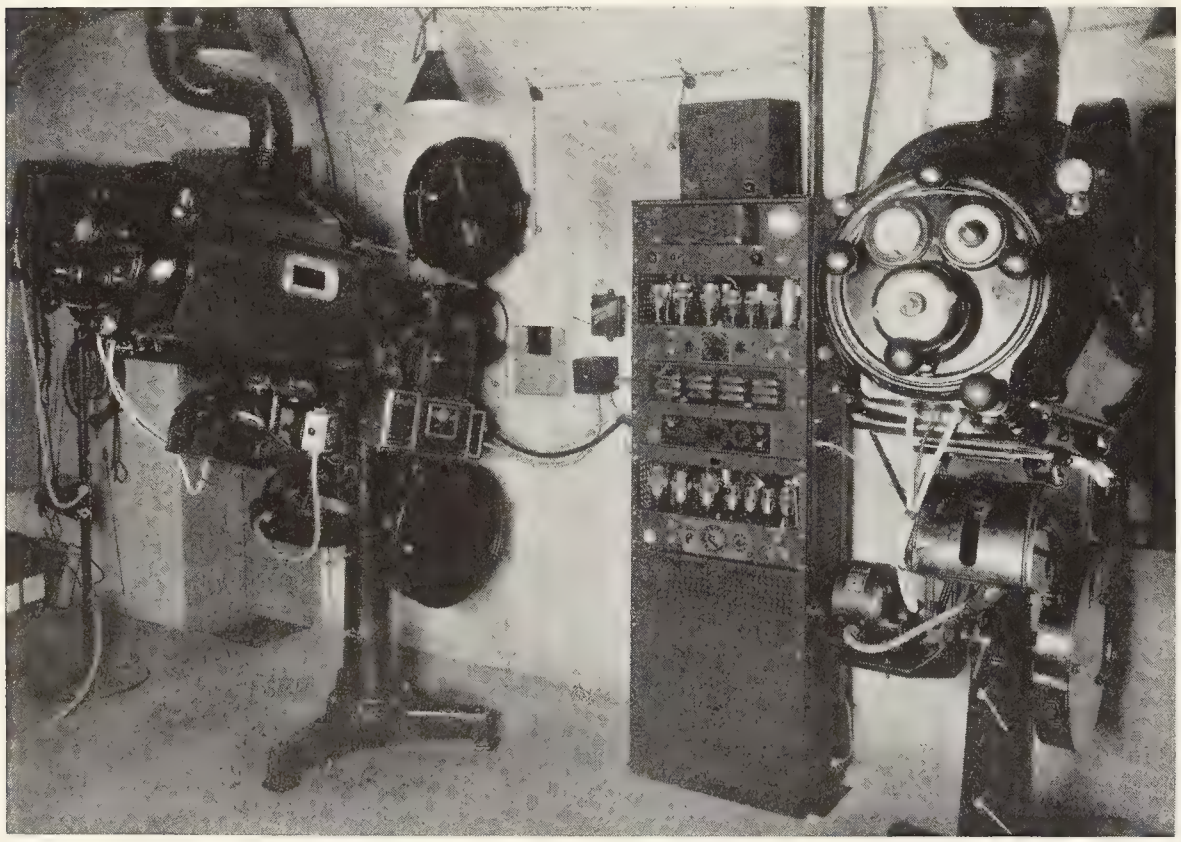
"In the event the installation chanced to be in territory where union jurisdictional lines were drawn and strictly observed, the engineer did nothing but oversee and direct the work of installation. In other locations the engineers did the work while the projectionist looked on and, of course, gained little more than the most sketchy knowledge of the process.

"This latter state of affairs was viewed with favor by companies supplying sound equipments, since its natural trend was toward establishment of servicing consisting of periodic inspections and making such changes and alterations in equipments as developments in research laboratories made necessary.



"Naturally, this state of affairs was not too satisfactory to exhibitors, theatre managers and projectionists. The exhibitor and manager found expenses mounting. The projectionist was compelled to see man after man enter his projection room, tinker with the equipment and depart, with little or nothing added to the projectionist's store of knowledge, and all too often with no apparent benefit either to the equipment or to the results produced by them.

"For some time, this objectionable state of affairs continued to exist in practically all theatres. However, neither the men nor the officials of our unions had been idle. The men had studied and advanced widely in knowledge, until very many, if not all, of our unions had members perfectly well equipped to handle service work. In many cases they were better able to do so efficiently than was the average sound engineer then performing the service, because of their greater familiarity with both the equipment and local conditions. There then seemed no good reason why the condition obtaining should remain unchallenged.

How Sound Service Started

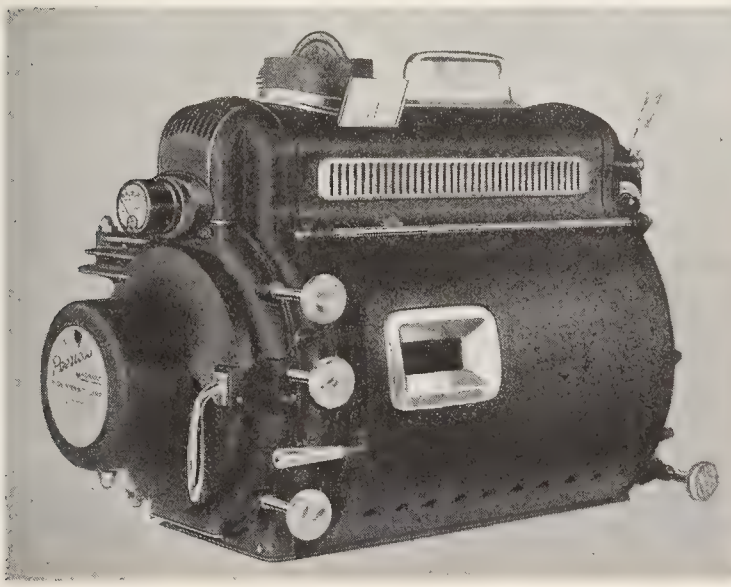
"Motion Picture Projectionist Local Union 327, IATSE & MPMO, which covers Cincinnati and vicinity, finally decided to make a concerted effort to establish a sound servicing department and return the work of the theatre projection room to the projectionist, where it was held rightfully to belong. Conditions just then were favorable to such a movement, since many exhibitors in this territory, feeling the service received not at all commensurate with its cost, were cancelling their sound servicing contracts.

"Recognizing the danger inherent in having all sorts and kinds of irresponsible sound engineers tinkering with the equipment they had labored so hard to keep in good condition, the union immediately set about offering sound service to exhibitors who had canceled their contracts, which offer was favorably received. After carefully considering the matter from all angles, it was finally decided that while the union had members fully competent to head a service department, it nevertheless would



The projection staff of the Grand theatre in Union City, Ind., have sent in this picture of their projection room, along with a letter which says: "The various projection room photographs are interesting. We send one herewith showing the front wall of our own room, or as much of it as could get a view of. The projector mechanisms are Kaplan on Simplex bases, with Weber soundheads having rotating film drums magnetically balanced. These heads have been in use four years. The lamps are Strong. Amplifiers are three in number; the top one has 15 watts output with 2A3 power tubes; the center one has 55 watts output with 6L6 metal power tubes; and the lower one has 28 watts output with four 2A3 power tubes. Each channel has its own speakers. We project a 16-foot image at 84 feet. There is a monitor in the manager's office and he therefore can listen in at any time."

ANY theatre can now have high intensity projection and picture quality on the screen equal to that of the big de luxe houses. In fact, 4,000 theatres have installed high intensity in the past three years . . . and more are doing so every day. Don't believe the cost of high intensity projection is prohibitive for Peerless Magnarc Lamps produce 200 to 300 per cent more light at the same current cost of low intensity lamps.

Another powerful factor in the progress of high intensity projection is the need of intense, snow-white light for natural color pictures.

Peerless Magnarc Lamps solve the problem of modern, economical, high intensity projection for any theatre. Low current cost, high light output, low cost of operation, plus advanced design which will not be superseded for years to come — these are the reasons why the Peerless Magnarc Lamp outsells all other makes two to one. "It's the finest arc lamp ever built."

be best to employ an outside sound engineer and place him in charge. It was felt that such action would tend to create confidence. It was also decided that the sound engineer selected should devote his entire time to building up thoroughly efficient service in the proposed department.

"From the very beginning, Cincinnati exhibitors showed a really splendid spirit of co-operation. In the two full years of the operation of this department, there has not been even so much as one complaint of poor service. Instead, managers and exhibitors have given high praise for the promptness and efficiency.

Kinds of Service Given

"The plan followed is designed to meet all contingencies. In return for a flat monthly payment planned just to cover cost, plus a small margin for safety against loss, the theatre receives at least one regular, thorough inspection of all sound equipment, plus as many emergency calls as may be necessary. In addition, the night show houses receive as many daytime visits as may be required to keep the equipment in first class condition. Any replacement parts required are billed to the theatre at cost. Full explanation for replacement of parts is supplied if requested.

"Realizing the high value of rapidity in service in time of trouble, the union purchased a suitable speedy, covered, lightly constructed truck, placing it at the disposal of the sound engineer. This truck carries a full stock of spare parts that are at all likely to be required for immediate use in remedying equipment faults; also such testing instruments as will enable the engineer to examine equipment thoroughly. For example, there is a motor and control box, speaker units, such coils, condensers, transformers, etc., as may be needed. There is an emergency amplifier that may be cut into any circuit. It is adaptable to any type of equipment and capable of supplying the volume requisite for even our largest theatres. It can be cut into any circuit in approximately ten minutes. There also is a large and very satisfactory analyzer and it is intended presently to add an oscillograph to the outfit.

"The scope of service as originally planned included sound only, but as time passed and the value of the service rendered was made apparent, exhibitors, managers and projectionists began to lean more heavily upon it, summoning the sound engineer when troubles of almost any sort occurred. Exhibitors began to consult our department concerning projection equipment, both sound and visual, as well as acoustical problems in the design of new theatres or alterations of old ones.

Projection Now Included

"So widely has the service extended that it is today necessary that the sound engineer have at his command a great store of advice and information. It has also become necessary to stock the truck not only with sound equipment spare requirements, but also a stock for visual projection equipments, the latter including intermittent movements, various gear train members, etc., and finally even a complete projector mechanism. Thus equipped we are in position to take prompt care of almost any acute trouble and keep the show moving on schedule. The value of such service is regarded very highly by all concerned.

"Nor are the benefits at all one-sided. The department has built up a feeling of cordial good-will and fellowship between the theatre office and the projection room, which has been cemented by the painstaking, prompt service rendered at relatively low cost.

"Not only that, but due to the fact that the service department has the confidence of exhibitors and managers, it has been possible to obtain from them many improvements in equipment and working conditions that would be, and were, refused in the days before the department existed. Projection in the territory we cover thus has not only been improved, but in addition there has been a very measurable reduction in repair and replacement bills.

"Finally, the work has been made much more pleasant for members of the union, all of which is respectfully submitted as concrete evidence that modern labor unions today can and do render service of basic and high value other than the adjustment of rates of pay, hours of labor and improvement in working conditions."

NOT LIVING UP TO UNION AGREEMENT

IN RESPONSE to an invitation from Local 439, I recently visited New London, Conn., to address a meeting called to discuss matters pertaining in various ways to projection, the projectionist and the relation of the theatre manager and the exhibitor to the craft. The local had invited all exhibitors and managers of Norwich and Willimantic, Conn., and of Westerly, R. I., as well as all members of the local union in each of those cities, to attend.

On my way to New London, the route lay through Middletown, Conn., a city of approximately 20,000, in which three theatres are in operation. Since this city was in easy driving distance of New London, I stopped to call upon Ernest Dorau, who manages the Middlesex and Palace theatres, as well as, I believe, the Capitol, inviting him and all assistant managers to the meeting. "Ruggles of Red Gap" was playing at one of the theatres, and remembering what a corking good comedy it was, I decided to stay long enough to attend the performance.

A few moments before the show was due to open I started for the projection room to extend an invitation to the men on duty to attend the New London meeting. Asking the usher at the foot of the stair how to get to the projection room, I was advised that there was no one up there as yet. Surprised, I awaited the coming of the men. At approximately three minutes before time to start the show, the usher, pointing to a man, said, "There is one of them." By then my watch was in my hand. At two and a half minutes before the picture was due to go on the screen, the other man entered. Later I learned that the contract of the union with that theatre calls for men to be on duty 30 minutes before time for the show to open.

And there were faults in projection that night. Notably, there were numerous flashes of white on the screen, every one of which might have been eliminated by proper attention. This was not the first showing of those films in that theatre; moreover, there were two men on duty. At least twice during the performance the film was permitted to run past the change-over marks until a point was reached where it was so badly damaged that the screen image was a mere smudge.

Local 375 should not tolerate such abuses. They reflect small credit on the union. The public and the employer have some rights, two of which are maximum safety and the best performance possible.

Incidentally, the sound was quite good, except for some distortion due to oil on film and a not too clean sound track, which is, however, chargeable to the exchange supplying the films.

In New London, the union served an excellent steak dinner. There was, so far as I am aware, no managerial organization through which a meeting of theatre executives might be called, but the New London union, which had the enterprise to call the meeting, shouldered all the expense. The following projectionists were present:

New London: L. T. Hill, W. A. Reed, C. Patterson, J. S. Patti, D. B. Fancher, I. S. Dawley, J. Kane, F. Nowell, W. S. Totten, L. Reed, D. D. Almy and W. W. Lucas. (Our young-old friend, Joe Bliven, was unable to attend because of illness.)

Norwich: Charles Oldham, Leo Cimicoski, Albert Fairbanks, Howard Bengerman and C. L. Crowley.

Westerly (Local 538): G. H. Payne, Thomas J. Cowell and Leslie Nowell.

RESISTANCE RATING OF PROJECTIONISTS' 'PHONES

WILLIAM WHITTE of Marion, S., D., writes, "I have only lately considered servicing my own equipment. Have tried it enough to know it is the real joy of projection. Am truly in earnest, hence the following questions.

"In several places in the Bluebook of Projection there is reference to high-resistance headphones. I can well understand the reason for them, but am not certain as to just how high the resistance should be. Most catalogues list 3000- and 5000-ohm phones. Are these high-resistance enough? What is approximately the minimum resistance you would recommend for projectionists' test phones?

"I am using two Strong low-intensity light sources. One of them carries its arc perfectly; the other gives trouble. Motor runs smoothly for a reel or two, then it goes on strike, refusing to budge, making hand feeding compulsory. A few moments

A BASIS FOR BETTER PROJECTION

No matter how modern your projection room is, no matter how costly the equipment it contains, the picture the audience sees on the screen is no better than the projection lens it must pass through.

That is why so many projectionists recommend Super-Cinephor projection lenses and why so many managers insist upon them. They are the first anastigmatic projection lenses. They offer the maximum in reserve covering power, critical definition, flatness of field, color correction and increased brilliance.

The increased box-office revenue they bring make Super-Cinephors far from costly—"One new patron a day will pay for a Super-Cinephor in a year."

later it may take a notion to run, but runs wild, necessitating a lower rheostat setting. It has all the service men around here stumped. Also, please define 'soft tube,' 'hard tube,' 'bridging amplifier' and 'faulty illusion.' Where can I obtain a B & S wire gauge and what do they cost?"

As to headphones, the impedance must be high enough to prevent short-circuiting the source of sound current; for continuity tests with help of a battery, a sufficiently low voltage and phone resistance high enough to insure against passing too much current through the part being tested. While it may not burn anything out, there might be a magnetizing effect and the frequency response would be impaired.

A set rated at 2000 to 2200 ohms per pair of phones is satisfactory, though higher resistances are still better. The 3000-ohm sets should serve very well. Crystal phones are very good. Using 2000-ohm phones, avoid 90-volt batteries in continuity tests of parts that normally carry only current of low values; use 1.5-volt cells instead.

As to the lamp motor, I find myself unable to dope out with certainty just what is wrong in this case, therefore I have referred the matter to the manufacturer. Any supply dealer should be able to get a B & S wire gauge, or one should be able to obtain it from any dealer in electrical goods.

Now as to the definitions: A soft tube is a vacuum tube containing less than standard quantity of gas. Hard tubes are those containing practically no gas at all. A bridging amplifier is one whose input impedance is very high with respect to that of the circuit from which it takes power. This condition insures that the amplifier takes but little or practically no power from the line. Faulty illusion is where picture movement and sound occur or appear to be in different locations.

KIND OF MEN PROJECTION NEEDS

LEIGH H. KELLEY, Elko, Utah, writes, "For almost two years I was relief projectionist at the Hunter theatre here in Elko. When finally the new Elvada was opened I was promoted to the position of projectionist therein. I also service its equipment, consisting of Simplex projectors and Western Electric 'Mirrophonic' sound.

"Our little city has approximately 4,000 people. It is the business center of a ranching and mining country extending about 100 miles north and south. It has two modern, well-equipped theatres. The Hunter seats 835, and the new Elvada 476. Both are operated by the Huish Theater Enterprises, with headquarters in Salt Lake City. Both the Hunter and Elvada are under the direct management of Mr. John Rowberry. Each theatre runs two shows daily, beginning at 7 p.m., except Sundays, when we have a continuous run from 2:30 p.m. Special matinees are run when conditions warrant.

"Patronage is drawn from a wide territory since, while there are two small theatres in neighboring towns, the nearest competitive theatre of our class is around 120 miles away."

I like the way this young man talks.

Farther on in his letter he says he hopes some day to reach the top, or near it. That is as should be. He understands that to rise it is necessary to climb, and climbing means work. One does not just float to the top, as some seem to imagine. Too many enter the profession apparently with the idea that if they have a job and are able to hold it, that is the top.

REEL DEVICE FOR AUTOMATIC CHANGEOVER

IN SEVERAL cities on the Pacific Coast an automatic changeover device has been in use for quite some while. Its producer is now preparing to introduce it in the East. While I have not as yet sufficient data to justify expressing an opinion as to the excellence of this equipment, it may be fairly assumed to have merit if after practical trial in San Francisco, Seattle, Portland, Sacramento and other cities, its producer feels willing to spread out into other fields.

The device consists in die cast reels made from very tough metal. In Figure 1 we see one of these reels, together with the upper magazine spindle, upon which is mounted a part of the assembly (normally enclosed, the cover being here removed to show its parts). Upon the side of each reel are attached certain "trigger fingers" by means of which the projectionist may determine the exact time of changeover. These fingers are shown in Figure 2.

As the film unwinds, at the proper time, predetermined by the projectionist, these fingers set into operation certain mechanical and electrical impulses that result in the automatic carrying out of all the acts necessary to effect changeover.

On the wall a control cabinet is mounted. Special dowsers are attached to each projector.

YET AGAIN: HOW TO CURE FLICKER

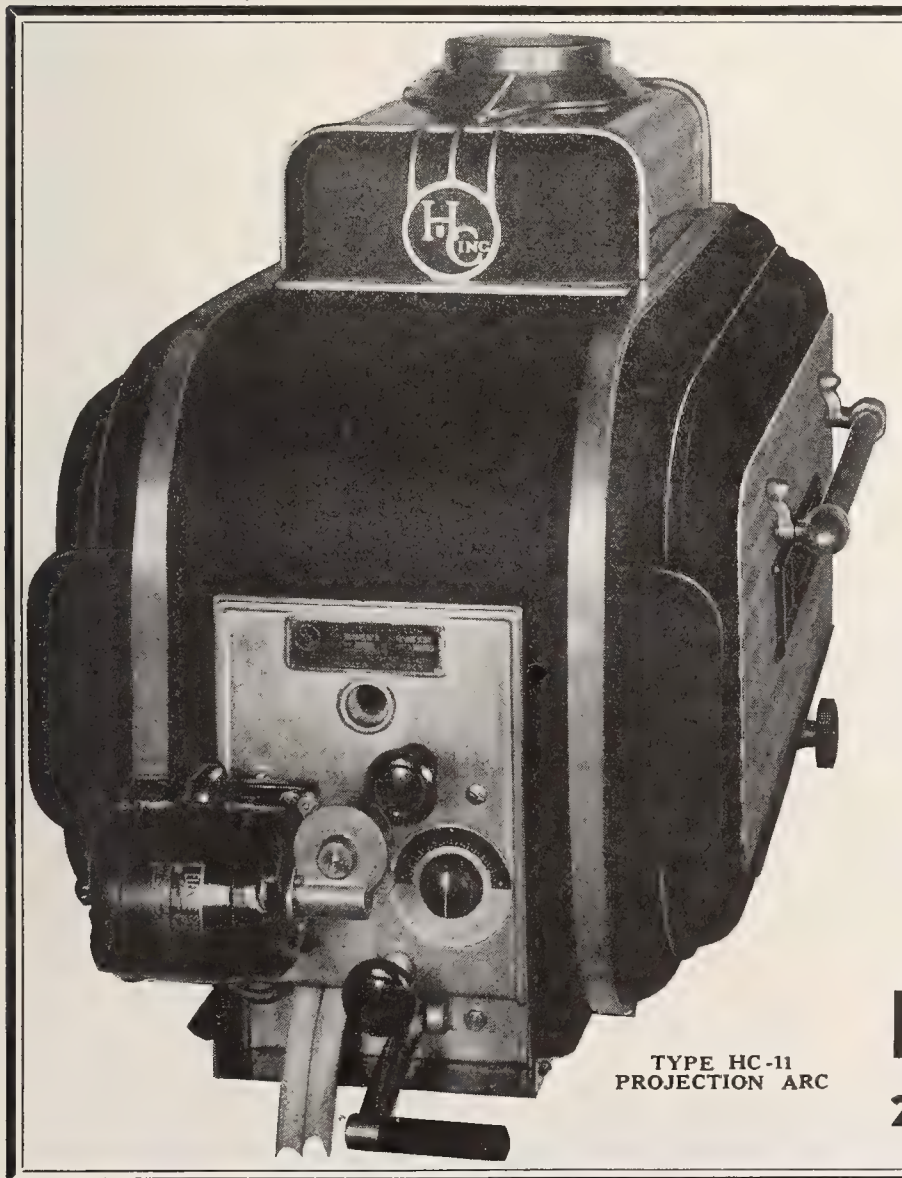
F. K. KON of the Odeon theatre in Kuala Lumpur, Federated Malay States, writes, "I shall be thankful for your aid in solving the following flicker problem. Projectors are Simplex, with which we have been using low-intensity lamps. Later we installed Suprex lamps taking current from a motor-generator set. While using the low-intensity lamps there was no flicker. Since changing to the brighter light sources there has been a flicker which cannot be got rid of, no matter how accurately the shutter blades are timed.

"The flicker appears to be periodic, disappearing for an instant and then appearing again. Rear shutters were installed and the blades were widened, but all to no avail. Dallmeyer lenses, Series LV 4½. Projection distance 80 feet. Screen image 16 feet wide.

"Could you suggest any compound for cleaning a screen surface that has turned yellow?"

Flicker tendency increases as the screen illumination becomes more intense. That is quite natural, since flicker is due to contrast between illumination and darkness. However, if your projection speed is the standard 90 feet per minute, there should be no visible flicker because of the rate of speed, so it certainly is due to fault in your rotating shutter. Widening its blades might and probably would make it worse instead of better. Proceed as follows:



At some print shop obtain a sheet of cardboard, remove one of the shutters, mark its exact outlines on the cardboard, cut out the pattern thus formed and install it in place of the metal blade, first having blackened its surfaces with ink or lampblack. Now trim off a little, equal in amount, from each side of each cardboard blade and note the effect, being very careful not to permit the paper shutter to stop in the light beam. If there is improvement but not a cure, then trim again. It is a case of cut and try until the right blade width is found, as it will be provided you are using standard projection speed, which doubtless is the case because of the sound. Then trim the metal blade as indicated by the cardboard blades and install.

The periodic effect probably is due to the flicker being visible only in the brighter scenes.

As to the screen, you have given no information as to what kind of surface it is, therefore it is possible only to deal in generalities. Since the surface has turned yellow, it probably either is pretty old or there has been some special chemical action. In either case no compound I know of would help much.

I would suggest that you clean the surface thoroughly with soap and water and paint with a mixture of white lead ground in oil and white zinc ground in oil, using equal parts of each. Mix to rather thin consistency with one quarter boiled linseed oil and three quarters turpentine. Add enough blue (ultamarine preferably, though prussian will do) so that a fairly strong bluish tinge is imparted while the paint is in the pot. Apply two coats of this paint to the screen.

Or you might give the surface a coat of white calcimine such as can be bought in packages ("Alabastine" is one make that gives excellent results). The advantage is that it can be washed off as soon as it shows discoloration and a new coat applied.

PLANNING THE THEATRE

A SERVICE DEPARTMENT DEALING WITH ARCHITECTURAL DESIGN AND MATERIALS, DECORATION AND FURNISHINGS

ANSWERS TO INQUIRIES: One of the principal functions of this department is to answer inquiries pertaining to preliminary considerations in the planning of a new theatre or the remodeling of an existing one. All questions receive the personal attention of Peter M. Hulsken, A.I.A., contributing editor of this department and a practicing architect who long has specialized in theatre design. He will be glad to offer advice, suggestions and criticisms. Working plans, however, cannot be supplied. All communications intended for this department should be addressed to Better Theatres, Rockefeller Center, New York. In publishing replies, only initials are used for identification of the person inquiring.

THE QUESTION:

I HAVE A very small theatre, 70 feet long, 22 feet wide, 18 to 21 feet high. Walls are plaster with acoustical felt panels. Theatre is box shaped with tin ceiling.

I feel that this tin ceiling is not the best thing for our sound. I am planning on covering same with some acoustical material. Should we arch our new ceiling, or would it be okay to cover the tin ceiling on the flat, as it is?

We have veneer seats and rubber matting down our aisle. Since neither of these are beneficial to sound I felt that we should treat our ceiling.

Also please advise if you think our seating arrangement is all right. We have one center aisle with rows of five seats on either side. Exits are all one one side of building. Seating capacity is 200, with 6-foot wide space allowed for exit doors.—C. J. W.

THE ANSWER:

A METAL ceiling is not of the proper material for a theatre and certainly is detrimental to good sound. Your suggestion of covering it with acoustic material is all right. This metal ceiling should be stripped with wood strips before the other material is applied.

I cannot find any reason why this new ceiling should be arched, and to do so would add to the cost.

You should of course install upholstered seating. That would not only improve the looks of the auditorium, but also the sound.

For such a narrow theatre, your present arrangement of seats, with a center aisle, is about the only way it could be planned.

THE QUESTION:

ALONG SIDE of our two-story apartment building, which is 120 feet in length, we have a lot 39 feet by 150 feet, running the long way of the apartment building. Would it be practical to build a theatre on this lot, using one wall of the apartment building, brick, as a wall for the theatre?

On this lot could we get a theatre seating 350 or 400 persons in the main auditorium, and perhaps 200 or 250 persons in a stadium, with a candy shop, theatre office, downstairs rest-rooms and a fair sized lobby? We like the stadium idea partly because the theatre would be cozier on slack nights.

We planned on hooking on to our present heating plant in the apartment building for heat—or would you provide a separate heating plant of the modern steam heat core type? We have air-conditioning equipment for a 300-seat house.

What should a building of this type, ready for the installation of the seats, projection equipment, screen, etc., cost us? Tile, brick or stucco?—C. V.

THE ANSWER:

IF THE WALL of the apartment building is heavy enough to carry the additional load for roof and extra masonry of theatre, and if there are no windows in this wall, I see no reason why this apartment wall could not be used for side wall of the theatre. It is better, however, to build a steel skeleton along the wall for supports, and use the present wall as a curtain wall.

If you intend to use the full length of the lot and only expect a seating capacity of between 600 and 650 seats, you can obtain this on a one-floor auditorium without going to the expense of a stadium.

I do not think that the apartment heating plant will be large enough to take care of the theatre, and doubt if the apartment boiler room will be large enough to house the additional equipment. I believe it will be far better to install an independent heating system for the theatre, which can be located under the stage.

As you have complete air-conditioning equipment to take care of a 300-seat house, you will have to install one other unit. It may be less expensive than remodeling the present unit.

The cost of such a building, exclusive of equipment, should not be figured at less than $30,000.

THE QUESTION:

I WANT to remodel the front of my building. My building was built in 1913 and still possesses the old style arch which was used in those days. The building is 50 feet wide by 30 feet high, and faces north. The entrance to the lobby, which is through the arch, is not closed or doored and the arch is 11 feet wide by 12 feet high at the top of the arch. The lobby is 12 feet square. There are two 6-inch steps from the sidewalk into the level lobby floor.

However, I don't know whether to take out the steps or not. Entrance into the foyer is through the east wall and the doors extend about 4 feet of space at the intersection of the south with the east wall so that there is only about 8 feet from the door to the sidewalk. This short distance makes too short a distance to take out the steps entirely.—E. L. H.

THE ANSWER:

IF IT IS at all possible, by all means remove the steps at the sidewalk. The distance of 8 feet from sidewalk to entrance doors to foyer is not sufficient to give the proper slope for eliminating the two 6-inch steps. Six inches is the maximum slope for an 8-foot run. It may be possible to slope the floor in the foyer another 6 inches to make up for the other step.

I suggest that you fill in the arch above the entrance doors, as after the marquee is in place, hardly any part of the present arch will show, since the bottom of the marquee should be 9 feet above the sidewalk line.

THE QUESTION:

OUR VILLAGE of a little over 500 population is now without a theatre and we are now confronted with the necessity of remodeling an old building or building a new one. What is the smallest practical theatre seating and dimensions? What should a theatre be constructed with?

The available building is of solid brick —three outside walls, two stories in which the ceiling can be raised. The main floor is 74x21½x12.—E. H. M.

THE ANSWER:

THERE IS no fixed limit to the practical size of a small theatre. While the population of your village is around 500, there still exist the possibilities of several surrounding communities from which patronage may be drawn.

The building, 74x21 feet, 6 inches, may be large enough for an auditorium accommodating 190 seats, which is pretty small for a theatre that is to be operated regularly. The brick building will be okay.

scale, though always in keeping with the size of the space, height of the ceiling and the character of the theatre.

For these reasons pilasters, either modern or of simplified classic design, may well be used on walls that are covered with a fabric in modernized period design; or, perhaps, we shall see a modern version of the ornate Baroque style, the sweeping scroll forms in relief plaster work, being slenderized and used only at focal points, with ample plain wall spaces to act as a foil for them.

Where the foyer is a comparatively narrow curved passage along the rear of the auditorium, it is often desirable to secure a sense of greater space. This can be done by using photo murals set in shallow recesses along the rear wall and lighted from above by a concealed trough unit. Views of a fine formal garden, which are readily available, with statuary and architectural features, all done in tones of gray, would be excellent. Views of the gardens of Versailles have been used very successfully on the walls of a New York night club, where the suggestion that one is looking out into the gardens is conveyed by Venetian blinds across the tops of the recesses, piers with pilaster treatments being used between the photo murals.

Where the foyer is practically a part of the auditorium, being merely the space in back of the standee rail, it is necessarily only very moderately lighted and it can be given liveliness and an appearance of greater depth by lighted niches or backlighted wall panels, which should not, however, throw enough light into the auditorium to interfere with a satisfactory view of the picture on the screen. The wall surface in such a foyer may be covered with a fabric, especially since it is likely to have acoustical treatment.

Modern style interior decoration no longer has the initial appeal of novelty that was largely the reason for its practically universal adoption in theatre interiors, therefore it seems to be time to look for something different. Many modern style schemes have little more to recommend them than the fact that they are colorful, flamboyant, rich and unusual.

The Decoration Of Auditoriums

AUDITORIUM decoration has become increasingly rich and elaborate during the past few years, and the trend is towards even more handsome treatments, employing patterned fabrics extensively on the walls and for draperies. Fabrics of rich texture, either plain or patterned, are being used more and more on the backs and seats of chairs. Patterned carpets, and inlaid designs in plain "patent back" carpeting, give decorative interest and a sense of luxury under foot. Theatre chairs have been greatly improved, streamlined and styled to the highest degree of comfort and smartness.

Influence of Lighting

The present-day theatre auditorium is anything but the dark chamber in which to view motion pictures that some advocates of extremely plain functional design used to talk about. Plain or badly decorated theatre auditoriums belong to the "dark ages" of the motion picture industry, before modern lighting made it possible to have a considerable amount of light—glare-free, soft and well distributed—in the auditorium, without interference with the enjoyment of the picture on the screen.

Better lighting makes better auditorium decoration worthwhile, even necessary. This is seen in the treatment of the walls around the new pylon bracket lighting fixtures with rich fabrics, panelled for decorative effect. These fixtures light up the handsome patterns to advantage, adding greatly to the attractiveness of the theatre. Where there is indirect lighting from coves, from a ceiling plaque or from indirect pendent fixtures, the whole auditorium is softly and evenly lighted, and the walls are usually decorated with designs painted or otherwise executed upon the walls; or very frequently they are covered with patterned fabrics used in interesting ways, sometimes in combination with figure silhouettes painted on silk panels or other features.

Choice of Chair Covering

There is a direct relation between the wall treatment and the choice of a covering for the seating in a theatre auditorium. Plaster walls, without covering, often call for a rich soft fabric on the chairs, such as plush, with its deep pile, or mohair velour, to relieve the coldness of effect and make the auditorium more friendly appearing. Fabric covered walls call for chair covering of similar texture and quality to the wall fabric. If a pattern is used, it should be carefully chosen to look well with the wall covering. Often imitation leather may be used on the seats of the chairs, if not also on the backs, for its durability and easy maintenance. The backs count most in the decorative scheme and in sound absorption, therefore fabric is frequently most desirable for them.

Size of Fabric Pattern

In the use of patterned decorative fabrics it is highly important to see that the patterns are of the right "scale," that is, that each pattern is the right size for its use—neither too large nor too small—and that it is right in relation of size to the other patterns used in the auditorium. A pattern should be either large enough to count as a distinct design when seen from some distance, or to appear as little more than an indefinite mottling, which resolves itself into a distinct pattern when seen at closer range.

Emotional Effect of Color

Color is one of the most valuable elements in decoration and usually the least understood. While it is important to secure harmony in a color scheme, the thing of primary importance is to use colors for their emotional effect. Red, brown, orange and yellow are warm colors, cheering and friendly, while blue, light violet and blue-green are cool colors, quieting and restful, with a certain aloofness and restraint that gives an air of elegance and reserve.

The colors used in decoration are seldom the pure red, blue, etc., of the rainbow, but are crossed with other colors. Crimson is a red tinged with violet; flame color is red inclining towards orange; blue is often tinged with green or with violet; green usually inclines towards yellow or blue. Such colors are more interesting and chairs and divans in a great variety of shapes and sizes are available, with upholstery ranging from imitation leather almost as tough as the frame, to fine fabrics; and with either springs or padding.

Modern furniture of wood construction is naturally less durable, but it is also less a departure from conventional types which we have become used to in the home. Employing the frame but little in effecting any design, chairs and sofas of this type are modern principally in a straightness of line and emphasis on the real purpose of such furniture—to be sat on, in easy comfort. In upholstery and coverings, furniture of this type—the so-called Neo-Classic—is identical with metallic-frame furniture.

It is now in good taste, however, to use period styles of furniture with modern backgrounds, allowing a certain amount of variation in the treatment of a lounge or foyer (though more particuarly lounges) in a theatre having a modern scheme.

All lounge and foyer furniture, regardless of type, should be used with a full appreciation of its value as a means of adding to the decorative scheme. Providing a place to sit down or to lay a package or a purse on is only one of its purposes. It is there also to create an atmosphere of comfort, even luxury, and of leisure.

¶ SEATING FABRICS

IT WOULD seem axiomatic that auditorium seating coverings should be determined by the decorative scheme of the walls. That does not mean, however, that the seating fabric need to represent a repetition of the wall treatment. Quite to the contrary in many instances—for example, in rather plain theatres having little or no wall decoration, in which cases the seating may well introduce not only vivid color, but prominent pattern also.

Patterns in auditorium seating fabrics are apparently less in favor today than in recent years. One large manufacturer (Shelton Looms) finds that the demand in mohairs and velours for theatre seating during the past year, has been increasingly for solid colors. On the other hand, a prominent maker of imitation leather widely used for auditorium seating (Pantasote) has just developed a leather (a material not ordinarily belonging to the pattern class of coverings) with a pronounced pattern in two colors. The answer would seem to be that the texture and sheen of mohair provide, with the beauty of its color, the desired luxuriousness, while leather (particularly if used on the backs as well as seats) often needs the softening effect of embossing or prominent graining. The showman will know how to choose upon considering the decorative character of other factors in the auditorium, the walls particularly, so as to achieve the quiet elegance that his auditorium should have.

¶ DRAPERIES

UNTIL THE last few years, it was traditional for the showman to hang draperies all over the theatre. Today (except, of course, at the stage) they are used sparingly to soften a lounge doorway or standee rail, and to give a cheery touch to the box office window.

Doorway drapes are commonly of velour, in a solid color picked out from the more prominent shades used in the adjoining room. They may, however, be fittingly of other materials like rayon, worsted mixtures and mohair, and pattern in doorway or arch drapes is sometimes indicated, especially if the adjoining walls, and perhaps also the carpeting, are plain.

Standee Rail and Box Office

Drapes at the standee rail ordinarily should be hung in liberal folds, representing, say, 50% fullness. Materials well suited to this area to give the desired softening effect are velour and rayon damask.

Box office window drapes should be somewhat ornamental, with festoons or fringes, to strike a theatrical note. Suitable drapes for the purpose can be found in great variety in such materials as velour, erect pile mohair and sun-fast silk.

It should be remembered throughout the theatre that it is the little touch as well as the broad stroke which determines the atmosphere created by the interior scheme. And to determine what either should be, is not merely a matter of what "looks good." It is a matter of showmanship—what stimulates and gratifies the senses of the public. Achieved and maintained, it's the thing that "sells" the theatre—George Schutz.

pleasing. They are even more satisfactory when gray is added to the cool colors, as in gray-blue, gray-green; or when brown is added to warm colors, as in "rusty" reds and yellows. Sometimes gray is added to light tints of the warm colors and we have, for example, "dusty pink," a very popular color.

Colors like those found in nature are often best—autumn leaf yellow and red, the soft pink of coral, a deep rich blue, and jade green. Light, soft tints, approximating white, play a very large part in interior decoration, while pure white is seldom used. The tint known as "off-white" is white slightly tinged with brown and yellow; light beige, one of the most popular tints, is a light buff with an almost imperceptible tinge of pink.

So far as color harmony is concerned, the common error of theorists is to recommend either a combination of cool colors, such as green, blue and light-violet, on the one hand; or of warm colors on the other hand, such as red, yellow, orange and brown. Good color schemes can be made in either of these ways, but it is surprising how much more liveliness and charm can be put into a scheme of warm colors by adding a dash of cool colors; or into a scheme of blues and greens by touches of red and orange.

While the colors in a theatre need to be vibrant and lively, they should never be crude or "loud." This is largely a matter of the skillful use of a quiet tone on large areas, as a foil for the stronger colors. For example, a soft, rich slightly gray blue is vibrant when used for accent on a wall of light beige color. Where all the colors shout, there is such a babel that none of them has a chance and the effect is strident.

The various current trends in theatre decoration and furnishing provide a wealth of ideas suited to theatres of all sizes, and there is an ample range of new designs, textures and colorings, so there is no reason for a theatre to be common-place and unattractive in its interior treatment.

Guarding Against Hazards To Safety in Operating Practice

● Now, with the time for holiday decorating approaching, it is well to consider what should and should not be done—in any season

AS THE MOTION picture industry approaches another holiday season, from the observation of a very fair cross-section of the theatres of this country it seems an opportune time to caution theatre managers, and even theatre owners, about safety of theatres. If one serious accident should occur during this happy season of the year, it will not only be tragic but it will be the signal for all governmental authorities to focus their attention upon this industry.

Accidents during the holiday period always seem much more sensational than at other periods of the year, and they provide very much more emotional copy for the newspapers than do accidents during the off-season. Whether or not we accept this emotional phase of theatre accidents is, of course, up to each individual manager, but it certainly is a definite problem.

Immediately one thinks of safety in theatres, the problem divides itself into two classifications: The first is safety in the plan and design of theatres; the second is safety in the maintenance and operation of the theatres. The subject should be discussed in that order, but because the theatre manager can contribute more towards safety in the proper maintenance and operation of the theatre we will discuss that point of view first.

How Good Maintenance Keeps a Theatre Safe

ALL THINGS wear out, and as the theatre begins to "wear out," it becomes more and more hazardous from the angle of safety to theatre patrons. Therefore, a proper maintenance policy is very necessary in order to operate safe theatres. The insurance companies try to help, but very frequently their advice is bad. The only reason for this bad advice is the effort on the part of the insurance companies to resolve safety in theatres to a cut and dried code or formula.

The insurance inspectors either have little or no authority, or are inexperienced, or become very routine in their recommendations. Frequently they apply a rule or ruling which is an abstract rule, or a general practice is good but when specifically applied creates a worse condition.

Again, only too frequently the worth and value of the insurance man's recommendation is measured in rate savings. It is very natural that the theatre owner should want to keep the insurance premiums down to a minimum, but again, the savings to be created is not always a proper measure of a recommendation made by an insurance company. The only real measure is to decide if a certain condition is a safe condition or an unsafe condition. If it is an unsafe condition what can be done to make it more safe or less hazardous.

Realizing that these thoughts about the insurance inspector's part in the safety of theatres may arouse some comment and discussion, I want to give a few examples to illustrate the point.

Frequently an insurance company representative has noted a bad stepping or a drab flights of steps. The recommendation has come in to install light on stairway "X." No thought or suggestions have been included as to where the light should be placed, or what type of light should be used. The light was installed by the manager who was a little annoyed at the recommendation in the first place, because the history of the theatre indicated that he had never had an accident at that point or even any hesitancy at that point by patrons of the theatre. Now with the light installed the insurance company is happy because though there was no premium reduction, rule 56, chapter 4, page 30 has been complied with, but the light now causes shades and shadows which are infinitely more hazardous than the old condition.

Just one more point: There is a device on the market and available for installation in every booth that makes it impossible to a booth fire of any consequence. I, personally, know that great effort has been exerted on various rating bureaus to have them recognize the merits of this device. They can't acknowledge this device and still maintain their present rates on propection booths; apparently they prefer to retain the higher rates rather than give such equipment its proper credit. Insurance is in the final analysis just business, and big business at that.

Theatre Pays for High Risks

The third point in this connection is the apparent conflict between the fire risk man and the public liability man. Every insurance man tries his best to keep the two separate; of course, we know they are separate and we know the difference, but nevertheless the theatre man is very frequently placed in-between in a position very similar to being in-between in a labor jurisdictional fight. Insurance is insurance to the average theatre operator, and the very nature of our business should be given weight by the insurance inspector whether he represents the fire risk or the public liability risk.

The final point is this question of the insurance companies boiler inspection service in theatres. Perhaps it's because theatre boilers are small and of the low pressure type, perhaps it is because so many theatre boiler rooms are untidy and dirty, but the ERADICATING ROACHES: There are at least four species of roaches found in or about theatres — the American roach; the European or Oriental roach, sometimes called the black beetle; the Australian roach; and the small German roach sometimes called a water bug. Roaches can be controlled by using various poisons, repellents, and fumigants and by trapping. Fumigants are not recommended for use in theatres where roaches are the only pests to be got rid of.

Sodium fluoride, either pure or diluted one-half with powdered gypsum or ordinary wheat flower, may be dusted either by hand or by a pressure gun, into all the cracks and crevices in toilet rooms, around baseboards, under chairs and in ventilating grilles or plenum chambers. The immediate effect is to drive the roaches out of their hiding places; in the course of a few hours they die. All roaches found dead, or apparently dead, should be swept up and burned. This dusting should be conscientiously repeated every night for two or three weeks.

An ordinary brand of borax is the important ingredient of many commercial roach powders. Borax can be used in the pure state or mixed with flour and scattered about the usual haunts of the roaches. Borax in its pure state will sometimes be avoided by the roaches, hence the mixing with the flour. Sometimes the borax can be mixed with some granulated or powdered sugar, as brown sugar. The writer has not had the success with the borax treatent that has resulted from the sodium fluoride method. It is the writer's opinion that borax is more of a repellent than a poison.

A paste may be made of flour and powdered sugar and 2% of phosphorous. This paste can be placed on bits of cardboard and placed in runways of the roaches. This is a very effective and neat and tidy method of fighting roaches—but remember phosphorous is deadly poison, therefore this phosphorous paste is poisonous. Try not to get any of the powder or paste on the hands, and be sure to wash the hands thoroughly after mixing and planning this bait. Caution the entire theatre staff about this, and do not expose this paste in public toilets during the time the theatre is open to the public.

Trapping is entirely too tedious to be of any use in theatres.

Roaches will not frequent places unless they find some form of food. This means that in these days of increasing candy and popcorn sales in theatres, that the roach is going to become a real problem to the theatre manager. The first step in the fight against roaches is thorough cleaning every night. Reserve supplies of candy and popcorn should be stored in roach proof cabinets.

boiler inspection service is about as routine as can be imagined, and consequently about as useless. Nevertheless it's one of those annual rituals that must go on.

There was one incident in connection with a boiler in an isolated theatre. It was really humorous when one looks back on the mass of correspondence on this particular incident. Certain boiler controls were installed, before the job was completed the insurance inspector visited the theatre and reported that the controls did not comply with the code. Immediately wires were sent out to stop the job and a long controversy was started with the manufacturer of the controls about selling controls that were not passed by the rating bureau. The contractor who had been stopped on his job of installing the controls began to demand his money; he was finally paid off. The end of the heating season came along before the controversy was settled. During the summer months the writer had occasion to visit that theatre. After a thorough check, the controls were all labeled as passed by the Underwriters Laboratories and everything seemed in shape. The house maintenance man was instructed how to complete the connecting up of the controls. Much to my astonishment, about the middle of August, in came another report from the insurance company that the controls did not comply with the code, etc., etc. Again correspondence started. Finally, the writer had to make a special trip to the theatre and meet an inspector there. All that was wrong when we both got on the job was that the controls had not been electrically connected. Nowhere in any of the inspector's reports had he ever mentioned the connection. The connection of the controls had in each instance been stopped because of the statements made by the inspectors. With such un-intelligent inspections and reports as this instance discloses, we as theatre operators can't put too much dependence in the system of inspections. The insurance company assumes no moral responsibility whatsoever; it is purely and simply a business proposition of basing experience against future probabilities, and beyond that we can expect no great help from their methods or formulae.

Chief Sources of Theatre Hazards

THE PROJECTION room and the electrical wiring system in a theatre form the two greatest hazards. The laws and ordinances for most every state and town now have the projection booths in theatres fairly well regulated. If all projection rooms complied with the laws of the state and the town in which it is located they would be in reasonable acceptable condition. It is definitely a responsibility of the theatre owner first and the manager second to know that the booth in the theatre does comply with the governing code. If the booth does not comply, then it is a case of pure and simple negligence, and if anything should happen in that booth the full penalty for negligence should properly be exacted. The Standards and Recommendations of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers are equal to any local or State codes, so if the booth in the theatre is built accordingly there is little to fear from it as a real theatre hazard.

In regard to the electric system for light and power, a cross-section of the theatres indicate that these conditions are generally below average in theatres. It is undoubtedly the cost of revising and reconditioning the electrical system in a theatre that makes theatre men so reticent about undertaking the job. None-the-less it is still important and necessary if we are to operate safe theatres.

Stringing Lights for Lobby Displays

Many managers are guilty of making bad conditions worse by stringing light extension cords around lobbies, and foyers for garlands and spotlights. Many managers pay no attention whatever to the wiring of displays as built by their own sign shop or purchased from some commercial shop. A fire is a fire regardless of its source, and a fire in a theatre may cause a panic. We have no excuse for not fighting this problem at the cause, which means eliminate all temporary wiring regardless of its nature or its use.

Unquestionably the very next most important risk in theatres is decorations. This particularly applies to seasonal decorations for Thanksgiving, Hallowe'en and the Christmas holidays. The materials used for decorations are in most cases inflammable. Most any material can be made slow-burning, certainly we should demand as a minimum slow-burning materials for all decorations. Of course, in connection with decorations, comes also temporary wiring for effects.

The placing of signs, easel boards, large set display pieces that partially block exits, or at least reduce exit space, all form possible hazard for which there will be no excuse when that catastrophe overtakes you. This problem of cluttering up every available space with boards of some sort is definitely up to the manager, it is his responsibility, and he can't pass it on to anyone else. A lot of it is very definitely useless, and unnecessary. It would be very profitable to start a campaign to untangle, clarify and simplify lobby and front advertising.

Consistent Inspection Necessary

No one can list item for item the things that must be done in order to have a safe theatre, but continuous and thorough inspections will bring to light conditions as they are, and just a reasonable amount of intelligence will find a solution for them. There are today still literally hundreds of theatre managers that don't know their own theatre. We can't have safe theatres until we have theatre managers who want safe theatres. We can't have safe theatres until every person connected with each theatre feels strongly his responsibility in maintaining safe conditions in theatres. The electrician who deliberately overloads an electric circuit by using too large lamps without a complaint is just as guilty of negligence as the manager who ordered him to do it.

Codes Too Restrictive

Reverting to the safety in the plan and design of theatres, this of course, should be taken care of by the architect. To know that it is not taken care of by anybody in particular it is only necessary to visit a few score theatres. After all, architects are not theatre men, they don't know our business, and therefore cannot provide the practical side of theatre planning and design. They, of course, many times make valuable suggestions. It has been the shortcomings of the theatre of the past, and those shortcomings can be laid mostly at the feet of the architect, that has brought about the very severe regulations of theatre plan and construction throughout city and state codes.

The codes governing the building of theatres are generally very strict, in many instances far too strict. The pendulum is swung to the extreme towards complete regulation. There are many small towns and cities that are adopting new building codes. In many instances the step from the type of building existing now to the type they specify in the code is too great and tends to increase the cost of building and remodeling by exorbitant proportions. This has but one logical effect, to retard building and remodeling. Theatre men have failed to follow sufficiently closely the developing of building codes in their communities. Unless we become interested in the building code and make an effort to get a proper code we will find that in the future we will have to finance 100 per cent fireproof buildings that house mostly fireproof stair wells, foyers, fireproof tunnels, fire walls, fire doors, and fire curtains on the stage. ## Flasher Letter Units and Display Light Contacts

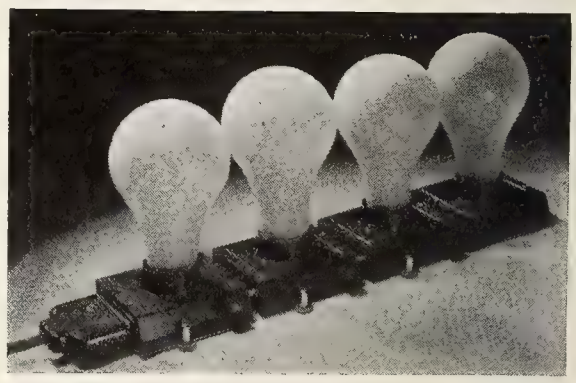
FOLLOWING THE introduction of luminous letter units (under the name of Spell-O-Light), the Besbee Products Corporation of Trenton, N. J., has developed special timing and grouping contacts for the animation of signs or display lighting.

The letter units are interchangeable metallic boxes, containing a lamp, holding the translucent letter, which is made of a non-inflammable substance, and with plug and socket connections for attachment, immediately adjoining each other, on a circuit.

Plugged to the nearest 110-volt, a-c or d-c outlet, the first box letter flashes on, followed by the second, third and so on. When all letters are on for a few moments, they extinguish and the cycle begins again. Spelling may be fast or slow, letter-by-letter, by syllables or by words. Units may be arranged in a single row, in scattered rows, stacked, and so on.

The contact units likewise plug together and have timing knobs and grouping switches. Each contact is a complete, self-contained automatic switch and receptacle. Bulbs to be controlled are screwed directly in the receptacle, or connected by attachment cord. Bulbs are flashed on one by one until the entire string is lit, whereupon they all go out and cycle begins again.

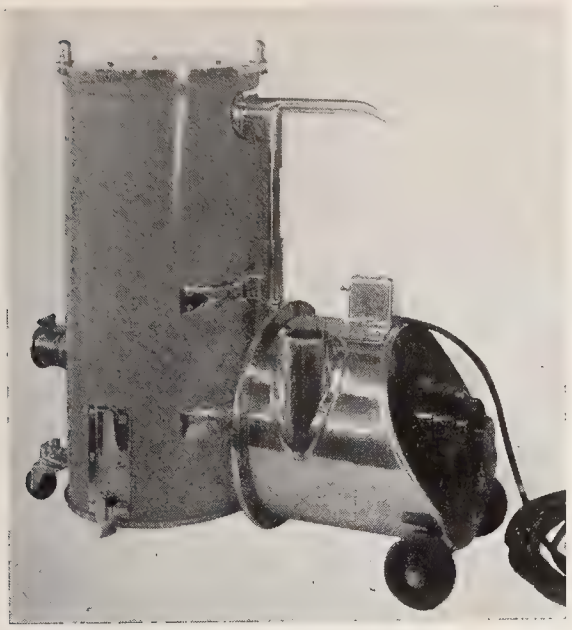
There is also a double-flasher combination of two units, permitting one light to go on and off, followed by the second light on and off, and so on; and also a triple-flasher. Used with colored bulbs, these flashers provide color effects and animation.



How Spell-O-Light letters are inserted.

Letters attached in a sign unit.

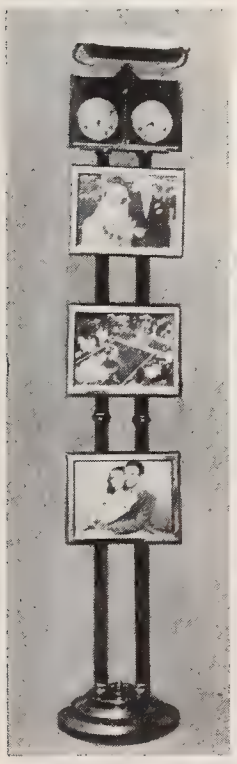
Applied to a marquee sign, for example, these units permit flashing letter by letter, by syllables or entire words, using the requisite number of contacts. A changeable sign made up of Spell-O-Light boxes may be used in the lobby to announce coming attractions. Several contacts may be applied to the lighting of easels and display boards and frames, causing them to flash on and off in rotation with others. The use of double- and triple-flashers permits lighting a sign or panel successively in two or three colors.



Contact units plugged together.

New Light-Weight Vacuum Cleaner of Heavy-Duty Design

A HEAVY-DUTY vacuum cleaner suited to theatres, designed in a model only 9 inches in diameter overall, and but 28 inches long, has been developed by the Spencer Turbine Company of Hartford, Conn. It is equipped with a 1/3-h.p. motor.



One of the features of the design makes it unnecessary to lift out the dust bag in order to evacuate the container. Being porous, a dust bag allows some amount of its contents to get into the air when being removed and emptied. Instead of being removed, the bag in this new Spencer-Turbine cleaner has its open end downward, attached to a ring which can be slid up the container only as far as the upper rim. When lifted, the bag is emptied into a metal receptacle at the bottom of the container, and this, when unclamped, is readily removed by raising the cleaner from the floor.

Other characteristics of this equipment include a swivel elbow connection between hose and tool handle, quickly manipulated connections for transferring hose for either suction or blowing, free-action coupling enabling tool to follow floor surface regardless of position of handle, two-wheel and front castor mounting, light-weight fibre casing (all trim is in nickel). The weight of the cleaner is 25 pounds, the dirt capacity of the container is 8 quarts. A 12½-foot vacuum hose is supplied as standard equipment, and the regular electric socket attachment cord is 25 feet long. Regular equipment also includes an assortment of floor, wall and furniture cleaning attachments.

Showtime display clocks for the box office and (left) as a unit of a new lobby display rack equipped with shielded light socket. Both models have been developed by the Albert Sprincin Manufacturing Co. of Chicago. Crackle finishes are obtainable in various colors, with trim and lettering in chromium.

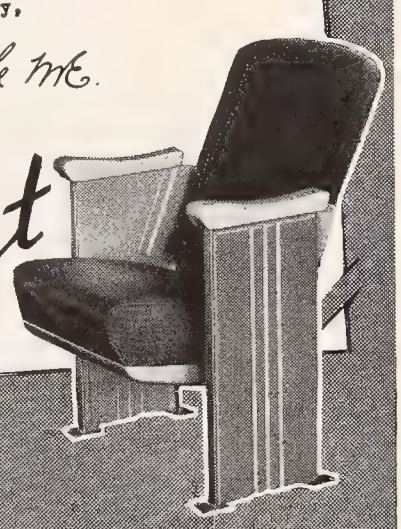
Attention: Mr. Charles C. Koontz, President

Dear Mr. Koontz:

When I finally selected and installed in the Liberty Theatre in Libertyville, Illinois, your International theatre chairs, it was done after a very thorough, careful, painstaking investigation of nearly all theatre chairs manufactured.



The reason for selecting your chairs was the simplicity of construction; the complete absence of objectionable parts on any surface, eliminating entirely exterior screw heads, nuts, bolts, hinges or other sharp-cornered metal pieces which so often cause damage; also the neat appearance of your design; the well-balanced seat, back and standards.

And although your chairs have been installed for some time and have been given a thorough trial and in many cases severe tests to find weak or defective or objectionable features, I must truthfully say that I can recommend your chairs fully 100% to any owner or exhibitor who wants only the best and nothing else, which you are furnishing in your chairs.

Yours very truly,

York. The registering device operates up to the last ticket sold, and then closes off automatically. It will not record additional sales when more tickets are called for than the unit holds.

Multi-unit construction is used. The entire mechanism is removed from its casing in one operation, after which the single units can easily be separated from each other. Units not in use can be locked, and their operating keys pressed down out of the cashier's way until needed. All units can be operated at once when box office demand is heavy. Up to five tickets can be dispensed simultaneously.

The control keys are fast-operating, and respond to a light touch, thus avoiding cashier fatigue which often results in errors.

Expansion Bolt With Rubber as Securing Medium

EXPANSION BOLTS having rubber as the sole securing medium, have been developed by Craftplug, Inc., of New York. The rubber used is of cold-rolled, non-conforming type. It exerts a permanent grip on the hole in which the bolt is placed, yet is non-rigid, and will neither be damaged nor damage the floor where subjected to heavy abuse, as for example where seats are mounted on top of carpet. The shock absorbing qualities of the bolt are such that a safe grip will be obtained even on floors of only 1-inch concrete.

The manufacturer recommends as a test of both the shock-absorbing and holding qualities of the new rubber bolt that

New Mercury Vapor Rectifier Tube Has "No Sag" Filament

A FILAMENT of "no-sag" characteristics features a new mercury vapor tube for projection arc rectifiers developed by Herman A. DeVry, Inc., of Chicago. Power rating is 15 amperes.

The expansion of a filament under the heat of operation, leading to danger of breakage at the point of sag and sudden interruption in service, limits the safe life period of rectifier bulbs. It is customary to replace such bulbs as a matter of precaution when their filament sag reaches the point of possible danger, even though performance is still unimpaired and may continue indefinitely. DeVry declares "non-sag" filament construction eliminates the only factor that shortens the useful life of mercury vapor rectifiers, which in all other respects remain fully active and useable for extremely long periods of time.

Other characteristics of the new tube include the use of a third less filament current, resulting in substantially lower operating costs, and lower "ignition" or starting voltage.

A corresponding six-ampere mercury vapor bulb, for low-current arc rectifiers and sound rectifiers, is also available from this manufacturer.

News Notes on the • THEATRE EQUIPMENT MARKET •

• Special provisions for aisle lighting are provided in a new auditorium chair model developed by the Irwin Seating Company. A translucent, substantially unbreakable material shields a 30-watt lamp bulb, one of which may be used at every fourth aisle standard, or at as many standards as desired.

Centralized control for dimming these aisle lights as required is installed in the projection room. A wide variety of colors and designs match the aisle standards to any decorative scheme. Novel effects can be realized from time to time by installing bulbs of other colors.

• Imported Zeiss projection and process lenses are now made available in the United States by an official representative of the Zeiss Ikon Company, Eric W. Schumacher, 160 Fifth Avenue, New York. The largest lens at present available is $3\frac{15}{16}$ inches in diameter, $7\frac{7}{8}$ inches focus, with a speed of F:1.9.

• Microphones, stands and cables, loudspeakers, baffles and trumpets, record players and transformers are listed in the latest catalog just issued by The Lifetime Corporation, Toledo, O.

• S. Appel & Company of New York, makers of uniforms, have just issued a new catalog showing uniforms suited to female attendants.

• Carrier Corporation reports a net profit of $557,369 for the nine months ending September 30th, after deducting Federal income taxes and moving expenses involved in the transfer of its factory from Newark, N. J., to Syracuse, N. Y.

• An operating profit of $63,400 for the quarter ending September 30th is reported by Sonotone Corporation, hearing aid manufacturers, in contrast with a profit of $350 for the corresponding quarter of 1936.

• For the nine months ending September 30th Heywood-Wakefield Company, manufacturers of theatre seats, report a net profit of $414,565. In the corresponding period of 1936, the net profit was $401,212.

• J. E. Norman, formerly Detroit representative of Herman A. DeVry, Inc., has been placed in charge of the new DeVry branch in Los Angeles.

• Recent Operadio sound installations in the middle west include A. G. Carlisle's Hinton theatre at Hinton, Okla., W. F. Sonneman's Plaza at Bentonville, Ark., T. C. Killebrew's Rialto at Siloam Springs, Ark., and the Palace at Skiatook, Okla.

Carpet Scrubbing Process Permitting Immediate Drying

A METHOD OF scrubbing carpets which removes the water and cleaning fluid, permitting the fabric to dry promptly, has been developed by the Kelly Products Corporation of New York. A double tank is used, which connects with the scrubbing mechanism through a double hose. A thin hose from the upper tank carries water and cleaning fluid to the mechanism.

Water, fluid and dirt are sucked up in the process of scrubbing, and deposited in the tank, whence they can be drained later merely by opening a faucet. The scrubbing device resembles a slightly over-sized carpet sweeper. The two fit one above the other in a combination mounted on castors, easily rolled about as needed.

A single filling of the tank suffices to wash approximately 100 square yards of carpet. With the Kelly machine this is an hour's work for the average unskilled staff man. The Kelly cleaning machines are leased and maintained by their manufacturer on a yearly basis.

THEY MUST TELL

ALONG with the third cup of coffee every morning, or most every morning, we have a dash of Mr. Red Kann in Motion Picture Daily. It's a great way to start the day. One morning this week came interesting entertainment in an outgiving in which Mr. Kann did some commenting on the commenting done by Mr. Frank Nugent in the New York Times concerning a current cinema entitled "Conquest." It would seem fair enough now to do some commenting on Mr. Kann's commenting on Mr. Nugent's comment. It is of course a devastating exposition of the fact that editorial writers operate on the system of the South Sea islanders, who, said Mark Twain, "make their living by taking in each other's washing."

As we started to say, Mr. Kann said something about something that Mr. Nugent said about "Conquest." As we dunk the coffee küchen, it seems that what Mr. Kann finds is that Mr. Nugent seems to have examined and reviewed "Conquest" while looking through the parade of ciphers at the end of the seven-figure cost figure. Mr. Kann thinks that Mr. Nugent did not care so much for the picture. We disagree, on reading the same review. The obvious fact was that when that amiable young man sat down to look at the picture he kept seeing black spots before his eyes, which in refocusing dissolved into dollar marks. If it is true, as Mr. Kann seems to think, that Mr. Nugent considered costs instead of the pure intrinsic entertainment value, it just might be that we have before us a problem of relative intensities. Both the picture and the figures seem to have come from Hollywood. There is nothing to indicate that Mr. Nugent sent for either. They were both terrific. It is hard to say now which he admired the most.

PERSONALLY we do not care a whoop in the superheated hereafter what this picture, or any other, cost, but in this instance it is our opinion that the quoted figure is too high by $166,328.21, approximately.

The discussion is, however, what Mr. Kann thinks of what Mr. Nugent thinks, and our own notion of what we think of the both of them.

Mr. Kann makes a point that by comparison with the treatment of "When 'Virginia' opened at the Center Theatre," which is in our own front yard, being across the street under—and way under—the Garden of All Nations in what some call Radio City and others speak of as Rockefeller Center. " . . . it was reviewed," says Mr. Kann, "by Atkinson, Watts, Lockridge, and the other dramatic critics, for what it revealed, which, so it happened, proved to be not much. Some of them might have mentioned, in the passing, a word about the investment. Not one of them would have reared, nor did he, his review on such a foundation. It would have been as unorthodox an approach as that on which Nugent now finds himself entrapped."

Mr. Kann has something there. May we digress a moment to reflect on what a charming opportunity for some entertainment copy the dramatic critics did overlook. The sensationally dramatic fact, here set down for the first time, pertains to the artistically symbiotic nature of the "Virginia" presentation.

The playwrights on that job, driven to wit's end and over the jagged edges thereof, be-thought, if that's the word, themselves to make up for Mr. Rockefeller's why-did-we-build-it theatre a show consisting exactly of Mr. Rockefeller's contribution to Americana in his reconstructed city of Williamsburg down in Virginia. Within the arts of course this process would be described as one of symbiosis, whereas in the world of finance it would be entirely autophytic. Nothing is more pleasant, for one biologically inclined, than to regard an autophytic whole consisting of symbiotic parts.

NOW about those parts, be they symbiotic, saprophytic or parasitic—and they were, in part. The costs of "Virginia" would run back to when Mr. Samuel L. Rothafel came along with some big ideas for five theatres in Radio City and settled for two, or about one and a quarter too many. They would take in the rights, dramatic, on Williamsburg, ground-rent, upkeep, insurance, taxes and goodwill, there and here. It would make a story, and a better review, than we read on "Virginia." It might also have done the show some good, by explaining it.

Now back to Mr. Kann and Mr. Nugent—both members of the Olive & Cherry club of New York picture-lookers—it would seem that not only did Mr. Nugent not send to Hollywood for the figures that got in his hair, but that they were sent to him, along about the same time that all of the air, the air-mail and the wires were a-twitter with them. They came from where all of the Hollywood figures, facts and stories come from—the inevitable exudations of an exhibitionist art, served necessarily by exhibitionist people. They must tell all.

Increasingly the trade news of all industry is becoming public news. Wherever personalities enter in, report comes out. And nothing will stop it, while eyes look and ears listen.

THE box office hit of the screen in 1896 was "The Empire State Express," a famous crack train of the New York Central. So many copies were sold that Biograph's negative was worn out in the printing machine. Last week, Friday, Charles McLaughlin, engineer of the Empire State and also of "999," famed in song and story, died in Albany at age 88. Retiring in 1922, he had spent forty-seven years at the throttle, most above sixty miles an hour. He did not pass red lights.

WRITING in Photoplay Magazine, Mr. Cornelius Vanderbilt says that he went to interview Gandhi, who would reply to no questions, saying he knew nothing of America save what he had seen on the screen, but that the Indian sage desired to ask one question of his caller. It was: "To what class, sire, do you belong?"

Mr. Vanderbilt asked Gandhi to elucidate.

"Well, sire, are you a gangster, a gentleman or a cowboy?"

What leaves us in the air is that Mr. Vanderbilt did not report his answer.

Sex and Exhibition

A decision by Irwin Esmond, director of the motion picture division of the New York State department of education, denying a license to Jewel Productions, Inc. to show the film "False Shame" was upheld by Dr. Frank P. Graves, commissioner of education, who ruled the film "indecent," "immoral" and tending "to corrupt morals." In Kansas City the enterprising operator of the Empress theatre ballyhooed a double feature, "Gambling with Souls" and a film depicting "a real, authentic Caesarian operation." Part of the exploitation, duly photographed and emphasized, for the second half of the program was the employment of a staff of sixteen nurses and internes to "take care of persons who fainted at the showing."

Both events are reported on page 21.

Censorship Defi

The broadcasting of Hollywood gossip and tattle, at present the object of protests from film producers and of threats of censorship from radio officials, will not and cannot be stopped, at least as far as he is concerned, James Marion Fidler, one of the foremost in the army of screen gossipers, said this week. Mr. Fidler's remarks, reported in the San Francisco Chronicle by Herb Caen, radio editor, centered around his contention that he and his colleagues will be allowed to continue unfettered because of the amounts spent by commercial sponsors on such programs.

The commentator's views and news of protests from Hollywood are quoted and reported on page 29.

Strike Called Off

The federal labor department of Mexico saved the motion picture industry in that country from threatening labor trouble when it arranged a compromise of the grievances of the employees of 108 theatres in the four Pacific states. In addition employees of eight of the leading theatres in Guadalajara withdrew a strike threat when organized labor in the city refused to support them.

James Lockhart writes of these and other Mexican topics of interest on page 21.

A T & T Pipe Pictures

The American Telephone and Telegraph Company this week finally held a public demonstration, in Philadelphia, of the coaxial cable on which it has been experimenting for television broadcasting from New York to the Quaker City, transmitting Paramount newsreel scenes from Bell Laboratories on New York's west side, to the Bourse Building in Philadelphia.

Making full use of a cable which can accommodate 240 simultaneous telephone conversations, the films were reproduced on a screen seven by eight inches.

Significant is the Telephone company's adaptation of cables and wires to television transmission, literally "piping" the show from point of origin to the screen of exhibition. Radio Corporation of America and Philco Radio so far have confined their televising to air transmission, but the best opinion of engineers and of the Telephone Company itself is that when television arrives commercially its city-to-city and international transmission will be "piped" by cables, as city-to-city radio entertainment now is "piped" by telephone wires, going out over the air only at the city on the receiving end to the retail consumers.

Engineering opinion also holds that motion picture theatres will receive their television programs by wire. It is further significant that motion pictures were used this week by Bell for the first open demonstration of its new coaxial cable. A. T. & T., of course, is in the wire business, continuing therein with radio, and again, evidently, with television, leaving the staging of both radio and television shows to RCA and the other networks, but handling virtually all of the actual distance broadcasting over its telephone wires and coaxial cables.

Makeup Strike

Production at the Columbia studios in Hollywood was held up for one day when union craftsmen walked out in sympathy with makeup workers who had struck after complaining the company had failed to adhere to an agreement for the employment of two makeup men on each set. Settlement of the strike was announced after a midnight conference with union leaders. The National Labor Relations Board set November 19th for hearing of arguments in support of testimony given recently in Hollywood in support of the Screen Writers' Guild petition for a collective bargaining election.

The labor front is covered on page 30.

Outside Readers

The internal revenue bureau in Washington ruled Tuesday that outside readers employed by film producers to prepare synopses of literary material are not considered employees and therefore are not subject to the taxing provisions of the Social Security Act. The outside readers, it was explained, are not under contract and are paid upon the submission of the completed work at a fixed rate for each separate item.

Loew Contracts

Nicholas M. Schenck, president of Loew's, Inc., has begun preliminary negotiations for the extension of the company's employment contracts with Louis B. Mayer, production head; David Bernstein, treasurer and vice-president, and J. Robert Rubin, vice-president. Each executive has a five-year agreement which expires at the end of 1938. Options for the purchase of Loew stock at stipulated prices are included in the three agreements.

United Artists Deal

Purchase of United Artists Corporation by Samuel Goldwyn and Alexander Korda will be consummated "in a few days," Mr. Korda told Motion Picture Daily Wednesday.

May Be Significant

An Associated Press dispatch from Lynn, Mass., said Wednesday that the friendship of a CIO union for an A F of L union blocked plans of Fifi D'Orsay, motion picture actress, to visit Lynn's largest shoe factory. Peter J. Walsh, attorney for the United Shoe Workers Union, a CIO affiliate, notified the Gold Seal Shoe Company that a theatre where Miss D'Orsay was appearing was listed as "unfair" by the A F of L Musicians' Union and that any visit by the actress would bring about a sit-down strike.

Renovated Newsreel

A completely renovated Pathe News made its appearance this week, featuring a new group of commentators. The new reel also has a tieup with the fashion magazine, Vogue. Pathe dates back to 1910 when it was founded by Jacques A. Berst, American manager for Pathe Freres of Paris.

Highlights of Pathe's history and its plans for the future are detailed on page 27.

MGM Broadcast

The motion picture industry, represented by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, made its first major venture into the radio entertainment field last week with a one hour program over the National Broadcasting Company's red network. Jeannette MacDonald and Allan Jones were starred in the production that included a confusingly large number of actors, actresses and studio attaches.

A review of the program will be found on page 28.

RKO Reorganization

George Alger, special master, issued a preliminary report on the RKO reorganization plan this week, recommending that Rockefeller Center's $9,150,628 claim be reduced to $5,100,000. While this was taking place in New York, Leo Spitz, RKO president, took charge of production in Hollywood, pending the appointment of a successor to Samuel J. Briskin, who resigned last week.

Earnings

Substantial earnings were reported during the week by United Artists, Radio Corporation (RKO - NBC - RCA), Columbia Broadcasting and General Outdoor Advertising. Dictaphone and Westinghouse declared dividends, and Chase Bank's liquidations in Twentieth Century-Fox for one year were estimated at $3,600,000.

The week's financial news is reported on page 34.

Tom D. Cochrane

Tom D. Cochrane, dean of foreign managers in Tokyo where he represented Paramount for the last 15 years, died Tuesday at St. Luke's Hospital, New York City, after being under treatment for three weeks. He was about 65 years old and had been associated with the motion picture industry since 1909 when he joined Carl Laemmle as a producer.. He made Universal's first feature, "Hiawatha."

Deal on Quota

Now that the Films Bill has passed second reading in the House of Commons and has returned to committee, it is expected that the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association will ask the cooperation of British labor groups in pressing for a film commission, in return for supporting labor's demands for revision of the measure. One point, made clear if not settled, is that the Government opposes a quality test for pictures. Eustace Stanley, president of the Board of Trade, emphasized that fact at the second reading in the House.

Overseating

The perfect condition for Detroit and Columbus exhibitors, capacity audiences for all performances during a week, could be attained only if every resident of the two cities attended theatres three times a week. Detroit, with a potential 1,250,000 patrons, has a total motion picture theatre seating capacity of 181,810, while Columbus has 290,000 residents and 47 theatres with 40,500 seats. H. M. Richey, director of theatre activities for Co-Operative Theatres of Michigan, and George W. Trendle, president of the United Theatres of Detroit, in announcing the results of a recent survey in the Michigan city, warned that the tendency toward overbuilding of theatres by professional promoters is threatening public investments in theatre stocks.

"B" Pictures

B. P. Schulberg, Walter Wanger and Milton Bren, in charge of production for Hal Roach, are among the independent producers who differ with Samuel Goldwyn on the question of class "B" pictures, according to an article published in the Los Angeles Times. Mr. Goldwyn contends "B" films should be abolished, but the others, all essaying to make only "A" films, insist there is a need for the lower level product and that it will continue to be part of the entire output.

The question is discussed in an article on page 56.

Northwest Armistice

Adopting the same procedure as that taken by Philadelphia exhibitors, Allied Theatres of the Northwest, declared a one week armistice in its battle against Paramount for the reputed failure to deliver six pictures listed on the 1936-37 contracts. The exhibitors are to negotiate individually with Paramount and are to report back to their organization on the practicability of a permanent settlement.

For Book Week

A total of 134 feature films emanating from published books and novels, or having book-relation values, were selected this week by the National Board of Review's reviewing committees as offering possibilities of exploitation tieups for exhibitors with libraries, book stores and book counters, in connection with National Book Week, November 14th to 20th.

The list of films and descriptive material appears on page 58.

This Week In Pictures

Edward Kuykendall, president of the MPTOA, who is now on a tour of the country conferring with exhibitor leaders, is second from the left in the picture below taken at a masquerade party at the Denver Screen Club at which his costume won a prize. Other winners standing in front are Mrs. Joseph Dekker, J. J. Morgan, Mrs. Fred Zekman, Emmett Thurmon, Mrs. Frank Culp, Earl Collins and Mrs. Edward Loy.

Fred Wehrenberg, owner and operator of four St. Louis theatres, has been reelected president of the MPTO of St. Louis, Eastern Missouri and Southern Illinois.

THE Ice-Bear, insignia of Denmark's Nordisk Films Company, is making a bid for the world market with its production of J. A. Friis' historical novel, "Laila." Stills reproduced left and below illustrate the simple story which is laid in Lapland, beyond the Arctic Circle, and which tells with only meagre resort to the spoken word the romance of a Norwegian girl who has been brought up by the nomad Lapps without knowledge of her home land. The outdoor scenes, including both winter and summer sequences, were taken in the land of the midnight sun and the minor characters are played by residents of the Lapland village where the camera crews were on location. George Schneevoight prepared the script and directed the picture which will be released simultaneously in Norway, Denmark and Sweden early in 1938.

George Arliss, left, arrives in New York for the American premiere of his latest picture, "Dr. Syn," after spending more than two years in England where he appeared in several Gaumont British productions.

Also a transatlantic arrival is Roland Young, right, who has returned to New York from the Gaumont British studios, where he has been starring, to turn his attention to Broadway and a contract for an appearance on the legitimate stage.

TAX A STUMBLING BLOCK IN MOVE TO RAISE ADMISSIONS

Increase from 40 Cents to 45 Would Be Taken by Government, Larger Raises Considered Inadvisable

With the advent of the current motion picture season, a movement for higher admission prices swept across the country, affecting virtually all sections except the South, but in most areas the campaign has failed to reach the contemplated peak, according to an inquiry conducted by MOTION PICTURE HERALD through its representatives in strategic points throughout the United States.

The greatest deterrent to adoption of advanced scales, exhibitors report, has been the Federal government's levy of 10 per cent on all admissions of 41 cents and over. Theatremen, according to the survey, do not believe conditions warrant jumps from 40 to 50, 55 or 60 cents, and an increase to 45 cents, they point out, would be futile, as the added revenue would be taken by the government.

Except in the larger cities the price level, therefore, has remained at 40 cents for first-run houses although many exhibitors in effect have adopted increases by eliminating socalled "early bird" and bargain matinee rates and by abolishing lower prices for balcony seats.

Subsequent-Runs Profit

Neighborhood and subsequent-run houses have profited mostly by the rise in prices. In their cases the tax question is not a direct factor but their increases have been limited, too, due to the necessity of a substantial difference between their prices and those in first-run and downtown houses, in order to attract patronage.

In several instances, such as in Kansas City, increases were generally adopted but the expected improvement in general business conditions has not developed and at least 25 per cent of the houses have been forced to revert to their former levels.

Another indication that the movement for higher admissions is on the wane is contained in scattered reports of actual reductions of prices. Also, in several areas, five and ten cent admissions for part of the week are gaining favor.

Cotton and Theatre Prices

In the South, exhibitors point to the low price of cotton as the main reason for not having given increased prices any consideration. The scale has not been advanced in Tampa, Florida, despite recent imposition of a tax to help the city pay its share of Works Progress Administration projects.

The public has been receptive to higher prices, except in those cases where business has sagged and former scales have been readopted. In Washington, for instance, theatre patrons have shown no signs of even being opposed to the increases of five and ten cents despite the fact that Warner Brothers, leader in the movement, announced the raises by posting signs in the lobbies of theatres. The reasons for the increases, such as increased production costs and higher labor costs, were outlined in the company's placards.

Following are the summaries of the situation in different parts of the United States:

Albany Exhibitors Fear Business Recession

Although increases in admissions were under consideration by several of the smaller exhibitors in the Albany area, the recent actions of stock market prices have brought fear of a business recession and consequently have halted all plans for rises. However, two first-run houses and the one subsequent-run theatre have inaugurated higher prices. Warner Brothers' Strand raised its ticket prices from 25 to 30 cents for matinees and from 40 to 50 cents for evenings. Fabian's has made similar increases. The Grand, a Fabian subsequent-run house, went from 20 to 25 cents for matinees and from 30 to 35 cents for the evenings.

Prospects of any additional price increases were considered shattered by an editorial in the Albany Weekly Record criticizing circuit theatres for charging 50 cents in Albany first-run houses as against 40 cents in the nearby city of Troy.

Despite this factor, the new prices, where instituted, have met with no expression of public disfavor and increased business has been reported. There has been no thought given to reverting to the old level. It is generally agreed that other houses with the 40 cent scale would jump to 50 cents if it were not for the Federal tax on admissions of 41 cents and over.

Subsequent run theatres, in the downtown sector, did not believe there was enough spread in prices to warrant any increases. In other cities near Albany, such as Troy, Schenectady and Utica, the prevailing first run top price is 40 cents. In neighborhood houses, in the so-called poorer sections the top price is 20 cents while in other sections the highest price is 25 cents. Three first-run houses in Utica, Warner Brothers' Sterling and Avon and the Olympic, raised evening prices 5 cents, going from 35 to 40 cents.

One-Fourth of Raises Fail in Kansas City

More than 100 theatres have raised admission prices in the Kansas City area during the last six months but the failure of an expected general increase in business to develop has forced at least a fourth of the houses to revert to former prices and abandon thoughts of additional raises.

Most increases have been five cents, some have amounted to 10 cents but none has gone over that. The federal tax on admissions of 41 cents and over has kept the top throughout the territory at 40 cents. Exhibitors, generally, believe the top will not go over 40 cents until conditions warrant a jump to 55 or 60 cents.

Fox Midwest has made changes in virtually all of its theatres throughout the area, although in some cases advances consisted merely of eliminating bargain hours. The circuit has a number of 15 cent neighborhood theatres and in almost every instance the price was raised to 20 cents. These increases have been maintained more successfully and more widely than in A houses. A general decline in business

Decreased Box Office Receipts Seen by Washington Officials

A possible decrease in box-office receipts is seen by officials in Washington in the bureau of agricultural economics' prediction of a sharp recession in industrial production and trade, continuance of the downward price trend and a lowering of the national income.

How long the unfavorable situation will continue is difficult to estimate, the bureau stated, "but the appraisal of general conditions gives some support to the impression, based on the situation for individual industries, that it will run well into 1938."

Analysis of the forecast would indicate that exhibitors in the agricultural areas will be somewhat more affected than those in the industrial sections.

The report represented a complete reversal of the official attitude in Washington, which for some weeks has been characterized by frequent pronouncements that business was in a satisfactory position with a hopeful outlook for the future.

Highlights of the 1938 forecast were that industrial production will average lower than in 1937, with conditions during the second half of the year probably more favorable than those in the first six months; national income will be under the high expected for this year, now estimated at about $69,000,000,000, and the general tendency of wholesale prices will be downward until well into 1938, with lower prices for some raw materials, farm products and manufactured goods offsetting higher prices for some finished and semi-finished products.

"GOLDWYN FOLLIES" IS

by GUS McCARTHY
in Hollywood

THIS PICTURE is intended to climax Samuel Goldwyn's 1937 production program but not his career. Mr. Goldwyn is never satisfied with himself. Thus he is always, in one way or another, a trail blazer. Before either of them had much of an idea as to what it was all about, he and Jesse Lasky produced one of the first American feature length pictures, "The Squaw Man." He was instrumental in effecting the Famous Players-Lasky merger. With the Selwyns he formed Goldwyn Pictures Corporation, forebear of today's MGM. He is credited with the first $1,000,000 musical. Now comes the $2,000,000 musical.

Again blazing the trail, setting himself in competition with himself, it is his intention that with "The Goldwyn Follies" he shall outdo Goldwyn. One must be a courageous soul indeed to be convinced that he can top such pictures as "The Squaw Man," the first "Stella Dallas," "Bulldog Drummond," "Arrowsmith," "Street Scene," "The Masquerader," "Whoopee," "These Three," "Dodsworth," the new "Stella Dallas," "Dead End," "The Hurricane" and the forthcoming "Adventures of Marco Polo." Yet Mr. Goldwyn is convinced that with the "Follies" he will outdo himself.

The budget already has exceeded the $2,000,000 figure. The picture has a "behind the scenes of Hollywood" setting. A producer hires a "Miss Humanity," supposedly infallible in her judgment of what the public will appreciate in pictures. He falls in love with her. She falls in love with a hamburger stand attendant who can sing, maneuvers him into the leading role in the picture and the producer out of her affections.

The production will be in color and Gregg Toland is the photographer.

To produce this not uncommon story in such a way that every dollar spent would be represented in entertainment value rather than mere display (there will be plenty of optic and aural spectacle), Mr. Goldwyn looted the worlds of screen, radio, vaudeville, the stage, opera and ballet. From the screen he drew Adolphe Menjou, seen in "A Star is Born" and "Stage Door," and his own rising star Andrea Leeds, impressive in "Stage Door." He also took Jerome Cowan, now in "The Hurricane," and the madcap Ritz Brothers. He drew Helen Jepson and Charles Kullman from the opera. Kenny Baker came to him via Jack Benny's "Jello" program and the courtesy of Mervyn LeRoy. From the world of dance he beckoned exotic Vera Zorina, described as one of the greatest contemporary dancers, and George Balanchine and his American ballet. Radio yielded Edgar Bergen and Charlie McCarthy, Phil Baker and Ella Logan, whose screen career was born of radio success.

The late George Gershwin contributed five songs and part of the score. Vernon Duke completed the score and added two numbers, as well as the music for two ballets. Ira Gershwin wrote all the lyrics. Selections from "La Traviata" and some original numbers for the Ritz Brothers complement the score. Ben Hecht wrote the screenplay, and George Marshall, maker of "Love Under Fire," "Nancy Steele Is Missing," "Message to Garcia" and several Will Rogers pictures, chosen as director. The settings were designed by Richard Day, Academy Award winner.

The production is scheduled for release during or near the holiday season, as Mr. Goldwyn is a strong believer in hitting while the iron is hot, and has such irons as "The Hurricane" and "The Adventures of Marco Polo" at white heat, with "Stella Dallas" and "Dead End" just beginning to cool off.

RAISES MADE BY LOW PRICE HOUSES

greeted the increases in A houses with the result increases actually are in effect in only approximately 50 per cent of the group's units.

At the beginning of the current season, indices — agricultural, mining, oil, general business, etc. — affecting the area pointed to better business but it did not develop. Wheat money did not get into circulation, due partly to the fact farmers owed it.

At Wichita, Kansas, the circuit discontinued its 25 cent early bird matinees at the Miller and Palace in September but the sag in business was immediate and definite and the bargain hours were restored. The Fox houses were the only ones in Wichita to adopt advances.

In Kansas City, the Fox Tower, first run house, went from 25 and 40 cents to 25, 35 and 40 cents, eliminating the 25 cents night, and Sunday and holiday matinee prices. However, other theatres failed to follow suit and after four weeks, the theatre reverted to its former prices.

At other houses Fox Midwest increases were successful. An example of this is the Plaza, Kansas City, Missouri, a subsequent run, which terminated double bills and, at the same time, advanced prices from 25 to 35 cents. The Linwood and Rockhill, also in Kansas City, have successfully maintained increases from 15 to 20 cents.

The number of seats offered in first-run houses at night for 25 cents has blocked independent exhibitors from boosting prices, especially in cases where admission is 20 or 25 cents.

Glen W. Dickinson, with 25 theatres in Kansas, Missouri and Iowa, increased prices in 15 "A" houses, mostly from 25 to 30 or 35 cents. Patrons complained a bit, Mr. Dickinson reported but, he added, the new levels were going to be maintained. He said prices will be raised in locations where competitive houses will cooperate but at the Dickinson, Olathe, Kansas, admissions were advanced from 20 to 25 cents despite the refusal of the competition to raise.

Commonwealth Theatres, raised prices in five units and has kept the new levels although in three instances the changes have not meant increased business. The increases were from 25 to 35 cents in four houses and 5 cents in the other. Originally, C. A. Schultz, executive head, planned gradual increases until a 15 per cent over-all increase was effected, but business recession has forced abandonment of the plan.

Increases by independents in Kansas City have not been substantial, either in number or extent. Jay Means early in the summer went from 20 to 25 cents on one or two changes a week at the Oak Park. C. H. Potter increased from 15 to 20 cents at the Baltis on the Sunday change, and added 5 cents to the admission at the Baltis, Murray and Admiral for those women who want premiums. J. F. Rigney raised from 20 to 25 cents on weekend changes at the Westport, and eliminated most of his giveaways.

Independence, Kansas, theatres raised for weekend changes. William Wagner's Beldorf and Dickinson's Booth get 35 cents instead of 25 cents, and E. Van Hyning's Best and R. M. Montgomery's Mainstreet get 25 cents instead of 15 cents.

In Topeka, Kansas, on September 3rd, all theatres except Simon Galitzki's Princess eliminated children's five cent admissions. J. E. Pennington's Crystal and A. C. McKinney's Best went from 15 to 20 cents on weekend pictures. All but the Princess started charging night prices for Sunday and holiday matinees.

Sam Sosna of the Sosna, Manhattan, Kansas, raised prices indirectly with good results. Until recently he had been selling scrip books which contained 35-cent tickets for 25 cents per ticket. He raised the price of scrip to 30 cents, and received complaints, but, the sale of 35 cent admissions at the box office increased.

C. P. Shaner, Dixie, Odessa, Missouri, has raised admission on his family night from 10 to 15 cents. He regularly charges 25 cents and has done so all through the depression.

At the beginning of the season, Dubinsky Brothers boosted admissions at the first run Missouri in St. Joseph from 25 to 35 cents and effected a five cent raise at the Electric, also in St. Joseph.

W. E. Fulton has made no increases in his eight houses except in Arkansas City, Kansas, where his Howard went from 15 to 20 cents. Other theatres in Arkansas City also increased prices, the Fox Burford from 25 to 35 cents on weekend changes and the Fox Starr from ten to 20 cents.

Seattle Hikes Limited To Two Neighborhoods

A check of Seattle and neighboring territory houses failed to disclose any operations where rates have been advanced, with the exception of two widely separate neighborhood houses that advanced charges from 15 to 20 cents several months ago.

Increased wages for all usherettes, cashiers and doormen in the Seattle sector this week will not bring about any advance in prices, several managers reported.

John Danz, who operates the Palomar theatre, abandoned a 15 cent matinee rate to charge 25 cents but after one week a decrease in gross revenue prompted him to return to the old prices.

Neighborhood houses, operating only at night, charge 20 and 25 cents, depending upon location and type of run, and feel this is as high as they can go because of the 40 cent top price in first run houses.

SPECIAL STUDENT PRICE OF 25 CENTS

The Fox theatre circuit in Wisconsin last week established a special students' price of 25 cents for the Fond du Lac, Retlaw or Garrick theatres in Fond du Lac, Wisconsin. In order to receive this special price, students are required to have a passport-size photo of themselves taken, which when brought to any of the mentioned theatres is affixed to a card with the pupil's signature and age.

The card is then required to be taken to the student's school officer for signature, which is a verification of the individual's age. Upon the completion of these instructions, the student is entitled to a 25 cent student admission whenever the card is presented at the box office of any of the three houses, except Sundays and holidays.

A somewhat similar arrangement has been worked out in Stevens Point, Wis., where students of the Central States Teachers college signed an agreement with the management of the Fox and Lyric theatres providing for a special admission of 25 cents at the latter house and 35 cents at the former.

Indianapolis Prices Stand for Five Years

With the exception of the Lyric advancing its 40 cent time from 6 to 5 P.M., Indianapolis houses have made virtually no changes in admissions for the last five years. It is considered doubtful that any increases will be made within the near future. Evening prices at first run houses are at the maximum tax avoidance level of 40 cents and the neighborhoods with first subsequent runs have a 25 cent top, others have 20 cents, a few, 15 cents and one or two, ten cents.

"Neighborhood houses won't raise admissions unless the first runs do," said Roy R. Bair, head of the Bair circuit of five neighborhood houses.

Tampa Unaffected By Price Movement

Patrons of Tampa, Florida, theatres still enjoy the same prices that were established when the government first levied its 10 per cent tax on tickets over 40 cents. At that time, two houses, the Tampa and the Victory, each had a top of 50 cents, but, to get under the tax, prices were dropped to 40 cents.

This level has been maintained in spite of an increase in the city license fee and starting October 1st of this year, a special tax to assist in raising funds for the city's share of Works Progress Administration projects.

Policy Changes Bring New Admission Scales

The only price increases put into effect at Syracuse are at the RKO-Schine controlled Paramount and Eckel theatres, which were converted into first-run and second week holdover houses, respectively. Both now have an evening top of 40 cents and 25 cent matinees.

Subsequent run houses, headed by the Kallet owned Regent, charge an average of 25 cents for night admissions.

Increases Widespread In Washington Area

Increases in Warner Brothers houses in Washington and nearby communities served as the signal for a general and widespread rearranging of admission costs.

The major change in first run houses was the setting of one price throughout the houses at all times. The Earle abolished its 40 cent balcony at night, making the house 66 cents for any seat.

Important to the stage-screen houses was abolition of the 25 cents opening-to-one-o'clock price instituting a 35 cent price to 5:30.

All-screen houses, RKO-Keith's and Loew's Palace, remained at 55 cents at night and 35 cents until 5:30. RKO-Keith's charges 25 cents for children, but the Palace gets 35 cents. The B all-screen houses, the Metropolitan and Loew's Columbia, get 25 cents until 5:30 and then 40 cents. The Metropolitan formerly sold its balcony seats for 25 cents at night.

In the subsequent run division the Tivoli advanced from 35 to 40 cents; the Central from 20 to 30 cents; and the others, Ambassador, Apollo, Avalon, Avenue Grand, Colony, York, Savoy and Home advanced night adult prices 5 cents. Louis Bernheimer's raised from 25 to 30 cents as did Sidney B. Lust's Hippodrome. E. Lawrence Phillip's Stanton went from 20 to 25 cents; Charles H. Olive's Princess, Ashley Abendschein's Ashley and Isaac Notes' Roosevelt and Strand increased from 25 to 30 cents, and Louise Miller's and Abraham M. Tolkins' Little, from 35 to 40 cents.

Theatres in Maryland communities near Washington, affiliated with either the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of the District of Columbia or the Allied Theatre Owners of the District of Columia, also followed, in part, the Warner Brothers' lead. The Seco, Silver Spring, and the Cameo, Mount Ranier and Arcade, Hyattsville, advanced from 25 to 30 cents. The Maryland, Warner house at Hagerstown went from 30 to 35 cents.

The public took the Washington increases without any comment, the general belief being that patrons were not even aware of the changes.

Survey Underway In Minneapolis

Although an increase for all Minnesota Amusement houses is being contemplated, John J. Friedl, operating head, plans to make a study of individual situations before making any boosts.

Independent exhibitors have indicated they will follow the lead of the circuit immediately any increase is put into effect.

Atlanta Theatremen Plan No Changes

The low price of cotton, which has resulted in curtailed operation of textile mills, has kept exhibitors in the Atlanta area from considering any higher prices. Downtown first run houses in Atlanta get 35 cents for matinees and 40 cents for evenings. Suburban subsequent run houses average 20 cents.

First-Runs in Spokane Raise Prices 5 Cents

In the Spokane, Washington, territory, the latest move toward higher admissions was taken about two months ago when representatives of the Peoples Theatres, Evergreen State Amusement Corporation and Howard Amusement Company, agreed on a simultaneous raise at three theatres.

Evergreen's Orpheum, first run, raised five cents to 25 and 35 cents, plus two cents state tax, Howard's Granada raised five cents to 20 and 30 cents, plus tax, and People's Post Street raised ten cents to 25 and 35 cents plus tax.

At the same time the raises were put into effect, Post Street inaugurated vaudeville with two first run pictures.

Evergreen's State and Fox, leading theatres in Spokane, are both charging 30 cents in afternoons and 40 cents in the evenings and are not expected to attempt any increases because of the federal tax.

Chicago Loop Houses Make No Changes

During the past year admissions in virtually every neighborhood theatre in the Chicago territory have taken a five cent jump. The public has offered no concerted objection to the increases which were attributed to the advent of double features.

In the Loop the prices have remained stationary for several years except in cases where the policy of the house has been changed.

The larger neighborhood theatres get 65 cents as top for first showings outside the loop. In this classification are such houses at the Marbro, Uptown and Tivoli.

It is the general sentiment to keep prices at the present level, although some of the smaller theatres are starting ten cent nights about twice a week, as a competitive measure. So far this plan has been used only in the poorer districts and has not been widespread.

The present price scale for Chicago theatres, tax included, is as follows:

| WEEK OF RELEASE | ADMISSION |
|---|---|
| A | 55–65 cents |
| B | 40–55 cents |
| C | 30–40 cents |
| First Week of Release | 25–30 cents |
| Second Week of Release | 20–25 cents |
| Third Week of Release | 15–20 cents |

Preceding "A" is the Loop opening period which gives clearance over "A" for three weeks. Top price for this period is 75 cents.

Four Milwaukee Houses Adopt New Scales

Four Milwaukee downtown first run houses have lifted their admission prices in the past six months. These include Fox's Palace, Wisconsin and Strand, which have raised from a 50 to a 60 cent top. E. J. Weisfeldt's Riverside, formerly operating on a 20, 25 and 30 cent scale has discontinued the lower bracket, producing, in effect, a raise.

No increases have been made by circuit neighborhood houses, the majority of which have a 35 cent top. Several independent neighborhood theatres, however, have gone from a 20 to a 25 cent top. There has been talk of a general price increase among neighborhood houses and a revised clearance and zoning schedule contingent upon admission prices but the matter is still being held in abeyance.

Independent neighborhood houses contend the "early bird" admission prices of various circuit houses between 5:30 and 6 P.M. are a bar to price increases for their theatres.

There has been a return in several spots to a ten cent admission night and these houses report good business.

Oklahoma City Houses Drop from 55 to 40 Cents

In line with the action taken by the Criterion a few months ago, the Midwest Theatre, Oklahoma City, has lifted its admission price at night from 55 to 40 cents. Both houses are owned by Standard Theatres.

First-runs in Oklahoma City are now getting 40 cents at night in three spots, 35 cents in one de luxe suburban and 25 cents in a downtown double feature house.

New Orleans Theatres Plan No Advances

Neither the downtown nor the neighborhood houses in New Orleans contemplate any increases in admission prices. The top price in the downtown sector is 40 cents while neighborhoods get 15 and 21 cents. However, some neighborhoods run on a five cent admission for part of the week. The Strand offers two features, a newsreel and two short subjects for 5 cents during the daylight hours and 10 cents after 6 P.M.

Increases Widespread In Wilmington

Admission prices in virtually all the 12 theatres in Wilmington, Delaware, have been increased from five to ten cents. Loew's Parkway and the Aldine, Stanley-Warner house, jumped from 40 to 50 cents top for the evening performances. The Rialto, an independent first run, adopted a five-cent advance. Other houses reporting increases were the Arcadia, Queen and Park.

Admissions on Coast Reported at Peak

There are no indications of any increases in admissions on the coast, according to Charles P. Skouras, operating head of Fox West Coast. "We increased prices about a year and a half ago and they are the highest in the country," Mr. Skouras said.

Weekend, Holiday Prices Raised in Cleveland

Increases in Cleveland admissions have been confined to higher scales in the downtown first run situations on Saturday nights, Sundays and holidays. During the week the former level of 30, 35 and 42 cents is maintained but on weekends and holidays the scale goes to a 55

UA PREDICTS LONG AWAITED ADVANCES

"The long anticipated advance in motion picture theatre admission prices throughout the country will be inaugurated with the nationwide, first-run engagements of Samuel Goldwyn's 'The Adventures of Marco Polo'," it was stated this week in a United Artists publicity release.

Monroe Greenthal, advertising and publicity head, elaborated upon the publicity release by explaining that the film will be released Christmas week and that already it has been booked by 73 houses that are planning to increase prices. After "Marco Polo," Mr. Greenthal continued, the exhibitors probably will book another strong picture and thus the increased prices will become permanent.

"George J. Schaefer, vice-president and general manager of United Artists, arranged for the release of the production during the Christmas week as a general impetus to the industry as a whole," the publicity release said, "and in the belief that the picture-going public is ready and willing to support films of Class-A quality."

License Denied For 'False Shame'

Dr. Frank P. Graves, commissioner of education in New York State, recently upheld the action of Irwin Esmond, director of the motion picture division, by dismissing the appeal of Jewell Productions, Inc., and denying the application for a license to show the picture, "False Shame."

Dr. Graves ruled the film, which has venereal disease as its theme, is "indecent," "immoral" and "will tend to corrupt morals." In his decision, the commissioner mentioned that some months ago he gave favorable consideration to another picture based on the venereal disease theme, "Damaged Lives." However, he continued, that picture treated the matter with "decorum and restraint," while in "False Shame" the theme "cannot be utilized as an excuse to incorporate into a picture for portrayal to audiences in this state the entire gamut of prostitution, forcible seduction, solicitation, lustful actions and indecent dancing."

"False Shame," Dr. Graves held, portrayed "gruesome and horrible pictures of persons in the last stages of syphilitis paresis, gonorrheal infections and otherwise."

Henry Pearlman, counsel for Jewel Produtcions, gave no indications as to whether an appeal will be taken to the courts.

An appeal is now pending in the appellate division of the state supreme court on the film "Ecstasy" and when this is handed down it is expected to serve as a guide to the motion picture industry as to whether the courts will overrule the department of education.

Labor Situation Eased in Mexico

by JAMES LOCKHART
in Mexico City

Threatening labor trouble for the motion picture industry in western Mexico failed to materialize when employees of 108 cinemas in the four Pacific states called off their strike movement after the federal labor department arranged a compromise of their grievances.

Another producing and distributing company, an all Mexican enterprise, has been formed with Fernando de Fuentes, former Paramount executive in Mexico City, as president.

Excessive liquor drinking and the detailing of crime and vice must be eliminated from all pictures, including those produced in Mexico, the national committee for campaigns against alcoholism, drug using and other vices, has told the government's press and publicity department, which has charge of censoring films.

Production costs for Mexican pictures are now at a minimum of about $40,000, whereas, three years ago, $15,000 was considered the high cost mark.

Hailed as the most pretentious film made in Mexico by Mexicans, "The Conquest of Mexico" is being prepared for production in the near future by Gabriel Soria, youthful director. The cost of the production is expected to be about $280,000.

How the Fame of the Screen Is Made

YO HE HO! and sixteen nurses, and internes—on a theatre policy. This is the Empress Theatre, a first-run house in downtown Kansas City, Missouri, parading a first-aid staff, assembled, so the ballyhoo report says, to care for persons who fainted at the showing of "a real authentic Caesarian operation" as the second feature on a double bill with "Gambling with Souls."

The Empress was formerly a burlesque theatre. It was reopened this autumn as a "first run," but with a "sex picture" policy.

The Kansas City correspondent says the theatre was equipped with hospital beds and that on various occasions fainting persons were restored with treatment of spirits of ammonia. At the extreme right of the line-up is Sam Silverman, manager, who did not faint. The picture is presented on this page for the record and as news, news of what may be expected to be the low for 1937 in the creation of goodwill, esteem and decent status for the art of the motion picture and the business of exhibition.—THE EDITOR.

National Decency Legion Classifies Nine Pictures

Of nine new pictures reviewed and classified by the National Legion of Decency in its listing for the current week four were approved for general patronage, three were found unobjectionable for adults and two were classed as objectionable in part. The pictures and their classification follow.

Class A-1, Unobjectionable for General Patronage: "Adventure's End," "The Adventurous Blonde," "The Barrier," "West of Shanghai." Class A-2, Unobjectionable for Adults: "Conquest," "Murder in Greenwich Village," "Some Blondes Are Dangerous." Class B, Objectionable in Part: "The Lower Depths," "Merry-Go-Round."

Tom D. Cochrane Dies; Far East Sales Executive

Tom D. Cochrane, active in the distribution of motion pictures in the Far East and for the last 15 years Paramount's general manager in the Orient, died at St. Luke's Hospital, New York City, Tuesday morning after a three weeks' illness.

Mr. Cochrane left Paramount's headquarters in Tokyo because of ill health and arrived in New York three weeks ago. He had been under observation at the hospital and was believed to be recovering his health until Sunday when he suffered a stroke of paralysis and lapsed into unconscious, from which he did not recover.

He was born in Wheeling, West Virginia, 68 years ago and was one of six sons of Robert Henry and Martha Dakin Cochrane. Of the six brothers, five became associated with the motion picture industry. R. H. Cochrane is president of Universal; P. D. Cochrane is secretary of the same company; Whitt K. Cochrane, formerly identified with Universal, is now head of the Whitt K. Cochrane Advertising Agency of Chicago; George Cochrane is Universal's eastern test director, and Negley Cochran is an official of United Press.

Tom Cochrane was educated at public school in Wheeling Island, and later at Lindsey Institute. While still of school age, his family moved to Toledo, Ohio, and he attended school there.

He first entered the motion picture industry when Carl Laemmle was building up the organization which became known as Universal Film Manufacturing Company, and later as Universal Pictures Corporation. In 1909, he produced Universal's first feature, "Hiawatha."

When Universal undertook a world expansion move in 1911, Mr. Cochrane was assigned to establish the organization in the Orient. He set up his headquarters in Tokyo, and laid out offices in Shanghai, Hong Kong, in the Philippines, the Federated Malay States and India.

His wife, the former Miss Mae Lasky, accompanied him in the Orient and represented several American newspapers in Japan. She died in Tokyo in 1924 and in 1933 Mr. Cochrane married Dora Pipe, sister of the general sales manager of Paramount.

Mr. Cochrane joined Paramount in June, 1922 and was assigned to the Orient. During the earthquake of September, 1923, Mr. Cochrane was severely injured by the collapse of the building in which he was at the time. Despite his injuries he made his way more than 40 miles to Tokyo to aid other injured Paramount employees. He also succeeded in purchasing the only film negative of the destruction of Tokyo, which he shipped to America.

His activities in Tokyo included serving as president of the American Chamber of Commerce there for several years.

Surviving are his widow and two children who are in Tokyo; his five brothers, and one sister, Mrs. George L. Chapman, of Toledo.

Funeral services were held at the Columbus Circle Chapel, 43 West 60th Street, New York City, Thursday afternoon.

Amusement Stocks' Market Value Off

The market value of amusement stocks traded in on the floor of the New York Stock Exchange as of November 1st, totaled $379,183,696. This compares with a valuation of $437,783,318 as of October 1st. Average prices were placed at $21.16 as against $24.43 for the previous month.

cent top at Loew's State and Stillman and Warner Brothers Hippodrome.

The RKO Palace, playing a vaudeville-film policy has raised its top Saturday night, Sunday and holiday scale from 60 to 75 cents.

Warner Brothers has advanced prices in only two other locations in Ohio, the Strand, Akron, and the Ohio, Sidney. Five cent increases for both matinees and evenings were put into effect.

In Kent and Ravenna, B. C. Steele increased his prices from 10, 20 and 30 cents to a straight 35 cent admission for adults and 10 cents for children.

About six weeks ago, virtually all theatres in Toledo jumped their prices from 20 to 25 cents.

The federal tax is considered a potent factor in raising admissions. Those houses charging 42 cents do not pay a federal tax as the admission includes a three per cent state tax.

Subsequent run houses in Cleveland insist they would like to raise prices but are unable to do so because of the low scales in first run houses.

The Bexley Theatre, located in Bexley, a fashionable suburb of Columbus, Ohio, has reduced admission prices from 15 to ten cents for matinees and from 30 to 25 cents for evenings.

Newspaper Campaign Set for "Ebb Tide"

Paramount Pictures will undertake a nationwide newspaper and magazine campaign for the production, "Ebb Tide." Advertisements will appear in 35 key city newspapers with a combined per copy circulation of 11,168,858.

The campaign will open with the appearance of a full-page, four-color ad on the back cover of the American Weekly, on Sunday. A similar full-page back cover ad will appear in the November 21st issue of This Week.

Cut in Claim of Rockefeller Center On RKO Proposed

A reduction to $5,100,000 of Rockefeller Center's $9,150,628 claim against RKO is recommended by George W. Alger, special master, in a preliminary report on the RKO reorganization plan. Mr. Alger issued the report in New York last weekend to give attorneys of record in the reorganization an opportunity to study the contents in preparation for a hearing on Monday. Rockefeller officials said they would not contest the reduction.

Meanwhile, Leo Spitz, RKO president, has taken charge of production in Hollywood, pending the appointment of a successor to S. J. Briskin, resigned. It is not expected the new appointee will be named for some time.

On the basis of Mr. Alger's preliminary report, attorneys are expected to be prepared to argue for or against the indicated recommendations which Mr. Alger will make in his final report to William Bondy, federal judge, after the hearing. The plan also is subject to further hearings and changes before Mr. Bondy.

If treated as an unsecured claim under the provisions of the reorganization plan, Rockefeller Center would receive 38,250 shares of the new RKO preferred stock and 76,500 shares of new common stock, in place of the 500,000 shares of new common, which the plan originally proposed to issue to Rockefeller Center in settlement of the claim.

The special master's recommendation, it was reported, is based upon the expectancy that RKO common stock will have a market value of from $10 to $12 a share at the time the transaction is completed.

The tentative report approves the reorganization plan in its basic principles in practically all other respects. Drastic reductions in claims against the company are proposed, however, with indications that the allowable claims against the company, now amounting to slightly in excess of $21,000,000, may be scaled down to approximately $14,000,000.

The report, on the whole, is regarded as highly favorable to reorganization factors and is regarded in the main as auguring early completion of the reorganization on a basis favorable to the new company. While approving the plan's provisions for the treatment of the secured and unsecured creditors, as well as the holders of debentures and common stock, the preliminary report is said to recommend that no dividend be paid on the common stock until debentures are fully taken care of, presumably through retirement or conversion into common.

The report is understood to favor the proposed new capitalization set up in the plan, consisting of an authorized $18,000,000 of sinking fund convertible debentures, $11,000,000 of cumulative convertible preferred and 4,000,000 shares of common.

Warners to Give LeRoy New Contract

Warner Brothers again will sign Mervyn LeRoy, executive producer, to a long term contract, Jack L. Warner intimated when he stopped at Chicago enroute to the Coast.

Mr. Warner arrived in Hollywood from New York Sunday. During the six weeks he was away from the Coast he visited London, Paris and Budapest and signed two English actors.

TRUCE IN NORTHWEST "BOYCOTT;" NEW LAW OF MONOPOLIES ASKED

Allied Unit Declares One-Week Armistice Pending Vote on Settlement of "Buyers' Strike" Against Paramount

Following in the foosteps of Philadelphia exhibitors, Allied Theatres of the Northwest and Allied in New England declared an armistice in its "buyers' strike" against Paramount and prepared this week to vote on whether the four months' old dispute over delivery of six pictures should be declared settled permanently.

W. A. Steffes, Allied president, in Minneapolis, outlined the proposed settlement at an emergency meeting of 75 exhibitors in Minneapolis last Friday. He also informed the theatremen they had scored a "sweeping victory in our campaign for better ethics and trade practices in the industry."

Paramount "leaned over backwards" in an attempt to settle the controversy, Mr. Steffes said, reporting on his conversation with Charles M. Reagan, Paramount western division manager. The terms of the settlement parallel those accepted by the United Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Pennsylvania. Exhibitors are to negotiate individually with Paramount on new contracts.

The Newsreel Terms

Mr. Steffes hailed the newsreel phase of the proposed agreement as one of the highlights. Exhibitors will not be required to play back numbers of the newsreel, but where a contract for the 1937-38 product is not made, extension of the 1936-37 pact will be made to cover the period during which the "strike" was in effect.

As in Philadelphia, the one week armistice was declared to give exhibitors an opportunity to determine the practicability of the settlement terms. They are to report back to the organization this Friday and then a vote will be taken on the question of permanent settlement.

Delay Asked in Wisconsin

Wisconsin exhibitors, however, are being advised by the ITPA not to accept the terms of settlement, but to withhold purchase of the 1937-38 product until granted the privilege of playing "Souls at Sea" and "High, Wide and Handsome" according to the terms of the B classification group in the 1936-37 contracts; until Paramount agrees to forget about unplayed newsreels and shorts resulting from the strike and not to attach C.O.D.'s to features for accumulated back charges and to place not more than four pictures in the top group on the 1937-38 list.

The ITPA also is insisting that Wisconsin exhibitors be permitted to play out unplayed 1936-37 product if and when they desire to do so.

In accord with the action of Allied branches elsewhere in the country, the Independent Exhibitors, Inc., in Boston has thrown a damper on Paramount hostilities and has advised members to make the "best deals they can" with the distributor. Terms of the settlement in Philadelphia have been distributed among members, and Arthur K. Howard, business manager, has announced the intention of broadcasting to the local independents details of Paramount sales entered upon in New England.

Other Activities

Other trade practice activities this week included announcement from Allied Theatres of Illinois that it still is investigating the possibility of filing a suit against Balaban & Katz, charging them with monopoly, and the decision by defendants in the government's anti-trust suit in Dallas to apply for a writ of supersedeas to defer the application of Judge Atwell's decree against them until their appeal has been ruled upon by the United States supreme court.

Aaron Saperstein, president of Allied of Illinois, said a decision on the action to be taken will be made within a week or two.

John Erhard, assistant United States attorney general, revealed he will oppose the defendants' motion for a writ in the Dallas case.

"It may take a year or more to get this case through the supreme court," Mr. Erhard said, "and we certainly do not want to hold up the victory we won in this case by having the judgment set aside and left inoperative until the higher court acts."

The defendants have until December 13th to file their appeal.

KUYKENDALL AGREES TO JOINT SESSION

Cummings Says New Act Is Needed to Guide Business and the Government in Trust Law Violations

by FRANCIS L. BURT
in Washington

Enactment of an entirely new anti-monopoly act, to serve as a guide to business as well as to the Government in the matter of trust law violations and to take into consideration the differing characteristics of various types of industries, such as those of motion picture production as contrasted to steel manufacture, is seen by Attorney General Homer B. Cummings as essential to the clearing up of the confusion now prevailing as a result of the uncertainties of the present laws.

To accomplish this, Mr. Cummings declared last week, a thorough investigation of all phases of the subject should be undertaken before any legislation is attempted, a procedure which admittedly would require several months and preclude any possibility of passage of a new measure at the special session of Congress, as suggested by President Roosevelt.

"I do not think the problems involved can be solved without such a study," the Attorney General said. "I do not think there is a speedy solution of the matter. It is going to require a great amount of research by disinterested parties.

"We are all concerned with breaking up monopolies. Monopolies and government cannot get along side by side. But how to eradicate monopolies without doing harm to legitimate enterprise is a matter of foremost consideration.

"We cannot tolerate monopolies on a large scale that result in enormous concentration of power. On the other hand, we must resolve these conclusions into law so that those who want to abide by the law will know what the law is. There is no panacea that can be offered. It is a large problem that cannot be solved quickly."

Because of the belief that an exhaustive study is necessary, the Department of Justice, it was disclosed, has prepared no draft of proposed legislation but plans to dump the whole matter into the lap of the Congressional committees for such treatment as they may deem proper.

At the same time, Congress was warned that it should not attempt to deal with the matter by the enactment of piecemeal legislation, which would keep business in a state of uncertainty over a long period and involve dangers of overlapping laws, but should cover the entire subject in a single bill.

PATHE NEWS CELEBRATES 27th YEAR WITH EXPANDED STAFF, NEW DRESS

New Titles Designed, Tieup Arranged with "Vogue", Headquarters Remodeled; Started in 1910 by Jacques A. Berst

Pathe News, founded in 1910—then Pathe Weekly—as the first newsreel in United States and identified down through the years by its familiar crowing rooster, underwent a complete renovation this week.

Under the direction of Frederic Ullman, Jr., vice-president in charge of operations, a new staff of commentators was engaged to handle descriptions of the various news events;

New titles were designed;

A tieup with the fashion magazine, Vogue, was arranged, and Pathe's headquarters in 45th Street, New York, are being completely remodeled.

Pathe's staff of commentators consist of the following:

Clem McCarthy, who will handle the description of sports events;

Andre Baruch, radio commentator, the "voice" behind general new stories;

Arlene Francis, who is to appear in George Abbott's next play, "All That Glitters," will be the "voice of fashion";

Sidney Walton, former commentator and dramatic director of Station WBAL, Baltimore, will describe foreign and similar news events, and David Ross, radio commentator, will handle the narratives on human interest stories.

As an aid to the transformation of new ideas to the screen, Mr. Ullman acquired new cameras, new lenses, new sound equipment and virtually new working quarters.

Details of the contents of the first new issue are on page 87.

The familiar rooster was retained but in a much modified and dignified form. In the main title he is a dim shadow, seen flitting over the world. In the final title of the film he is seen reduced in size, and perched in a corner.

Under the arrangement with Vogue, its editors will collaborate with Pathe News editors, reproducing the highlights of each issue as it appears on the newsstands. Adelaide Finch, assistant Pathe editor, will be the fashion director and contact with the magazine.

The new titles were designed by Albert Binder, artist.

The renovation also included the addition of a new music library. A 50-piece orchestra will supply the musical background for the heavier material, martial music and the like, while a 28-piece unit will provide the accompaniment for lighter stories.

Pathe's history dates back to 1910 when it was founded by Jacques A. Berst, American manager of Pathe Freres. He got his idea for a newsreel from the fact Pathe Brothers operated a theatre in France, Pathe Journal, in which news scenes were featured.

One of the original members of the Pathe staff was A. J. Richard, who now is editor of Paramount News. Mr. Richard worked for several years in the laboratory at Bound Brook, New Jersey, and then became a cameraman in the Middlewest with his headquarters in St. Louis.

Throughout the 27 years of its operations the newsreel retained the same name, except during 1917 and 1918, when it was known as Hearst Pathe News. During that period the Hearst organization gathered the pictures and the editing was done by Pathe.

Among executives and editors associated with Pathe News in former years were Emanuel Cohen, who is now a producer, Ray L. Hall, Louis De Rochemont, now in charge of the March of Time, Terry Ramsaye, now editor of MOTION PICTURE HERALD, and Courtland Smith.

Pathe News went to RKO from the old Pathe producing and distributing company when Pathe sold its assets to FBO (Film Booking Offices), which now is RKO.

HERE is the blithe new maintitle of the new dress of Pathe News, the oldest surviving institution of the screen on the screen. It was Pathe Weekly when it first appeared, back at the peak of the nickelodeon era. The trademark rooster, reduced to a mere shadow of his former greatness now, was the Gallic cock which typified to the trade the aggressive Pathe Freres of Paris, then a world-famous concern. The rooster, down the years between, has undergone a number of metamorphic treatments. He is seen below as he was when he first came over, under the administration of Jacques A. Berst, as he was giving voice in Colvin Brown's administration of Pathe affairs, and lastly as he appears on the tail end of today's Pathe News by courtesy of Mr. Frederic Ullman, Jr.

MGM'S STUDIO GIVES FIRST RADIO SHOW

Marks "Complete Merger of Radio and Motion Pictures," Says Mayer in Broadcast

The new "union" of Hollywood and radio is now in effect, giving to the air, its national network systems and its advertisers of merchandise "exclusive" call on the complete talent roster of one studio, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Brevity was a feature of the entertainment, but not of the exposition of the merits of Maxwell House coffee. In the 60 minutes which MGM had over the National Broadcasting Company's red network, the General Foods product was named 21 times, and in addition there was a generous sprinkling of talk in which the specific brand was referred to with only the word "coffee."

"Our business, of course, is to make pictures," Louis B. Mayer, MGM vice-president, remarked in one of the numerous interruptions of the entertainment part of the program.

Catch as Catch Can

The show opened with the roar of MGM's familiar Leo, quickly followed by the announcement that Maxwell House coffee was about to offer "Good News of 1938."

From then on until the half way mark, it was every man for himself, catch as catch can. Robert C. Leonard was master of ceremonies and led an imaginary group of visitors on a studio tour best described as whirlwind.

One Thursday afternoon newspaper, discussing the program in advance, said: "Tonight a galaxy of motion picture stars will be heard over stations. . . ." They were. Jammed into a half hour, in addition to "plugs" for the sponsors, were a few words by Douglas Shearer, who was announced as being in a sound booth running a sound track of "Rosalie"; David Gould's remarks to a chorus of dancing girls; a talk and a few dance steps by Eleanor Powell, Buddy Ebsen and George Murphy; a song, "Caucasian Melody," by Igor Gorin; snatches of numbers from "Broadway Melody" by Judy Garland; the singing of "Your Broadway and My Broadway" by Sophie Tucker, who introduced a number of former celebrities, among them Irene Franklin, Ukulele Ike, Eva Tanguay, Trixie Friganza and Ann Pennington.

Mayer Halts "Merger"

Throughout it all Mr. Leonard was heard, seeking to add the informal touch by explaining that the "visitors" were dropping in on various sets and seeing the entertainers in action.

At the end of the half hour, Mr. Mayer was introduced and hailed the "complete merger of radio and motion pictures." He then introduced C. M. Chester, of General Foods, and presented him with a key to the studios.

In the second half of the production, Jeanette MacDonald and Allan Jones reenacted bits from their roles in "Firefly."

Although Mr. Leonard originally was announced as the permanent master of ceremonies for the MGM air show, this week Robert Young was to be the master of ceremonies for the second show, a company release said. "Mannequin," with Joan Crawford and Spencer Tracy, was the dramatization chosen.

A. H. Blank Banquet On December 9th

A congratulatory banquet will be held by the industry in commemoration of the 25th anniversary of A. H. Blank in the motion picture business, December ninth, at the Hotel Fort Des Moines, Des Moines, Iowa. Mr. Blank founded and developed the A. H. Blank circuit most of which was sold to Paramount Publix about 1927. With the Paramount receivership Mr. Blank became an operating partner, which involved his resuming operation of his former circuit. He now operates as Tri-States Theatres Corporation.

Herschel Stuart Quits As Monogram Treasurer

Herschel Stuart, treasurer of Monogram, left the company last week and departed for Dallas, Tex., to visit his family. Before joining Monogram in April Mr. Stuart was general manager of Consolidated Amusement Enterprises, Inc. J. P. Friedhoff, comptroller, will assume the position.

Scott R. Dunlap, vice-president in charge of production, arrived in New York from the coast last week. He said that Monogram may increase its production schedule for the 1938-39 season. The 1937-38 schedule consists of 42 pictures, including 16 westerns.

W. W. Trozell, former RKO salesman and branch manager for Republic in the Omaha territory, is now in charge of Monogram's office in Omaha. Bill Strickland goes to Des Moines as office manager and booker.

Films Now Rule National Theatre, Wanger Tells AMPA

Walter Wanger, United Artists producer, said last Thursday that "the legitimate theatre has passed out as a national theatre and pictures have taken its place, not only as a national theatre but internationally." Mr. Wanger spoke to members of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers at their weekly luncheon, International Casino, New York.

FIDLER DEFIES EFFORTS OF NBC AND HOLLYWOOD TO "CLEANSE THE AIR"

Radio Gossiper Answers Complaints of Industry and Broadcasters' Censorship Move with "It Can't Be Done"

James Marion Fidler, known as "Jimmy" Fidler to air listeners, and socalled "ace" of the army of air gossipers in Hollywood, has declared that the broadcasting of prattlings and tattlings about Hollywood, its motion picture product and personalities, can not and will not be stopped, at least insofar as he is concerned.

This is Mr. Fidler's defiant assertion despite the complaints of the studios and the stars, Will Hays and MPPDA, and regardless of the attempts at censoring by Major Lenox Lohr and his National Broadcasting Company, or any barriers set up by producers against the admission of air "commentators" to the studios.

Mr. Fidler defined his position while on a visit to San Francisco the other day, and Herb Caen, radio editor, reported thereon in three succeeding articles in the San Francisco Chronicle.

Mr. Fidler dismissed the formidable anti-film-gossip movement with the assertion that its effectiveness will be prevented because of "the little matter" of the $5,500,000 a year spent on radio advertising by his soap-making sponsor, Procter & Gamble, and because he has 24 paid "tipsters" in studios supplying him with information for his radio scripts.

"Do you think," asked Mr. Fidler, "that it would be good business for the (NBC) network to lock horns with my (Procter and Gamble) sponsor, who likes what I say and wants to keep on in exactly the same manner?"

"Besides," Mr. Fidler pointed out, the corporations behind his two nearest rivals, Walter Winchell, broadcasting for Jergens' Lotion, and Sidney Skolsky, "gossiping" for the Bromo-Seltzer headache powder, "likewise spend huge amounts on NBC, cold figures revealing that the three sponsors concerned were responsible last year for exactly one-third of NBC's entire annual income!"

The first open anti-film-gossip action to be taken by the broadcasters came on October 21st, when Major Lenox Lohr, president of National Broadcasting, informed Don Gilman, NBC Hollywood executive, that any future contracting or arrangements for or with film gossipers, either on a sustaining or advertiser-sponsorship basis, must have his personal approval and must pass the test of his personal investigation. Stringent censorship of the scripts was inferred.

Last week, Mr. Gilman was understood to have held informal discussions with some of the coast air gossipers, to warn them of the new "vigilant watch" to be maintained over their utterings, and to further issue warning that the new censorship hereafter will expunge any copy not measuring up to a prescribed standard.

Further evidence of the broadcasters' new attitude toward the gossipers was brought out into the open the other day on the occasion of NBC's introduction of a new "film commentator" program featuring Alistair Cooke, of London, who, on his first program, declared:

"This series is being started in the hope certainly of offering constructive and useful criticism about the theatre and the movies. I don't know whether I know just what Hollywood means by 'constructive barbs'; I think even a Comanche would be hard put to it to know how to shoot an arrow constructively. Arrows give you a quick and deadly wince between the shoulder blades, or you don't even know they are there. But I don't know that we need share this idea of a movie critic as a man with a pop-gun who sneaks around dark alleys. One critic at least here and now resents the idea that the man with the pop-gun has any right to invade boudoirs, or even night clubs or swimming pools. What the movie stars do with their spare time may make titilating gossip. It has nothing to do at all with film criticism."

JAMES MARION FIDLER

Mr. Fidler Speaks

Mr. Fidler, however, answered Major Lohr's NBC anti-gossip orders and the complaints of Hollywood producers, studios, talent and MPPDA, with the statement that "any attempt to keep me from reviewing new films the way I see them and telling what I know of the inner workings of Hollywood might be made—but it never will succeed."

He said he did not have to go near a studio to get his "news." "The truth is," he added, "I rarely do. But even if the doors were locked to me, my assistants would continue to get me the news, and if a censorship were imposed, you bet that news would be more interesting than ever."

Mr. Fidler boasted that he has "24 tipsters on my payroll, and all 24 held key positions in Major studios. "I'm the only one who knows their names," he went on. "When they phone in a story—and this may sound a little melodramatic to you, but it's true—they identify themselves merely as 'Operative 7' or 'Operative 1001' whichever it may be."

Calls Fidler Target

All of which caused Mr. Caen, in the San Francisco Chronicle, to conclude "Mr. Fidler has proved time and again that he is the only gabber equipped, financially and mentally, to provide listeners with accurate reports of happenings in the cinemecca. This is being ably demonstrated right now by a certain supposed 'dangerous rival' who is on the air Sunday nights as a pinch-hitter for a Broadway columnist and who has dragged the program's Crosley rating down three whole points." (George Fischer, Hollywood air "commentator," substituted for Walter Winchell on the Sunday evening Jergens' Lotion NBC program during Mr. Winchell's recent illness.)

The San Francisco Chronicle radio editor charged that the anti-film gossip movement in Hollywood and in NBC was "aimed only at Mr. Fidler, not at his unimportant rivals who claim no following, no knowledge of the inside of Hollywood, no prestige and no fit place on the air."

Followed Fischer Gossip

Be that as it may, Major Lohr at NBC started that network's campaign against gossipers after George Fischer, on the Winchell-Jergens program, reported that the Duke of Windsor was en route to Hollywood to assume the position of "czar" over all the motion picture industry throughout the world. Will Hays, personally, and his MPPDA, officially, publicly challenged Mr. Fischer's remarks, and the NBC's "clamping down" on the air gossipers followed.

"Those behind the 'censorship' movement" are "afraid of James Marion Fidler alone, and only by shouting sanctimoniously about 'mudslinging' can they hope to accomplish their purpose," Mr. Caen's Chronicle article charged.

The broadcasters' censorship action is "a great victory for the movie lots which have been tearing their hair at a terrific rate ever since Mr. James Marion Fidler took the air and began 'potshotting' at the phoney aspects of Hollywood," it was said.

"The mere fact that NBC wishes to remain 'on friendly terms' with the movies speaks blatantly for itself," concluded Mr. Caen, with the observation that the "last hope at this moment is that the sponsor, at least, is still willing to back Mr. Fidler's opinions and his privilege of airing them."

Hollywood, too, has hopes, according to opinion prevalent on the coast, that the new direct tieups of large studios with national air advertisers and with national networks, such as the General Foods-MGM arrangement, place radio sufficiently dependent on the studios for talent cooperation as to enable the producers to receive the cooperation both of broadcasters and advertisers in controlling the air gossipings complained of.

MAKEUP MEN, WRITERS IN NEW UNION MOVES

Walkout at Columbia Studio Ends in a Day; Board Hears Writers November 19th

The comparative quiet of the Hollywood labor front was this week interrupted by a one-day curtailment of production at the Columbia Pictures studio, caused by the walkout of union craftsmen in sympathy with Columbia union makeup workers who complained the company had failed to adhere to an agreement made two weeks ago providing for the employment of two makeup men on each set. Columbia was charged with engaging only half the required number. The makeup men also were aiming at the reputed move to have the bulk of players apply their own makeup.

On the heels of the Columbia strike came an announcement by the California Assembly capital and labor investigating committee that officers of the IATSE had been subpoenaed and the organization's records examined for a public hearing on charges of certain union members that the IATSE is a "racket."

Assemblyman K. B. Dawson, acting as committee chairman, told William Bioff, personal representative in Hollywood of George Browne, IATSE president, "We plan to scrutinize the records of the IATSE. We have heard of conditions bordering on a racket, with men coerced to join unions in which they have no voice or vote. We want to know just how that organization is being conducted."

Settlement of the Columbia Studio strike was announced Tuesday by Harry Cohn, president, in Hollywood, after a midnight conference with representatives of the unions.

Electricians and truck drivers, as affiliates of the IATSE, along with the makeup men, walked out in sympathy with the latter. Musicians, carpenters, painters, plasterers and members of the Screen Actors Guild remained at their posts. Associated Press reported that the walkout was called from the offices of William Bioff, west coast representative of George E. Browne, international president of the IATSE. Production on four pictures was affected.

Also involved was the discharge of five makeup men and the reputed attempt of Columbia to have players in the lower brackets apply their own makeup, and a similar growing movement at other studios, some of which are reported to be planning to establish schools for teaching players the application of their own makeup.

Hollywood received word over the weekend from Washington that the National Labor Relations Board there had issued orders for hearing of oral arguments November 19th in support of the testimony given at the recent Hollywood hearings on the Screen Writers Guild petition to the NLRB for its designation as the bargaining agent for screen writers, over the Screen Playwrights.

Dr. Towne Nylander, Hollywood regional labor board director, who made public the national board's order there, said that notifications would be sent to the 16 producers named in the guild petition, to the guild itself and to the Screen Playwrights, which intervened in the action because at present it holds the bargaining agreement for writers.

At the same time it became known that the Screen Writers Guild was extending its campaign for writer-union supremacy even further, petitioning the Authors League of America for representation on the League's council commensurate with the membership of the Guild.

According to Hollywood interpretations, if the Guild's petition was to be granted the screen writers would achieve a majority and, consequently, a position of dominance on the league's council. Its membership is believed to be greater than that of either the Dramatists Guild or the Authors Guild, the other two principal member guilds of the Authors League.

The proposal has been submitted already to the council of the Authors League in New York, together with additional requests relating to the screen writers' current moves for complete autonomy. It was reported in Hollywood that the League council has acted favorably on some of the requests, denied others and deferred action on still others. The entire program, however, remains in a state of discussion between the Guild and its parent organization and, pending its final determination, action will be postponed on the Guild's initial move to obtain local autonomy, which was approved by the Authors League council three weeks ago, but has not been submitted to the memberships of the organizations for ratification yet.

Under the plan for screen writers' autonomy, the Guild would become an "affiliate" of, rather than a member of the Authors League and would have as great or as slight a tie with the parent organization as it chose to effect. It would, however, have the benefit of joint action with other affiliated guilds in the event of emergencies. The move was admittedly undertaken to placate the Screen Playwrights.

The Guild's present overtures, if Hollywood interpretations are correct, would appear to reverse the dominant roles in Hollywood's favor.

The screen writers' moves closely parallel the development of the Screen Actors Guild to an already realized position of importance, if not of dominance, in the administrative affairs of its parent organzation, the Associated Actors and Artists of America. Where Actors Equity Association once dominated the Four A's by virtue of membership strength, the younger Hollywood organization has succeeded to that position by the same means.

Academy Requests Guild's Selections

The Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences this week forwarded a letter to the Screen Actors Guild, requesting it to select this year's award recipients in the acting division. It is the first time since the Academy started its award system in 1927 that it has sought the aid of an outside organization.

The decision to ask other organizations to participate in voting on awards came as a result of the decrease in the Academy branch membership and the corresponding growth of membership in talent organizations such as the actors', writers' and directors' guilds.

It is expected that the Directors Guild also will be asked to designate award recipients and that a similar request will be made of either the Screen Playwrights or the Screen Writers Guild, or both.

Stagehands Given Wage Increases

Attention in labor matters, from the exhibitors' standpoint, was focused this week upon the signing of a contract in New York with Stagehands Local No. 1 and the threat of an operators' strike in the 200 theatres of Famous Players Canadian Corporation.

Under the agreement signed by the stagehands with executives of the large circuits, the workers were granted salary increases of five and six per cent, retroactive to September 1st. The larger raise goes to employes in deluxe units and the other to those employed in neighborhood houses. Provision also was made in the contract for similar raises next year. As a result of the conclusion of the negotiations, which were carried on for several weeks, a number of theatres are expected to restore stage shows.

The threatened strike in Canada resulted from the signing of an agreement between the 15 independent theatres in Winnipeg, Man., and the One Big Union, a Winnipeg labor organization which is local in scope. W. P. Covert, Canadian vice-president of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes, informed E. Turner, president of the Winnipeg local of the International Motion Picture Operators, of the condition in a telegram. He wired:

"Have advice from G. E. Browne, union president, that unless Famous Players settle with the local in Winnipeg, a general strike order will be granted."

Why

20TH CENTURY-FOX IS YOUR MOST VALUABLE SOURCE OF WEEK-IN, WEEK-OUT PROFITS!

(From an editorial by W. R. Wilkerson in "Hollywood Reporter")

THE other day several of this industry's financial bigwigs were congratulating Darryl Zanuck on the great showing made by 20th Century-Fox. During the conversation, Zanuck made a statement which opened their eyes.

"Don't underestimate the value of the pictures contributed by Sol Wurtzel to our program," he said. "No company has offered a more consistent line-up of 'bread-and-butter' pictures and all exhibitors know it."

Zanuck really said a mouthful. The company that secures the most exhibitor good-will is the company that offers them a program of pictures which is sound from top to bottom. With Wurtzel contributing 26 pictures annually to 20th Century-Fox, this company has been able to maintain a program with no false bottom.

One of the 20th Century-Fox aces developed under Wurtzel is Jane Withers, who has bounced into all the "first ten" lists of boxoffice stars.

Wurtzel has managed to solve one of the boxoffice problems of the lower-bracket pictures by developing several successful "series pictures." The Charlie Chans, the Jones Family films and the more recent Mr. Moto group, gain boxoffice momentum with each new release. An exhibitor doesn't have to stage an expensive campaign to sell them, for their cumulative value far exceeds that of the usual production in their class.

Zanuck's statement should open a lot of Hollywood eyes to the part producers such as Wurtzel and his aides play in the brighter side of the Hollywood picture.

The lightning growth of Jane's pulling power is one of the biggest box-office stories of the year. Dozens of de luxe theatres have discovered that to their profit. Give this picture—Jane's best—the strong send-off it rates . . . and watch those extra shekels roll in!

THE KEYSTONE OF YOUR FUTURE

Production Up

Production perked up a bit during the first week of November. Eleven films were given the starting signal. Meanwhile, eight productions were finished. The proportion of potential quality pictures in both allotments appears to be higher than for several weeks past.

Three films were started by MGM. Two come directly under the studio's sponsorship; the third is from Hal Roach. Probably the most important of the new batch is "The Girl of the Golden West." To be produced on a scale that necessitates more than a $1,000,000 budget, it will present Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy in the leading roles and Ray Bolger, Buddy Ebsen, Leo Carillo and Priscilla Lawson in featured support. Robert Z. Leonard was assigned to direct. In "Arsene Lupin," which George Fitzmaurice is directing, will be seen Warren William, Virginia Bruce, Melvyn Douglas and Nat Pendleton. The Roach film, "Merrily We Live," has Constance Bennett and Brian Aherne in the leading parts, supported by Alan Mowbray, Billie Burke, Bonita Granville, Tom Brown, Patsy Kelly and Philip Reed. Norman Z. McLeod is directing.

"Revels" Started

At RKO Radio, "Radio City Revels," a production which has been talked about for a long time, finally got going. Produced by Jesse Lasky with Ben Stoloff directing, it will offer Bob Burns, Jack Oakie, Milton Berle, Ann Miller, Victor Moore and Helen Broderick, among the names to be included. The cast of "Easy Millions" lists Preston Foster, Sally Eilers, Paul Guilfoyle.

Warner Brothers put "The Mystery of Hunting" before the cameras. It will present Sheila Bromley, Dick Purcell, Elspeth Dudgeon, Arthur Hoerl, William Hopper.

"More Than Love" started at Universal. With additions to be made, the cast at present includes Fay Wray, Kent Taylor, Jane Darwell, Virginia Sale, Bert Roach and Harry Bradley. Ted Sloman is the director.

Columbia's new picture is "Penitentiary." Players already assigned are Walter Connolly, Jean Parker, John Howard, Robert Barrat, Marc Lawrence and Paul Fix. John Brahm is directing.

Maintaining its schedule of one new production a week, Republic began "Mama Runs Wild." The cast is headed by Mary Boland and Ernest Truex.

With Sam Katzman producing and directing, Victory Pictures started "Amateur Crook," with Herman Brix, Joan Barclay, Monte Blue, Jack Mulhall, Fuzzy Knight.

Although preliminary background and scenic work already has been done in Honolulu, Principal Pictures started studio work on "Hawaii Calls." Bobby Breen is the star, with the native boy, Pua Lani.

Two pictures were completed at MGM. "Mannequin" will present Joan Crawford, Spencer Tracy, Alan Curtis, Mary Phillips, Leo Corcey, Elizabeth Risdon and Oscar O'Shea. Frank Borzage directed. In "The Bad Man of Brimstone" will be seen Wallace Beery, Virginia Bruce, Dennis O'Keefe, Joseph Calleia, Lewis Stone, Guy Kibbee.

Monogram also completed two productions. Jackie Cooper, Maureen O'Connor, Marjorie Main, Robert E. O'Connor, Guy Usher, Doris Rankin, Matty Fain and Gordon Elliot are in "Boy of the Streets," which William Nigh directed. "Romance of the Rockies" features Tom Keene and Beryl Wallace. R. N. Bradbury produced and directed.

At RKO Radio "Women Have a Way" was completed. Featured players are Miriam Hopkins, Ray Milland, Walter Abel, Henry Stephenson, Alec Craig and Guinn Williams. Leigh Jason directed.

"Big Town Girl" was completed at 20th Century-Fox. Claire Trevor is starred, with Donald Woods, Alan Dinehart, Alan Baxter, George Chandler, Maurice Cass and Lillian Yarbo. Alfred T. Werker directed. For this company's release Sol Lesser completed "Tarzan's Revenge." It will feature Glen Morris and Eleanor Holm.

Last of the completed product is Universal's "International Spy." Directed by Joe Lewis, the principal players are William Hall, Jane Wyman, Esther Ralston, Robert Warwick, Jack Mulhall and Leon Ames.

AND NOW THE PARTY ADVISER

Stars of Warner-First National need have no fear that their parties will not be at least as "bright and additionally amusing" as those tossed by the luminaries of other studios. Mr. Robert Taplinger, publicity director of the big Burbank studio, fresh from New York, has created the post of "party advisor," and Helen Walter has been assigned to it.

As announced, Miss Walter's duties will be to arrange all the details for the shindigs, such as where they'll be held, who'll be invited, what they'll eat and drink, and when and how. She won't have have much trouble on that score, inasmuch as about everybody who goes to parties knows precisely what he or she is going to eat and drink and when and how. But where the young lady probably is going to run into difficulty is in carrying out that part of her assignment which obliges her to invent new games, stunts and gags.

If she reports upon or photographs some of the stunts and gags that, somehow, always creep into these Hollywood parties, Mr. Taplinger and his able assistant, Arthur Eddy, will do well to lay in a large stock of blue pencils.

Proving Ground

While looking at "The Hurricane," realization came that while the name of the actor playing the part of "Terangi" was new, the face and physique of the man were not entirely unfamiliar. Ensued a diligent searching of old films and records, the asking of tactful questions here and there, and it was discovered that Jon Hall was once Charles Locher. It is not at all unusual, in Hollywood, for one to change his name, or to have it changed for him, but this researching added the information that Mr. Hall, formerly Locher, once had played in a "Charlie Chan" picture.

In the six and one-half years that have elapsed since the start of the "Chans," a period in which 16 episodes have been made, more than 200 players have appeared in support of Warner Oland.

George Brent is a headliner now. In 1931 he appeared in "Charlie Chan Carries On." At that time Marguerite Churchill, John Garrick, Warren Hymer, Peter Cawthorne and Marjorie White were billed above him.

Young Gets a Start

A young player who appeared opposite Sally Eilers in the second of the series, "The Black Camel," bore the name of Robert Young. He has come a long way to featured roles in "I Met Him in Paris" and with Joan Crawford in "The Bride Wore Red." MGM is grooming him for its "more stars than there are in heaven" roster.

Along in 1934 "Charlie Chan in London" was made, and the name of Ray Milland occupied an inconspicuous place in the cast. Mr. Milland now is doing all right for himself and Paramount.

The following year, Charles Locher appeared in "Charlie Chan in Shanghai" and became one of the hundreds who whirl about the Hollywood scene. Now he is the Jon Hall of "The Hurricane." Among others who have appeared in the "Chans" are Mona Barrie, Donald Woods, Shirley Deane and Drue Leyton.

A few, notably Keye Luke and Thomas Beck, have found it worth their while to continue in association with Messrs. Oland, Wurtzel and Stone. Murray Kinnen has been in four of the pictures, C. Henry Gordon in three, and Harold Huber and Francis Ford in two each.

EARNINGS ARE LISTED BY FOUR COMPANIES

United Artists Calls Last Week the "Biggest" in Its History; Dividend Is Voted by RCA

Substantial earnings by United Artists, Radio Corporation of America, Columbia Broadcasting Company and General Outdoor Advertising were this week's highlights in financial news of motion picture and allied industries. There were also dividend declarations by Westinghouse and Dictaphone, and the disclosure that the Chase Bank has realized $3,600,000 in a year from liquidation of its holdings in Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation.

United Artists announced that the week ended November 5th was "the biggest week in its history since the company was founded in 1919," adding: "Never before has the gross intake in actual cash approximated the figures piled up during this week."

Because United Artists is a "closed" corporation, earnings figures for the company never are disclosed.

Radio Corporation

The Radio Corporation of America, owning one-half of the RKO motion picture and theatre interests, and all of the NBC broadcasting, RCA communications and RCA Victor theatre, studio and radio equipment manufacturing systems, reported a net profit of $6,599,111 for the nine months ended September 30, 1937. At a special meeting this week, the RCA board of directors authorized the payment on December 21 of dividends which will bring the total paid on the company's three classes of stock during 1937 to approximately $6,450,000.

The 1937 nine months' net profit compares with a net of $2,847,383 for the same period last year, gaining some 232 per cent. Profit for the third quarter of this year was reported at $1,951,726, compared with $1,083,604 for the same quarter last year. The net figures are after interest, depreciation, amortization and provision for Federal income taxes but before provision for Federal surtax on undistributed profits.

Gross operating income for the first nine months of this year amounted to $82,847,873, compared with $69,037,084 last year. For the third quarter of 1937 gross operating income was $30,052,173, compared with $25,094,558 for the 1936 quarter.

The dividends declared by the board were 87½ cents per share on the $3.50 cumulative convertible first preferred for the period from October 1 to December 31, payable December 21 to holders of record on December 3; $31.25 per share on the outstanding 16,196 shares of "B" preferred for the period from October 1, 1931, to December 31, 1937, payable December 21 to holders of record on December 10, and 20 cents per share on the 13,880,963 shares of common stock, payable December 21 to holders of record on November 12.

Columbia Broadcasting

The Columbia Broadcasting System, Inc., and subsidiaries report for the 39 weeks ended October 2, 1937, a net profit of $3,053,416 after depreciation, Federal income taxes and surtax on undistributed profits, equal to $1.79 a share (par $2.50) on 1,707,950 combined Class A and Class B shares.

For the 40 weeks ended October 3, 1936, the company reported a net profit of $2,451,740, equal on the above number of shares to $1.44 a share.

The board of directors this week declared a cash dividend of 40 cents per share on the present Class A and Class B stock of $2.50 par value, payable December 13 to stockholders of record at the close of business December 6. The board will meet November 30 to consider the payment of a special dividend.

Gross income from sales this year, as of October 2, was $24,926,420.61, which compares with $18,898,721.74 for the week ending October 3 in 1936.

Income account for the 39 weeks ended October 2, 1937, compares with the 40 weeks ended October 3, 1936, as follows:

| | 39 wks. end. Oct. 2,'37 | 40 wks. end. Oct. 3,'36 |
|---|---|---|
| Gross income from sales | $24,926,420 | $18,898,722 |
| Operating profit after depreciation | 3,644,007 | 2,856,615 |
| Other income (net) | 59,488 | 95,931 |
| Total income | $3,703,495 | $2,952,546 |
| Federal income and surtax | 650,079 | 500,806 |
| Net profit | $3,053,416 | $2,451,740 |

General Outdoor Advertising

General Outdoor Advertising Company, handling a large volume of motion picture billboard advertising throughout the country, reported for the quarter ended September 30, last, profit of $433,289 after depreciation, interest, amortization and other charges. No mention is made of taxes. This compares with $589,180 in the preceding quarter and $334,368 in September quarter of previous year. For nine months ending on September 30, 1937, indicated profit, as compiled from company's quarterly reports, was $765,863 after above reductions, comparing with profit of $435,734 for the ninth months ended September 30, 1936.

Dictaphone Corporation

Dictaphone Corporation, manufacturing hard-of-hearing devices for theatres, among other products, voted a $2 dividend per share on the common stock, payable on December 1st. This follows a $1.50 payment on September 1st.

Westinghouse Report

Westinghouse, manufacturing considerable electrical equipment used in theatres and studios, reports a dividend of $1.00 per share, payable November 30 to common and preferred stockholders on record as of November 9. This is the fourth dividend declared this year, bringing the total up to $4.00 per share.

For the 12 months ended September 30, 1937, orders were $239,573,704 as compared with $162,295,156 for a like period of 1936; an increase of 48 per cent.

Chase Bank Holdings

Chase National Bank, holding majority control, has realized approximately $3,600,000 within the past year on the progressive liquidation of its Twentieth Century-Fox stock holdings. The bank has been entitled to dividends amounting to about $1,200,000.

The bank's consistent disposal of the stock at average market prices over the past 12 months has reduced its holdings of Twentieth Century-Fox preferred to approximately 50.05 per cent of that issue outstanding and to approximately 26 per cent of the common, it was revealed.

Chase now holds 687,096 shares of preferred, compared with 774,753 shares a year ago, and 343,448 shares of common, compared with 387,376 a year ago. The bank retains its 58 per cent interest in National Theatres, the company's negotiations for the purchase of this stock having been held up by litigation and, currently, by market conditions.

Fred Wehrenberg Reelected Head of St. Louis MPTO

Fred Wehrenberg, owner of the Cinderella, Melba, Michigan and Virginia theatres in St. Louis, was reelected president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of St. Louis, Eastern Missouri and Southern Illinois at a meeting at the Coronado Hotel, St. Louis. Two hundred exhibitors attended the session at which Ed Kuykendall, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, voiced opposition to any governmental regulation of the motion picture industry.

Four Meetings Held

Other exhibitor activities of the week included a two-day annual meeting of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Oklahoma at Oklahoma City; the election of Leo F. Wolcott, of Eldora, Iowa, as president of the Allied Independent Theatre Owners of Iowa-Nebraska, Inc., and the conventions of the Independent Theatre Owners of Arkansas and of the MPTO of Washington, D. C.

In his address at St. Louis, Mr. Kuykendall while opposing governmental regulation of the industry, declared that if it should come about those "actively connected with the motion picture industry most certainly should have some voice in it so that we can get the kind of regulation that is wholesome and constructive."

Non-theatricals, he said, are causing a "lot of grief" in the motion picture business, pointing out that many parent teacher organizations have promoted motion pictures for schools and that the pictures have been in direct competition with theatres.

He expressed fear that the plans of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America for promoting its educational department will "get out of bounds." If the movement stays within proper bounds, he continued, the results should be beneficial.

Other officers chosen to serve with Mr. Wehrenberg, are S. E. Pertle, Jerseyville, Ill., first vice-president; I. W. Rodgers, Cairo, Ill., second vice-president; Robert Cluster, Johnston City, Ill., third vice-president; Sam Komm, St. Louis, fourth vice-president; Louis S. Hehl, St. Louis, secretary-treasurer, and Walter Thimming, St. Louis, sergeant-at-arms.

The Iowa-Nebraska group voted unanimous opposition to the publication of box office figures, checkers divulging box office figures, the production of "C" and "D" pictures and the promotion of theatres by distributors' representatives.

Other officers, besides Mr. Wolcott, who were elected are M. R. Blair, vice-president, and Charles Peterson, secretary. Mr. Blair and O. A. B. Hilton were named to fill vacancies on the board of directors.

The principal discussion at the Arkansas ITO convention was on the light and power rates charged in the state. More than 100 members attended the session.

Loewenstein Reelected

In Oklahoma City Morris Loewenstein, president of the Oklahoma MPTO, was reelected for the eighth year together with other officers and directors. Mr. Kuykendall and Colonel Harry A. Cole addressed the meeting. The MPTOA president, speaking on the ten point trade practice program, said: "Methods of selling pictures will have to be changed. The time is coming when a picture will have to fit the requirements of each house in which it is played."

A. Julian Brylawski was elected to his eleventh term as president of the MPTO of the District of Columbia at a meeting in Washington on Tuesday.

IN THE CUTTING ROOM

Romance in the Dark

Romantic Comedy

It is the intention of Harlan Thompson, producer, that "Romance in the Dark" will tell a gay, Continental love story in a style primarily appealing to American audiences while being desirable for the foreign markets. He has chosen a play written by Hermann Bahr. Responsibilities of transcription were entrusted to Frank Partos, a contributor to the screen plays of such pictures as "The Great Gambini," "Hands Across the Table," "Rose of the Rancho" and "So Red the Rose," and Anne Morrison Chapin, recently associated with the preparation of "Love Takes Flight" and "Shall We Dance?" The job of directing was assigned to H. C. Potter, who numbers "Beloved Enemy" among his credits.

The story, set in Budapest and the contiguous countryside, is romance into which is blended considerable music. A student singer seeks an operatic and concert career. She believes she can attain it by associating herself with a famous opera singer.

The cast will feature Gladys Swarthout, John Boles, John Barrymore and Claire Dodd as principals. There will be ample opportunity for both Miss Swarthout and Boles to exercise their vocal talents. Barrymore's role is essentially comedy. Important supporting roles will be played by Fritz Feld, Ferdinand Gottschalk, Torben Meyer, Curt Bois and a dozen less known players.

Release date, tentatively Jan. 14, 1938.

Easy Millions

(RKO Radio)

Romance and Racketeering

For rapid identification, the love story content of this forthcoming production may be described as an office romance. Two commercial artists are in love. The girl has a rival, but he is only a secondary menace. The boy and girl draw pictures for a nationwide puzzle contest. Racketeers kidnap the man in order that they may have access to the forthcoming pictures and the answers to the problems. He ingeniously draws into the pictures clues to his whereabouts are understandable only to the girl.

The seed of the story idea was found in a book written by George Beck. Its screen development was placed in the hands of J. Robert Bren, Edmund Joseph and Harry Segall. Bren lists "Danger Patrol," "Hideaway" and "Without Orders" among his credits. Joseph did special dialogue for "Sea Devils" and "The Bride Walks Out," and Segall contributed to "She's Got Everything," "Fight for Your Lady" and "Super Sleuth." The director, Christy Cabanne, has "The Westland Case," "Annapolis Salute" and "You Can't Beat Love" as his current films.

Preston Foster, doing his fourteenth picture for RKO Radio, and Sally Eilers, seen in the company's "Danger Patrol" and "Without Orders," are the leading players. Lorraine Kruger, brilliant in a dancing specialty in "New Faces of 1937," gets her first chance at a featured role as Miss Eilers' romantic rival. Paul Guilfoyle and Guinn Williams are the head racketeers.

Release date to be determined.

Mannequin

(MGM)

Romance

The title and the listing of Joan Crawford as the star might suggest that "Mannequin" will be something in the nature of a fashion show. Such a conclusion would be erroneous. Although Miss Crawford is scheduled to have some 28 changes of costumes, and in some sequences of the story her characterizations are reminiscent of her "Dancing Lady" portrayals, the story is fundamentally romance.

A woman's husband suggests that she marry a wealthy but rough business man and get a divorce quickly, the while the first husband makes him the victim of a $100,000 shakedown. She marries the shipping magnate, but is happy. When the new husband returns from a European honeymoon, the ex-husband, in attempting to blackmail him, makes it appear that his wife is a partner to the scheme.

Based on a story of the same title by Katherine Brush, which appeared in a national magazine, "Mannequin" will have Spencer Tracy, recently in "Captains Courageous" and "Big City," playing opposite Miss Crawford. Three comparative newcomers, Alan Curtis, Mary Phillips, seen in "The Bride Wore Red," and Oscar O'Shea, who was in "Captains Courageous," have important supporting roles. Also featured is Leo Gorcey, who had the role of "Spit" in "Dead End." Frank Borzage, maker of "Big City," is directing, and Joseph Mankiewicz, who handled "Fury," "Georgeous Hussy," "Bride Wore Red" and "Double Wedding," is producing.

Release date, Dec. 31, 1937.

Tarzan's Revenge

(20th Century-Fox - Principal)

Jungle Adventure

Books, newspaper cartoon strips and motion pictures have made the fabulous exploits of Edgar Rice Burroughs' Tarzan familiar to countless persons. The substance of "Tarzan's Revenge" is jungle adventure, romance, comedy and melodrama. A white girl rescued from menacing dangers finds love and happiness with the jungle man.

In the history of the Tarzans, eight actors have had the title role. A new name, but by no means unfamiliar, makes its debut in this number. Glenn Morris, 1936 Olympic games decathlon champion, winner of the Sullivan Award as the world's greatest athlete, and presently the subject of a Pete Smith short, is the newest Tarzan. With him is another famous athlete, Eleanor Holm, who has had some experience in pictures and was the subject of much newspaper attention prior to the Berlin Olympic games. With one exception, the others of the cast are wellknown screen names. Included are George Barbier, C. Henry Gordon, Hedda Hopper, George Meeker, Cobert Morris, Joseph Sawyer and the prize fighter, John Lester Johnson.

The current screen play was prepared by Robert Lee Johnson and Jay Vann and D. Ross Lederman, long associated with Columbia, during which time he handled, among other pictures, "A Dangerous Adventure," "I Promise to Pay" and "Counterfeit Lady."

Release date: Dec. 17, 1937.

Gold Is Where You Find It

(Warner Brothers)

Romance and Adventure

There seems to be in this production a strong combination of the elements necessary to market a picture. The story, which appeared serially in Cosmopolitan Magazine, is both romantic and melodramatic. Set in California, timed shortly after the discovery of gold, its action describes the warfare waged by agricultural interests and hydraulic gold miners. The love story concerns a mining engineer and a farmer's daughter. The picture is being produced in color.

The screen play for the Clements Ripley original was written by Warren Duff and Robert Buckner. Mr. Duff lists "Varsity Show" and "Angle Shooter" among his current writings. Mr. Buckner is a newcomer. The picture was directed by Michael Curtiz, who did "Perfect Specimen," "Kid Galahad," "Charge of the Light Brigade" and "Captain Blood."

The leading players are George Brent, who was starred in Warner's earlier color venture, "God's Country and the Woman," and Olivia de Havilland, currently in "The Great Garrick." The featured roles will present Claude Rains, effective in "They Won't Forget," Margaret Lindsay and John Litel, who is now appearing in "Alcatraz Island." Tim Holt, son of Jack Holt, also has an important part. The supporting cast is composed of such wellknown players as George Hayes, Russell Simpson, Willie Best, Barton MacLane, Harry Davenport, Eddy Chandler, Robert Homans, Granville Bates, Sidney Toler, Robert McWade, Moroni Olsen and Clarence Kolb (Kolb and Dill), who did a good job for himself in "Portia on Trial."

The Four Marys

(MGM)

Triangle Romance

The principal players to be seen in this picture are Myrna Loy, Rosalind Russell, Franchot Tone and Walter Pidgeon. Miss Loy's latest appearance was in "Double Wedding," while "Night Must Fall" and "Live, Love and Learn" are Miss Russell's recent films. Tone was in "The Bride Wore Red," and it will be remembered that Pidgeon was featured in "Saratoga." Supporting players listed are Nana Bryant, Leonard Penn, Ruth Hussey and Rita Johnson.

The title is related to the theme in only an allegorical way. The story, which has an undeniably sophisticated savor, nevertheless is comedy-drama. A girl loves a man. He chooses to marry another. Jealous, the wife finds her life complicated because the first girl never forgets her affection. The resolution of the tangle should prove entertaining.

Locales for the modern production, which is based on a Fanny Heaslip Lea story, are New York, the departments of a metropolitan newspaper, night clubs, millionaires' mansions and grounds, and Madison Square Garden. All the settings were designed and constructed under the supervision of Cedric Gibbons. It might be noted that Richard Thorpe, the director, demonstrated his versatility with such pictures as the shuddery mystery, "Night Must Fall," and the farce, "Double Wedding."

Release date, Jan. 7, 1938.

FRANCE HITS GERMANY, ITALY AND HOLLYWOOD

Agency Floods Capitals with Propaganda in Advancing Cause of Domestic Studios

The motion picture industry in France is engaging in a strongly worded propaganda campaign against the competition of the combined Italo-German interests. This has a double significance in view of the move just started in the French Cabinet to place control of the French film industry in the hands of the government. Thus, France would have available the same film medium for circulating political propaganda domestically and throughout the European Continent as is now used by Italy and Germany through the absolute dictatorship control which they both exercise over their respective motion picture industries.

Very tangible signs of the French campaign to propagandize the French film business in the political and competitive race for supremacy with Hollywood, and, particularly, with Italy and Germany, appear in the weekly bulletins of the Agence d'Information Cinegraphique de la Press Francaise et Etrangere (Motion Picture Information Agency of the French and Foreign Press). Conducted by Marc Pascal, in Paris, the agency is flooding the more important film markets of the world with statements in English, French, German, and Spanish, aimed at the American, Italian and German industries, in advancing the cause of the French motion picture.

"French films having proved definitely superior in quality, Paris during the last two years has become the real European center of film exportation," says a bulletin from the Information Agency.

"The well deserved distinction obtained at Venice (at the recent International Film Congress) have definitely sanctioned the quality of French films, and today, foreign buyers instead of going to Berlin to screen the new German productions, now come to Paris and buy French films, which are better."

French Industry Gains

It is said that considerable ground has been gained by the French industry in Sweden, Norway, Denmark and Finland.

An unnamed importer, according to the Information Agency, has "ascertained that the French film industry no longer fears the competition of German productions, even in countries where the German language is in favor.

"In Germany, some of the French films have made a good impression in Berlin, but as they are not 'dubbed,' the provinces never get the opportunity of acclaiming those of our films which deserve to be seen by all. But this is a political matter, and we are still very far from the reciprocity agreement signed between the Third Reich and France."

"Results speak for themselves," the French say. "France has again taken the place which was hers, at the head of European production.

"Let us persevere if we want to keep the lead, for Germany and Italy will not fail to unite their efforts to take from us the brilliant success obtained by the whole of French production.

"French production, coming first on the list of European film production, becomes an extremely dangerous rival for America on all Continental markets. The producers from over the Atlantic understand this, and use to the utmost their financial position to carry off our stars." M. Pascal's statement apparently refers to the large number of French motion picture, stage and musical comedy stars who in recent weeks have left Paris for Hollywood under contract to various of the large Hollywood studios.

"The French film industry has awakened, taking back its place at the head of the European production, and if it were given the same means as those of the German film industry, it would hold the first place—the one it was entitled to in the past—ahead of America."

Sponsors Legislation

Jean Zay, Minister for National Education, in France, is sponsoring the move in the French Cabinet to legislate control of the French industry into the hands of the government, as in Italy and Germany. Besides allowing the government to control the contents of French motion pictures, thereby permitting the use of the screen as a political propaganda medium, it is proposed by M. Zay to have government collections in exhibition on a percentage of box office receipts due to producers, distributors and authors.

Recording Made From Kinetephone

A recording of the voice of Andrew Carnegie from the Kinetephone, invention of the late Thomas A. Edison, to a modern electric phonograph disc was made at the Reeves Sound Studios, Inc., in New York last Friday. H. E. Reeves, president of the company, has developed a new device for the electrical re-recording of the old cylinders.

Among the voices from which transcriptions have been made are those of William Edward Gladstone, Leon Tolstoy, P. T. Barnum, Lord Kelvin, and Theodore Roosevelt. The records were made with the cooperation of the Edison Laboratories.

The transcriptions will be made available to universities and eventually will be placed in the National Archives in Washington.

The first public demonstration of the Kinetephone was held in February, 1913, in Mr. Edison's experimental laboratory, West Orange, N. J. A report of that occasion said "marvels of expression were made possible by a cylinder phonograph."

Federal Control Of Sales Seen For Australia

by CLIFF HOLT
in Sydney

The Australian Government, it is understood, is considering the advisability of regulating the distribution of available films between Hoyts and Greater Union Theatres because the two circuits are not renewing their theatre operating deal on its expiration at the end of this year.

It is said that labor may be persuaded that the Twentieth Century-Fox influence in Hoyts represents a threat to the future of Greater Union Theatres, since, by reason of its American theatre circuit, it can influence those companies doing business with them in Hollywood to sell to Hoyts in preference to Greater Union theatres.

At the moment, however, the prime consideration is as to which government is in power next year. Labor governments especially are ever ready to listen to propaganda against American companies and as Greater Union will probably raise the cry, the prospects of active political participation in the matter of film supplies will not be out of the question if the Lyons government is defeated.

Norman B. Rydge, head of Greater Union, said it had been hinted that if his company operates independently from 1938 onwards, adequate supplies of film will be denied to the company's Australian-owned theatres.

"Statements," he said, "have already appeared in the overseas press that all the good films have been tied up against Greater Union Theatres. I do not want to discuss this question here, but all I can say is that our Australian Government have always protected Australian industry and will not stand by and allow such a vast organization as ours to be forced out of business. No government, I am sure, will hesitate to introduce legislation to protect, if necessary, the jobs of our large body of men and women employees, and the interests of about 5,000 Australian investors."

A feature of the proceedings is that whereas Hoyts have allegedly cornered all the important film for next year, no official announcement has been made by either Hoyts or any one distributor that contracts have actually been signed.

Cinesound Plans

Australia's almost lone producing unit, Cinesound Productions, will deliver five features next year. The company has voted an expenditure of £100,000 for production costs. Cinesound executives said that their new policy of almost continuous productions will reduce the studio's overhead.

Their confidence in local production arises out of the success achieved by "It Isn't done." Indications of a repetition of that success are given by "Tall Timbers," which has gone over well in Brisbane, the scene of its world premiere. Lloyd Hughes, who came here from Hollywood to star in "Lovers and Luggers," now in the cutting stage, will be retained to play the lead in "The Broken Melody."

SHOWMEN'S REVIEWS

This department deals with new product from the point of view of the exhibitor who is to purvey it to his own public

The Hurricane

(UA-Goldwyn)

Spectacle

Time was—and was for a long time—when the magic words, "Griffith has done it again," flashing across the Continent twice or thrice a year, sent exhibitors into their files after the stock matrix showing the old master in his upholstered overcoat under the plush Fedora and down to the newspaper office with fresh copy for the caption.

Showmanship was a simple matter of short, straight lines in those days, and in no time at all the customers came in droves to pay tribute, both kinds, to the man whose "Birth of a Nation" was happily confused in public consciousness with the birth of the motion picture. The man became a legend, exhibitors became capitalists, and the whole idyllic state of affairs now dimly but fondly remembered as the Griffith Era slipped somehow forever away.

Now a new legend, if not exactly a new era, is aborning, and its name is Samuel Goldwyn. "Goldwyn has done it again" is the word heard up and down Hollywood Boulevard after each Goldwyn premiere and flashed by wire and airline to every periodical in every land before the last reel of the new picture has been rewound. What Goldwyn says and does, or denies saying and doing, is spot copy and columnist fodder from Beverly Hills to Bagdad, and what he turns out in the way of motion picture entertainment is, according to gross charts, hot stuff in the opinion of a public outgrossing Griffith's.

Of course none of that is news, but the parallel bears emphasis about now because Mr. Goldwyn's "The Hurricane," like the best of Mr. Griffith's memorable explorations of the dramatic province, and like so few others, is a production in strict and striking observation of first principles and short, straight lines. Discounting technical advantages not available to the old master at his peak, "The Hurricane" might be, in content, pattern, development and emotional impact, a D. W. Griffith production. It would seem to follow that customers will come in droves to pay tribute, both kinds, to the new master, for the same good and sufficient reason.

In all the uproar and hullabaloo that has been raised, for sound commercial purposes by its official spokesmen and out of sheer admiration by the critical gentry, little has been said about just what "The Hurricane" is. Possibly that is as well, since showmen setting out to exploit the picture have an abundance of patently potent sales material to work with, but there may be those, among exhibitors and customers, interested in knowing that it follows the old reliable Griffith pattern, which he could have borrowed from Beowulf, wherein a noble character, first made beloved, is subjected to successive varieties of suffering until, when it would appear nothing can save him, nature takes matters in hand and, dispensing death and destruction freely, produces a happy ending. This time the noble character is a South Sea Island sailor and nature does it with a hurricane.

This is not, of course, the Griffith era, and the mere billing of the Goldwyn name is not commonly relied upon to bring the cash customers running—although some showman might make himself a surprising amount of money one of these days trying just that. Nor is the Goldwyn era an era of one-name values, nor all-star cast bargain sales. It is a part of the Goldwyn legend that a Goldwyn picture contains so much to sell that the laziest showman in the business can sell it without interrupting his pinochle game. "The Hurricane" is that kind of a picture.

The book, as 24-sheets and columnists have been telling everybody for weeks, is by Charles Nordhoff and James Norman Hall, the gentlemen who wrote "Mutiny on the Bounty," a circumstance good for a healthy advance sale from New York City to Mandalay.

The screen play is by Dudley Nichols, whose winning of Academy Awards and other headlined activities have made him the most widely known scenarist since Jeanie Macpherson, Frances Marion and C. Gardner Sullivan made screen writers newsworthy.

The direction is by John Ford, Academy Award winner named first, second or third in practically every critical rating of directorial ability, whose close association with his present scenarist in past endeavors is a sort of Damon-Pythias classic to picture fans.

These are highly exploitable names in the Goldwyn era, and with them may be joined that of Merritt Hulburd, associate producer, and Oliver H. P. Garrett, adaptor.

On the player side Dorothy Lamour is perhaps the top name, in view of her radio popularity and other circumstances combining to have brought her focal attention. She plays an Island girl more effectively than the Island girls seen in "Mutiny on the Bounty" (if this be not treason).

The name of Jon Hall, invented for the picture as a presumed improvement upon his own Charles Locker, is of lesser marquee value now than it will be when his performance of the principal role gets properly talked and written about (which should be in ample time for most exhibitors' use).

Mary Astor, C. Aubrey Smith, Thomas Mitchell, Raymond Massey, John Carradine and Jerome Cowan are the other principals, their names meaning what they may in this or that given locality and, in any case, less than they will mean when the picture comes around on the crest of the spontaneous publicity being heaped upon it.

Copious as is this bagful of exploitation material, the thing that mowed down the by no means impressionable preview audience and started the wires humming with "Goldwyn has done it again" is not listed in the foregoing. That thing is the terrific hurricane sequence during which an island is denuded of population, habitation and vegetation by a natural disaster comparable in realism, magnitude, duration and suspense to no sequence ever filmed for sound or silent screen. Showmen have no words with which to describe this, but people—the plain, incoherently but tremendously eloquent paying public—have. This part of the job may be left confidently for them, and the Goldwyn legend, to take care of.

Second Honeymoon

Comedy

The uncounted comedies of this laugh-mad season have fallen into two groups. The first and largest includes innumerable variously titled successions of manufactured gags strung together like "pows" and "whams" in the comic strips. The second group, enumerable on the fingers of one hand, represent legitimate uses of the orthodox utensils of humor. Not to name names, these last are as distinguishable by their grosses as by academic analysis. "Second Honeymoon" falls in this category, both technically and according to the untechnical but vigorous reaction of a Saturday night preview audience in Glendale, Cal., as tough a bunch of guinea-pigs as ever booed a newsreel politician.

Just how to get across to the show shoppers that this is the case has become, what with all the blasting that's been done in behalf of the "phonies," a bit of a trick for the trigger type of showman. The easy thing, of course, is to hang up the names of Tyrone Power, Loretta Young, Stuart Erwin, Lyle Talbot and Claire Trevor, and to spout adjectives. But the adjectives that apply to comedy are getting pretty frayed around the edges. A bit more difficult, but fresh, is the technique employing such information as the fact that "Second Honeymoon" is a Philip Wylie story (which means a very definite thing to a surprisingly large number of persons) that appeared in the Red Book (a publication widely read and a good deal more widely respected) and has been adapted to screen purposes by Kathryn Scola and Darrell Ware (his is a potent newsstand name in its own right), and directed by Walter Lang (a name director), under the effective, urbane and wholly appropriate auspices of associate producer Raymond Griffith (whose memorable performances in silent pictures were superlative demonstrations of light comedy in the fine). Fresh, likewise, is the "discovery" type of copy, available here in extraordinary degree in the case of Marjorie Weaver, up from bits to a secondary principal assignment in which she "steals" every scene she's in and is in enough to give the tops the jitters.

There wouldn't be much exploitation capital in a synopsis of the story. It's about a divorced couple, the girl having remarried, who discover, in Miami, that they shouldn't have been divorced and, after a good deal of amusing but credible misunderstanding and comparing of notes, agree to restore, presumably with due process of law, their former estate. Stories about like that, in synopsis, have been popping up all year, as melodramas, comedies, murder mysteries and whatnot, but they're like it in synopsis only. This one's legitimate.

The picture is timely (what with the Miami season coming up) and the treatment is modern (which is not to say sophisticated or subtle or off-color), and it deals with matters and motives everybody knows all about.

Thrill of a Lifetime

Musical Comedy

It might be an idea to drop back a few years to the once standard vaudeville advertising technique in exploitation of this musical comedy, in which a number of persons familiar to footlights do their standard stage routine for the camera. Such a placarding of the talent could include:

BEN BLUE
THE YACHT CLUB BOYS
THE CANOVAS
TOMMY WONDER
DOROTHY LAMOUR
BETTY GRABLE
LEIF ERIKSON
ELEANORE WHITNEY
JOHNNY DOWNS

Of course the last five are not primarily stage names, if that would make any difference, but the effect of such billing would be to notify the customers that individual performances are underscored in Fanchon's production of a story by Seena Owen, Grant Garrett and Paul Gerard Smith which has about it much of the "Fanchon and Marco Idea" flavor. It is directed by George Archainbaud with much the manner he might be expected to employ if it were for stage instead of screen, and the result is entertainment of the kind usually seen between tormentors, if anybody remembers what they are.

The story is about a playwright who owns a summer resort and stages his play in that setting with the aid of guests who happen to be unemployed professionals, all this resulting, after copious confusion, in a happy ending. But the story never is treated more seriously than as a framework on which to hand solo, duet, trio, quartet and ensemble musical numbers and the comedy supplied principally by Ben Blue, the Yacht Club Boys, Judy Canova and Franklin Pangborn in about that order.

Frederick Hollander and Sam Coslow wrote three of the songs, with Carmen Lombardo collaborating on the title number, and the Yacht Club Boys are credited with two. Victor Young and Arthur Franklin arranged the music. Boris Morros provided musical direction and LeRoy Prinz and Carlos Romero staged the dances.

Manhattan Merry-Go-Round

Musical

This is Republic's annual contribution to filmusical pictures, and is one of which, according to preview reaction, much can be expected at the box office. A novel story, "Manhattan Merry-Go-Round," apparently was produced with an eye toward satisfying almost everybody by virtue of having in its cast various players of more or less established standing and running the range of music from grand opera to hi-de-ho.

In the heterogeneous list of actors are Phil Regan, Leo Carrillo, Ann Dvorak, Tamara Geva, James Gleason, Henry Armetta, Luis Alberni, Max Terhune, Smiley Burnette and in special musical numbers, Gene Autry in his cowboy regalia, Ted Lewis and his orchestra, Cab Calloway and his Cotton Club outfit, Kay Thompson and her singing ensemble, Jack Jenny and his orchestra, The Lathrops and Rosalean and Seville. Joe DiMaggio, star batter for the Yankees, appears in a bit plus an insert of newsreel shots of his home run in the World Series.

By proper exploitation of this mass of more or less popular idols, marshaled expertly by Harry Sauber, veteran film writer who makes his debut as a producer with this picture as well as writing the original screenplay, exhibitors may obtain capacity results. Each showman knows the comparative drawing strength in his community of the various personalities.

Once inside, the patron hardly will be disappointed by the film, unless, perhaps, by the fact that some of his idols may not have been given more time on the screen. Henry Armetta and Luis Alberni, for instance, whose appearances on the screen merely in a trailer bring applause in some quarters, are relegated to bits. Autry has the most favored spot in the finale, but is seen in only one musical number, "Round-Up Time in Reno," and in a small sequence.

The framework of the story is a well moulded concoction giving plausible excuses for presentation of the array of talent. "Gordoni," a more or less racketeering money lender, takes over a musical recording company when it fails because of inability to obtain name performers. He and his henchmen, headed by "Danny the Duck," bring in the name performers by force and make them do the platters. "Gordoni" is confronted by his mother, who berates him because he does not make classical records. So "Gordoni" forces "Jerry Hart," who is in love with "Ann Rogers," the plant's receptionist, to woo "Charlizzini," the opera star, into making platters. He does, but is reunited with "Ann," while "Gordoni" who is "a man of very few words and when he talks, he says a whole lots," in his own description, falls in love with the opera singer.

Swing It Professor

(Ambassador-Conn)

Comedy, Romance, Music

Name value in this picture is represented by Pinky Tomlin, Paula Stone, Milburn Stone, Mary Kornman, Gordon Elliott, Pat Gleason and a varied assortment of specialty entertainers.

The story is comedy romance, which blossoms under the handicap of many complications. Although it is embellished with quite a bit of music, presented mainly by Tomlin, the primary purpose of the piece is to provoke laughter. Everything that is said or done, even when it is wrapped up in melodrama, is pointed to accentuate that element. Thus while the production makes no gestures towards pretentiousness it nevertheless is enjoyable. The sophisticates may give it little consideration but persons who go to shows simply to have a good time undoubtedly will find much in it to engage their attention.

under difficulties. Somewhat slow in the initial sequences it assumes a lively pace about the half way mark and builds speedily in the climax. The element of surprise plays a prominent part in the denouement, to create a vein of comedy suspense which endows the story with a degree of unanticipated comedy melodrama. The show is well staged and the quality of acting and direction is probably better than expected.

The producing company bravely undertook an adventuresome experiment by offering it for preview in the Los Angeles Paramount theatre. Even in its most optimistic moments they could not hope to have many play dates in such a deluxe first run theatre as this. Naturally, and it was probably expected, there were quite a few walk outs. Most of the patronage present was drawn by the regular attraction, "High, Wide and Handsome."

Yet the applause upon conclusion of the preview indicated that those who remained regarded the preview favorably. In the houses which will be its market "Swing It Professor" may be expected to provide acceptable amusement.—Gus McCarthy.

The Last Gangster

(MGM)

Melodrama

Because the title labels it unmistakably as exactly what it is, showmen have no choice but to exploit this picture in the manner and with the means manifestly indicated. It is possible to construe the title as meaning a specific last gangster, the last of the several gangsters concerned in the story, or the last of the gangsters born of the prohibition era and surviving repeal. In either case, or any other, the idea would be to style it the last word in gangster pictures, and it is that, by any and all standards. (It may be added, parenthetically, that showmen disposed to do so will find themselves supported by the picture in intimations to the effect that here is shown what happened to Signor Alphonse Capone and what may be expected to happen to him when he is released from Alcatraz.)

After the character of the production has been established, exhibitors may move with confidence into a recitation of its professional merits. Beneath the glowing name of Edward G. Robinson, in the characterization that brought him screen fame, may be listed those of Lionel Stander, in a relationship not unlike his recent press agent castings; James Stewart, as an upright reporter and the romantic lead; John Carradine and Alan Baxter as gangster enemies of the leading character, and Rose Stradner in her first American picture as the last gangster's wife.

There is exploitation value, too, in the name of Edward Ludwig, whose direction has come to be recognized as a guarantee of certain decidedly worthwhile screen results, and there may well be included the names of William A. Wellman and Robert Carson, authors of the story, and John Lee Mahin, who prepared the screen play. That these five have succeeded entirely in preserving the flamboyant flavor of gangster phenomena, without permitting their subject to become dated, is a circumstance to be underscored.

The story closely parallels the Capone record up to the point where it catches up with the calendar. A big shot is convicted of income tax evasion and incarcerated in Alcatraz. Unlike Capone, this man has operated in New York and is a newlywed at the time of his imprisonment. A son is born shortly afterward, and its mother attempts to protect it by divorcing the gangster and marrying a newspaper man. On release from prison the gangster is met by former associates who torture him into revealing the whereabouts of his hidden fortune. Kidnaping and abusing the son is a final means of making the gangster talk.

Subsequent contact with the boy works a change in the gangster's attitude and he restores the lad to his mother. The father meets death in a final duel with a vengeful rival, but kills his killer to preserve the secret of his boy's identity, federal men meanwhile having killed all the gangsters who know it.

The time of the story is from 1927 to the present. Many scenes portray Alcatraz routine. Save for the torture sequence, which gets pretty brutal, most of the violence is offstage, although its occurrence is plainly indicated. Technically, and as to acting, the production is without question the best of the gangster library. W. R. W.

Big Town Girl

Three Men and a Girl

"Big Town Girl" is the kind of a show audiences and showmen appreciate. It's short but it's complete. Intelligently prepared, acted and directed, it combines romance, melodrama, comedy, music and thrills. Dialogue and action are well balanced. The manner in which musical content is worked in makes that a fundamental part of the story.

"Big Town Girl" differs from the ordinary semi-mystery melodrama in that the audience is made aware of the motivating situation at once. Yet that knowledge does not mitigate against sustained interest, nor does it tip off what is to follow. Much as is made known, there still is ample opportunity for surprise. Audiences know that one man (her husband) wants to kill the girl. They see another take her from a department store music counter and by press agent trickery make her "the masked countess" of radio fame. They know that the third, a newspaper reporter, who later becomes her companion in a menaced romance, wants only the story of her life.

With just enough melodrama to hold things tight, the first two-thirds of the film, nevertheless, is comedy, romance and music. There's much to amuse in the way "Edwards" makes a woman of mystery out of "Fay Loring" and sells her to a broadcasting chain, meanwhile holding suspicious reporter "Tracy" at bay. The last third is where the thrill action comes, as husband "Mead" catches up with "Tracy" and the girl, whose identity he doesn't know, to menace both. State police, however, kill "Marty" before he can do any further killing. The finale is a comedy romance surprise.

Although the picture is based on a series of stories written by Darrell Ware and Frances Whiting Reid, and actually tells four stories, all have been effectively welded into a single yarn. This accomplishment is all the more unusual inasmuch as four writers, Lou Brewslow, John Patrick, Robert Ellis and Helen Logan, had a hand in preparing the screen play. The screen unity attests the ability of director Alfred Werker and the work of Miss Trevor, Donald Woods, Alan Dinehart and Alan Baxter, who have the leading parts, as well as that of the support, Murray Alper, Spencer Charters, Maurice Cass, Irving Bacon, George Chandler and Lillian Yarbo. The entire group turned out a picture that is both an audience show and a showman's show.

"Sh! The Octopus"

(Warner Bros.—First National)

Mystery Farce

Perpetrating a hoax via the screen, so convincingly that the audience would give at least a modicum of credence to the apparently impossible happenings until the actual denouement, is a natural for exploitation in various ways. That is what happens in "Sh! The Octopus," which gives top billing to Hugh Herbert, who, through a succession of comic roles in Warner-First National pictures, has earned himself sufficient prominence to be featured in a series of possibly four pictures, of which this is the first. Teamed with him, and also presented as a not-so-bright detective, is Allen Jenkins, who likewise has a sizable following among film patrons.

The title alone gives a suitable basis for an energetic exploitation campaign, but the story itself shows ways to innumerable methods of publicizing the picture.

The story opens with "Kelly" and "Dempsey," two dimwit policemen, becoming involved in an investigation to find "The Octopus," after tracing it to its lair in an abandoned lighthouse, where they meet the seven other characters. They suspect all of them of being "The Octopus," which or who is never exactly defined except as being some kind of master criminal seeking a new death ray invented by a scientist. During the investigation, huge tentacles reach through mysterious doors of the old lighthouse and encircle one or more of the characters to carry them off. However, none of them is killed. Then, as the climax is reached, six of the suspects identify themselves as officers, each ranking above the other. Just as "the Octopus" is uncovered, the story breaks and the next scene shows "Kelly" being awakened in a hospital where he had been dreaming all the foregoing, after fainting upon the arrival of his wife's baby. "Dempsey" is there with him and all the players seen in various characters during the dream are doctors and nurses in the hospital, with the exception of "The Octopus" character, which is

Swing It, Sailor

Service Comedy

Beyond spotting a prop anchor or two in the foyer and flying the title from the marquee, the showman exhibiting this production may feel obliged to inform the customers in some way that it is not, as the title might indicate, a musical picture, but rather, a comedy somewhat in the pattern of the Edmund Lowe-Victor McLaglen service pictures of a few years back, with less of the "says you—says I" business.

The principals are Wallace Ford, Ray Mayer and Isabel Jewell, playing the three points of the formula triangle. The gist of the matter is that the smart sailor doesn't want the dumb sailor to leave the service to marry the girl, so plots to steal her from him, getting caught at it, ultimately, but saving his disillusioned buddy's life at risk of his own, by way of making everything come out even.

It's a David Diamond production directed by Raymond Cannon. Mr. Diamond collaborated with Clarence Marks on the story.

Trapped by G-Men

Melodrama

Here is a typical Jack Holt picture, of the kind which, though perhaps not remembered so very long, yet is entertaining and sufficiently suspenseful to capture and hold an audience's attention.

The ramifications of the plot allow for action that Holt keeps running smoothly. It is another story of G-men, yet it is different in the Arizonian locale, and in plot. Much of the footage is centered around the hideout of a band of notorious criminals, all played by established character actors. They include Jack LaRue, Edward Brophy, William Pawley, Arthur Hohl, Robert Emmett O'Connor, William Bakewell and Charles Lane. Others are Wynne Gibson, a G-woman and romantic lead opposite Holt, C. Henry Gordon, Eleanor Stewart and Frank Darien.

Assigned to find the hideout Holt changes his name and poses as a bank robber. Sent to prison he makes a friend of a criminal he knows to be a member of the gang. With the aid of the warden a fake escape is made. The criminal leads Holt to the hideout and the combined forces of the federal bureau and local police make the roundup.

Boots and Saddles

(Republic)

Western

Off the beaten track of western material, comedy and romance here are emphasized. While music now has come to play an integral part in westerns, here the numerous songs are divided between the sentimental western ballad and the sentimental romantic ballad.

Certain parts of the picture are as old as the old westerns. For instance the climax is a horse race over plain and hurdle. The action definitely favors the lee side but Gene Autry never has been the blood and thunder type of star.

Autry is in good form and in good voice. Smiley Burnette, amiable comedian, for once has ample material and he makes the most of it, as in the sequence at a United States Cavalry post, wherein Burnette gets hold of a bugle and practices army calls while the soldiers run helter-skelter to answer them. Judith Allen plays opposite Autry in the romantic lead.

Autry is the foreman of a ranch, verging on bankruptcy. The owner, an English boy, comes from England to sell it, but finds he likes the ranch so much he decides not to sell. Autry hits on a plan of selling horses to the army post to make the ranch pay. A rival horse breeder puts many crooked obstacles in Autry's path. Finally the Colonel of the post arranges a race, the winner to get the contract. Autry wins the race, the rival is exposed and arrested and Autry also wins the hand of the Colonel's daughter.

Reviewed at the Globe theatre, New York. A late afternoon audience, composed mostly of men, sat silently through the early footage, but laughed at the antics of Burnette and in general appeared to be enjoying the picture. —P. C. M.

The Return of the Scarlet Pimpernel

(London Films - United Artists)

Romantic Costume Melodrama

A sequel to "The Scarlet Pimpernel," one of the best box-office pictures ever turned out by London Films, this succeeds to a large degree in offering the same appeal. The story of a quixotic Englishman's adventures in Revolutionary France, where he pits his wits against the Terror, is well known. The backgrounds are picturesque, grim in the numerous scenes in which the guillotine and the political prison figure. The general atmosphere is one of romantic adventure, unhampered by any laws of probability.

Some loss of story appeal, as compared with the original, is due to the fact that The Scarlet Pimpernel, mysterious English leader of a group which rescues aristocrats from the guillotine, was identified at the close of the first picture. His new adventures call for a series of disguises, not all of which are convincing, and the suspense value also is reduced. It still remains effective, if unsophisticated, audience material.

The action is vivid and should appeal to lovers of highly spiced romance. There is exploitation value in the situation wherein an enemy of the Revolution works, Proteus-like, in the ranks of its supporters.

Barry Barnes, new British star discovery, won approval in the Pimpernel role. Sophie Stewart, Margaretta Scott, Francis Lister, Anthony Bushell and Allan Jeayes are other names.

At a London Piccadilly theatre trade show the story was thought crude but the production of obvious audience appeal for the average public. The cutting now being done will improve the picture greatly as an American value.

Dinner at the Ritz

Comedy with Music

Third picture to be made by Twentieth Century-Fox's British subsidiary with the French star, Annabella, "Dinner at the Ritz" definitely marks a forward step in the development of that artiste, now in Hollywood. Annabella's English is less labored, she is suitably cast as a temperamental French girl against Parisian and Monte Carlo backgrounds, and she is magnificently gowned.

Also box-office are the appearances of David Niven and Paul Lukas from Hollywood in the two chief male roles. There is a blend of tragedy and comedy in the story, growing out of situations when Annabella at different times appears in the guise of a Spanish Marchesa and an Indian Begum, and instantly is recognized by her admirers. The first disguise is for the purpose of an appearance at the Casino tables in the role of a heavy loser. The "Marchesa" offers for sale a valuable diamond necklace, supposed to be the last of her possessions but actually the property of a dealer, who has chosen this ingenious way of selling it, but at first she wins heavily, creating an amusing inversion of the ruined gambler situation.

"Racine," a Parisian banker, is murdered after he has sent to the Bank of France a letter containing the names of six men whom he suspects in a bond forgery. His daughter, "Ranie," determines to find the intercepted letter, both to unmask her father's murderer, and to repay the bondholders.

Viewed at a trade show in the Phoenix theatre, London, it brought a generally favorable audience reaction, though the lapse from the opening realism to melodrama was criticized. Annabella was praised.

Submarine D-1

(Warner-Cosmopolitan)

Adventure, Romance

No matter how many Naval Service pictures your patrons may have seen, they should still constitute a fresh new market for "Submarine D-1." As it is evident that the film was made with the whole hearted cooperation of the Navy and for quick identification may be described as a picture that follows the entertainment character previously established by the "Here Comes the Navy" type of production made by this studio, yet is so freshly different that only in atmospheric backgrounds does it bear any semblance of its predecessors.

Though not a war picture, its appeal to the patriotic emotions and the manner in which it pays tribute to the personnel and organization of the submarine service may be expected to have audiences standing up cheering.

It is a rough and robust he-man story that never is ribald, and through it runs an engaging vein of love interest rivalry. Its measures of comedy, adventure, thrill, and heroism, all good standbys for any kind of audience, are motivated by a note of effective human interest.

"Submarine D-1" is a story of the undersea service, the men in it, and a girl. From an educational standpoint and in consideration of this gesture to the Navy, it may be anticipated that the regular and reserve services will be eager to cooperate in exploitation campaigns. It is an object lesson in how the submarine service operates, how the men in it are trained, and the extent to which the Government goes to insure their safety. Picturization of this detail, as well as establishment of the personal and romantic rivalry existing between Pat O'Brien and Wayne Morris for Doris Weston's favor, plus Frank McHugh's comedy antics, occupy the early reels of the show.

At this point the picture drops its personal rivalry character and plunges into a demonstration of all branches of the fleet engaged in battle practice. D-1, penetrating smoke screens laid down by lines of destroyers and cruisers, and escaping the eyes of aerial observers, "torpedoes" a battle ship. Ensues an undersea collision with a cruiser's hull and the submarine sinks. One by one the crew, using the latest developed respirators, float up a life line to safety until only "Matthews," "McGillis" and an injured officer remain trapped. It is time for "Rogers" to prove the worth of his rescue diving chamber. As "Mathews" is brought up to assist him, the device is lowered to rescue "McGillis" and his companion. In the finale "Rogers" surrenders "Ann" to "McGillis," who he now knows is a real man fully worthy of the love of a real woman.

An audience show, "Submarine D-1" is also an exploitation picture. While name value is sufficiently strong for ordinary purposes, the production as a whole seems to be the thing to concentrate upon.

Previewed in the Warner Hollywood Theatre. Reaction of the audience indicated that although some of it may have seen similarly constructed pictures before, it also found this so different that interest was continually at high pitch. The patrons paid close attention to the collision and rescue sequences. Applause was spontaneous and enthusiastic.—G. M.

Adventure's End

Action Melodrama

This production is another of the series of John Wayne starring vehicles which are presenting him as a strong, action type of hero, yet subtly over the course of time are investing in him as material for higher budgeted productions.

Wayne, through characterizations in past pictures, has been presented in many types of sport from football to hockey, as well as newsreel cameraman and transcontinental truck driver. "Adventure's End" places him against a background of pearl diving and whaling, again giving him opportunity to display acting talent as well as expose his physique in passive and active combat. It is evident from special effects and background scenes that producer Trem Carr increased the budget usually allotted to the Wayne series.

The story opens with Duke Slade (Wayne) fleeing from the pearl beds after being chased by natives angered at violation of an ancient pearl diving taboo. He swims to a boat, and in port "Captain Drew," before his death, talks "Slade" into marrying "Janet," his daughter, to prevent First Mate "Husk" from wedding the girl.

EXHIBITOR-LABOR RECIPROCITY DEAL SEEN FOR BRITISH QUOTA DEMANDS

Reciprocal Support on Amendments Is Planned; Crown Favors Advisory Committee as CEA Urges Commission

From the London Bureau of Motion Picture Herald

With Eustace Stanley, president of the Board of Trade, believed open to persuasion on the idea of providing for a film commission in the new Films Bill, now in House of Commons committee after second hearing, the legislative committee of the Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association is expected to ask the cooperation of the labor groups opposing the present bill in pressing for the commission, in return for support of labor's demands for revision of the measure.

Already more than 25 amendments have been offered by opponents of the bill in its present form, and considerable revision is forecast. The major amendments thus far offered include: employment of not more than one foreign technician on each film, the inclusion of a fair wages clause, employee representation on the administrative council, establishment of a film commission and a committee to view films for determination of quota eligibility, deletion of clauses providing minimum costs of £7,500 ($37,500) and £22,500, and the exclusion for quota purposes of films made in the Dominion of Canada.

Observers familiar with Parliamentary opinion are of the belief that the amendments most likely of success are the fair wages clause, employee representation and the establishment of a film commission.

An agreement on quota policy is expected between the labor interests and the producers, who will meet jointly on the situation. Concessions from both sides already have been achieved in preliminary conversations. The joint policy, when determined, will be presented to the Board of Trade, and probably will be incorporated in the measure during committee consideration. The joint policy will cover a separate quota for exhibitors and distributors, a minimum cost clause for the exhibitor quota, provision that no film registered for more than three years shall be available for quota, reciprocity on the Empire quota, and an increased quota for distributors.

Labor is understood to be opposed to the reciprocity plans as concerning the United States especially, espoused by John Maxwell and the Ostrers. A demonstration by labor interests on the weekend was attended by technicians, directors, electricians, actors, writers and theatre employees, with members of Parliament and Lord Strabolgi present. The speakers agreed on making representations to the Government asking increased quota percentages, a fair wages clause, exclusion of alien interests and labor representation on the proposed advisory committee.

Mr. Stanley, who introduced the bill, said that the Government accepts the Moyne committee statement that increased protection is necessary for the British industry. With the adoption of the cost clause, he said, producers would be forced to place greater emphasis on the entertainment value of their productions, with the resultant elimination of "quickies." The quality test for quota determination, he said, is held to be too uncertain.

Mr. Stanley voiced the hope that reciprocity between the British and United States industries would encourage Americans to buy British films at a price sufficiently substantial to create a special incentive to promote their exhibition in the States.

Because of the Moyne suggestion regarding the films commission that "the powers of this commission were such that the House of Commons would not be prepared to part with them," the committee last week considered establishment of a body without quasi-legislative powers.

Tom Smith declared that adoption of the bill would reduce British films from 200 to 80 yearly, but this was denied by Capt. Euan Wallace, who, replying for the Government, added that it was undesirable that Commons give the control of such a rapidly changing industry solely to a commission. Concluding, he said that the Government favors an advisory commission.

LICENSE ON BUILDING, NOT ON THE PLANS

Three judges of the King's Bench Division in England, headed by the Lord Chief Justice, have handed down a decision which may have important effects upon new theatre enterprises and indirectly upon the campaign of the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association against overbuilding.

Briefly, the Court has ruled that licensing authorities are not concerned, legally, with plans of new theatres but with the licensing of buildings. If they pass plans as a measure of administrative convenience, said the Justice, they may be embarrassing the decision of others who later might want to take a different view. He described the procedure as "objectionable."

The general practice has been for justices to approve or reject plans before theatres are built, with the understanding that a license would follow. It now appears that they cannot be compelled to adjudicate on plans at all.

GOVERNMENT OPPOSES QUALITY TEST

the Minister of Labor's inquiry into hours of film employees, that hundreds of children work 60 hours a week, and some of them 15 hours a day.

Ernest Brown, for the Ministry, replied that details of labor conditions in 4,800 theatres were being obtained with the cooperation of the CEA and that it was impossible to form any definite opinion until the investigation is completed.

London Odeon Opens

London's high society and a considerable representation of the peerage attended the formal opening of the new 2,300-seat Odeon in Leicester Square. The receipts will go to charity. The opening attraction was "The Prisoner of Zenda."

The Duke and Duchess of Gloucester headed the royal party. Members of the peerage included the Duke and Duchess of Atholl, the Duchesses of Marlborough, Rutland, Buccleuch and Leinster, the Marchioness of Bedford, Countesses of Airlie, Ancaster, Chassilis, Bredalbane and Stair, Earles Leven, Chichester, Erne, Levan and Winterton, Viscountesses Furness, Gage, Curzon, Elibank, Harcourt, Swinton and Wakefield, and numerous others. Walter Eliot, Secretary of State for Scotland, was present, as well as a large party of British stars.

United Artists Bookings

United Artists has set up a booking record for the next few weeks which is said to be unparalleled in the history of local exhibition.

Following its runs at the New Odeon,"The Prisoner of Zenda" has been booked into G. B.'s West End theatres. It will also follow into the John Maxwell houses and then into Odeon units in January. United Artists sales executives say that this will be the quickest payoff ever known in England for a picture and they add it will shatter the six months' release plan. Ordinarily a picture is not released to subsequent runs until six months after a first run showing.

"A Star Is Born" had its ninth week at the Tivoli and will continue for three more weeks. After the Tivoli engagement, U.A. has booked the film for six weeks at the Marble Arch Pavilion.

"Dead End" is starting a six weeks' run at the Gaumont, ace Gaumont British house. "Stella Dallas" was in its third week at the Regal. "Knight Without Armour" was enjoying a seventh week at the London Pavilion. "Stand In" will succeed "A Star Is Born" at the Tivoli. The booking for "Stand In" calls for four weeks. When "A Star Is Born" leaves the Tivoli it will begin an immediate engagement at the Marble Arch.

Local U A offices have been in daily touch with Maurice Silverstone, in New York, by telephone. Mr. Silverstone has approved the bookings in this manner. He is not due back for some weeks, probably around Christmas.

Joynson Hicks has filed an action against the magazine Night and Day, on behalf of Shirley Temple and 20th Century-Fox, alleging libel.

Anna Neagle, Herbert Wilcox Guests at Chicago Luncheon

Anna Neagle and Herbert Wilcox were guests of honor at a press luncheon last Friday at the Blackstone Hotel, Chicago, and again on Saturday at a luncheon there for the British Consul. Later on Saturday the members of the Chicago Better Films Council were guests at a tea for Miss Neagle and Mr. Wilcox.

Arrangements for the luncheons and tea were made by John Joseph, of the RKO theatre offices in Chicago, in conjunction with the opening of "Victoria the Great" at the Palace theatre Friday. Both the star and producer made personal appearances at the evening show on opening night.

Motion Picture Associates, Inc., formerly known as Motion Picture Salesmen, will hold its 18th annual charity Thanksgiving "frolic" at Hotel Astor, New York, November 20th. Proceeds of the dinner and dance will be turned over to the organization's sick and benefit fund.

British Author Praises Producers

Charles de Grandcourt, author of the original screen story of "Victoria the Great" and technical advisor on its production, Saturday, paid a tribute to American producers, whom he characterized as "moments in the conscience of motion pictures." Mr. de Grandcourt spoke at a luncheon in his honor given by the National Educators Association in Town Hall, New York.

Introduced as "a famous British author" Mr. de Grandcourt said, "let me allay your fears by assuring you that since 1920 I have only spent three years outside the United States." After expressing his appreciation of the high cultural purpose of the motion picture body of the NEA Mr. de Grandcourt attacked those within the industy who failed to support "an enlightened standard of production aimed at the thinking and appreciative millions who were yet to be brought into theatres."

Mr. de Grandcourt paid tribute to Herbert Wilcox, producer and director, and Anna Neagle, star, of "Victoria," and to Miles Malleson, who collaborated with him in the writing of the screen play. Mr. de Grandcourt told the audience that he had spent two years in research and writing, in preparation for the picture, and that the first film with which he was associated in England, as production advisor, was "The 39 Steps."

Irving Dreeben last week joined the advertising sales department of United Artists in New York. Mr. Dreeben formerly was with Paramount and Twentieth Century-Fox.

IN THE BRITISH STUDIOS

Finish "Lady X"

London Films finished and cut "The Divorce of Lady X" in time for a print to be seen by Alexander Korda before he left for New York on his big United Artists deal. As the first of a number of all-color productions from Denham, the picture is regarded as one of the most important in London Films' program; it is also of interest as featuring Merle Oberon, whose reputation was made in costume pieces, in modern sophisticated comedy.

The story turns on a hotel encounter between a peer's pretty young granddaughter and a barrister who, for plausible reasons, gives her his bedroom and sleeps in the sitting room. Later, briefed to appear for another peer who wants to divorce, the lawyer believes his young visitor to be the woman in the case and himself to be under suspicion as the male partner. On this basis of misunderstanding is built up a comedy-romance which concludes in London's famous Divorce Court, with Morton Selten repeating the impersonation of an irascible judge which was such a feature of "Action for Slander."

Miss Oberon now has started on "Over the Moon," from a Robert Sherwood original. Then she leaves for Hollywood and a Sam Goldwyn part.

"Over the Moon" is being directed by William K. Howard at Denham. It will be yet another of London's all-color features. Rex Harrison, whose latest London picture was the successful "Storm in a Teacup," is opposite Miss Oberon, and a first British screen appearance is being made by Louis Borelli, from the Schiller theatre in Berlin and the London stage productions "Heart's Content" and "Return to Yesterday."

Thames by Night

To the London scenes made familiar to the American public by various recent productions from this side an original aspect will be given by episodes recently shot for Jessie Matthews Gaumont British vehicle, "Sailing Along."

Night river sequences were called for, and a tug carrying an exterior unit worked by floodlight for several hours on that stretch of the Thames which lies below the Strand, also getting shots of the Tower Bridge by means of highly sensitized stock.

G-B's Gainsborough unit has been working in a reproduction of Waterloo station at the Islington studio, for "Bank Holiday," which is being directed by Carol Reed, who once was private secretary to Edgar Wallace, later dialogue director at ATP's Ealing studio and then a freelance director. Reed had a look at Hollywood last year.

MONTY BANKS and GRACIE FIELDS in the candid camera's eye during the shooting of "He Was Her Man" at Denham, for Twentieth Century-Fox.

In the cutting room at Gainsborough is "Owd Bob," the sheep-dog story, and cut and awaiting presentation is "Oh, Mr. Porter," directed by Marcel Varnel.

Cutting at Pinewood is the Alfred Hitchcock "Young and Innocent," with Nova Pilbeam.

On Schedule

"He Was Her Man," first of 20th Century-Fox's Gracie Fields pictures, is well on schedule. Monty Banks, directing, finished the first week's work on the Denham floor with scenes aboard the good ship Melbourne, en route from Australia to England in the year 1885. The episode pictured is Gracie's discovery that her husband (played by Victor McLaglen) has bought with her money a half-share in a Johannesburg gold mine, which requires that man and wife leave the ship at Cape Town instead of proceeding home to England.

Brian Donlevy has played his first scenes, as "Yankee Gordon," in sets reproducing the rough streets of the early Johannesburg, and McLaglen has been filmed in a street-fighting episode, followed by jail scenes.

Coral Brown, Australian born, is now in the part of the adventuress originally assigned to Jane Carr, whose other engagements intervened.

The supporting cast of "He Was Her Man" is now practically complete. It includes Gus McNaughton, Tom Payne, Syd Crossley, Hal Gordon, Joe Nott, Charles Harrison, Robert Nainby, William Dewhurst, E. H. Williams, Victor Fairley, Charles Costello and Don McCorkindale, the South African heavyweight.

Sam Engel, producer of the Fields pictures, already has selected the second story. It will be an adaptation of Jane Pembridge's short story "Beloved Enemy," which turns on the rivalry between a music-hall star and a legitimate stage actress and covers the period 1912-1918. Miss Fields will play the variety celebrity.

Itemized

Sharon Lynne flew from Paris for the part of an American widow in the Warner-British "Thistledown."

George Smith is making "Paid in Error" at Walton-on-Thames for Columbia release.

The first of British National's product for ABP release, "Mr. Reeder Sees It Through," has gone on the floor at Welwyn.

"On Top of the Underworld" is the title of a series of short features, reconstructing famous crimes, to be made by Denis Cavanagh at the Ace Studio, Albany Street, London.

GB, New York, last week added two new members to its sales staff and transferred three others. L. T. Garlow was assigned to the Kansas City force and Dick Saeger to the Milwaukee office. Archie Holt was transferred from Portland to Seattle, W. W. Rucker from Dallas to Oklahoma City and Wilson Thedford was transferred from Oklahoma City to Dallas.

NO "B" FILM VIEWPOINT OF GOLDWYN DISPUTED

Wanger, Schulberg and Bren Quoted as Seeing Value and Necessity of Lesser Product

Although Samuel Goldwyn insists class "B" pictures should be abolished, many other independent producers, who also essay to make all "A" films, contend the lower bracket pictures are a necessity and that they will continue to be made, according to an article written by Edwin Schallert and published in the Los Angeles Times.

"If there weren't 'B' pictures there wouldn't be any standard of comparison," B. P. Schulberg said. "I don't want to make them myself, but they're needed."

Milton Bren, in charge of production for Hal Roach, is of a similar opinion. "We're definitely out to make 'A' class pictures," he declared, "but it's a great advantage when a studio has a 'B' program, because in that type of feature you can build up your players and give them their first opportunities before they have box office names."

Wanger Cites Costs

As for Walter Wanger, he believes: "The cost of pictures is soaring; there's a great virtue in being able to make films at a minimum once in a while."

Mr. Schallert concludes that Hollywood, therefore, "reluctantly admits" "B" pictures are a necessity, but, he adds, the admission is made "for reasons purely selfish and personal."

"Of course," he continues, "it's fundamentally a monetary issue. Hollywood probably will spend more than $170,000,000 on films this season, what with rising costs attributed to unionization of the studios, guild activities, and just generally soaring expenses."

All the larger studios, the article points out, are committed to the policy of "A's" and "B's," and once in a while may even turn out a few "Z's."

Comparative Costs

Mr. Schallert fixes the average cost of "A" films at about $500,000, pointing out though that they may rise considerably above this figure. He also explains that there are numerous "Super 'A' films" which can not be classified along with the others and which cost from $1,000,000 on up.

"Ratio of expenditures on 'A' and 'B' films," he continues, "is about four or five to one. In other words, of a total of $160,000,000, say, spent on the entire output, probably less than $30,000,000 will go for the 'B' film output. Naturally on the lower levels these pictures cost less than $50,000 apiece. The better grade might reach $200,000 to $250,000."

Sometimes, according to Mr. Schallert, it is difficult to differentiate between "A" and "B" pictures but in smaller communities there is a standard because there "an 'A' picture, socalled, may sell to an exhibitor for $50, and a 'B' on the same program will get only $5."

"Which," he continues, "is fair enough. For at least twice as many 'B' pictures are produced in a year in Hollywood, and at total costs one-fifth of what all the 'A's' cost. So the ratio simmers down to a ten to one or $50 to $5."

Universal and Actress Agree

Universal and Margaret Sullavan have settled their differences over the former contract of the actress, who said that her contract had run out while a broken arm caused her absence from studio duties. Under the settlement, Miss Sullavan will make one more picture for Universal.

George Hirliman Named Executive of Republic

George Hirliman has been named a vice-president of Republic Pictures and will aid in general studio executives duties in the way of lining up stories and talent, Herbert J. Yates said last week following his return to New York from a month's stay at the Republic studios in Hollywood.

Mr. Hirliman's duties will augment those of Moe Siegel, production head of the studio, and will not affect those of E. H. Goldstein, who is in charge of studio business affairs.

Mr. Hirliman last was associated with Condor Pictures, which was dissolved several months ago.

Film Committee Formed

J. E. Hobbs, Universal branch manager in Charlotte, N. C., has been named chairman of a committee of motion picture men to supervise production of a picture, to be used by the community chest in its forthcoming campaign. Other members are Ralph McCoy, Lester C. Sipes, B. Bishop, Merritt Davis and Roy Smart.

Levies Amusement Tax

Approved by the city council, the new amusement tax of Parkersburg, W. Va., became effective Monday. Money from the new ordinance will be used to pay salaries of firemen and policemen. The levy is three cents on the dollar, all places of amusement being assessed.

Bennett Quits U. S. Staff

Andrew W. Bennett, a special assistant to the Attorney General of the United States for several years, and, as such, in charge of the prosecution of the Government's anti-trust suit against the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, resigned Monday to reenter private law practice in Washington.

Sam Cocalis, independent circuit operator, is building two theatres, one in New Jersey and another in Hudson, N. Y. Mr. Cocalis also plans to take over an upstate New York house shortly.

OVERSEATING CONDITIONS DISTURB OWNERS IN DETROIT AND COLUMBUS

181,810 Seats in Detroit; Average Theatre Runs 21 Performances a Week, and City's Population Is 1,250,000

With the construction during the last year of theatres having 20,000 seats and the reopening of darkened houses with 11,000 seats, Detroit now has a seating capacity that is threatening public investments in theatre stocks, according to H. M. Richey, director of theatre activities for Co-Operative Theatres of Michigan, a buying combination, and George W. Trendle, president of the United Detroit Theatres Corporation.

Mr. Richey and Mr. Trendle based their warning on the results of a survey they made recently, showing there are 181,810 seats in Detroit motion picture theatres. They pointed out that the average theatre ran 21 complete performances a week and that the city's maximum number of potential customers was 1,250,000.

"To occupy all the seats available," the survey report announces, "each man, woman and child would have to attend at least three performances each week. That frequency of attendance is far above average."

The availability of three seats a week for every Detroit resident is a higher number per capita than in the major cities, the report said. Quoting from data provided by "one of the most successfully operated theatres in Detroit," the report explained that any theatre that has a patronage per week equal to five and a half times its seating capacity may, under normal conditions, earn 8 to 12 per cent on the investment.

Differences in Businesses

The difference between the theatre business and other businesses, was pointed out with the comment:

"The delivery of theatre merchandise is different from that in any other market. Some goods not sold today can be sold tomorrow; but a theatre seat, vacant for one show, is lost forever as a sales possibility."

As a guide to prospective investors, Mr. Richey and Mr. Trendle urge investigation of seven questions:

"1. Is it possible to get a suitable and reasonably early showing?

"2. Who is going to lease the theatre? What is his background?

"3. What will hapen to the theatre if the lessee can not go through with the lease?

"4. What is the competition?

"5. Are you being promised profits that a careful survey of the theatre business show have not been made generally by even successful operators?

"6. What does your banker think about it?"

Blame Promoters

The blame for the overseating condition of Detroit was placed by Mr. Richey and Mr. Trendle on the shoulders of ambitious promoters.

"As a general rule," they said, "theatre building is not inspired within the industry. It is a well known fact that every new theatre in Detroit reduced the attendance at the other theatres to take care of the newcomer. Real estate promoters, intent on the commission or block of stock they get for starting a new theatre enterprise, force unwanted theatres into situations where such theatres are not only not needed, but actually lessen the chances of theatres already there to operate at a profit.

"Once started, the general practice is that an established theatre operator, fearing the competition of a new theatre, will take the lease on it to protect himself. It looks good for the promoter, but the day of reckoning for the stockholders or bondholders comes when the theatre is forced to carry its own overhead, meet intensive competition for suitable pictures, and apply to the sources of film supply for drastic reductions in the cost of pictures or give up the lease.

"No one else will take it at the capitalized value that looked so reasonable to the people who put their money into the venture. The bonds go down, the stock becomes worthless, and after it has changed hands several times, with successive investment or management groups 'washed out,' some one comes along, takes it for a song, operating it at a fraction of what the original overhead was, and another group of investors inexperienced in the motion picture theatre business have found that all the millions they were promised in the theatre business have gone. In the meantime, the promoter usually disposes of his block of stock at a discount and starts looking for more money to promote another theatre."

Neighborhood Theatre Costs

The cost of operating a neighborhood theatre was set by the report at more than $1,250 a week. With the average admission prices in Detroit houses, 20 cents plus, a theatre must play to 6,250 persons to meet overhead expenses, the report continued.

According to the survey, six-tenths of the theatre business in Detroit is done from 2 p. m. Saturday to 9:35 p. m. Sunday.

The report also called attention to the fact that patrons attending theatres at the peak hour, which has been fixed at 7 P. M. and lasts until 9:35 P. M., often find difficulty obtaining a seat but that they fail to recognize the fact that they are attending only one of the average 21 shows per week necessarily run by the average motion picture theatre. There are left more than 3,000,000 seats at other than the peak hours, the report estimated.

Other Attractions

The breakdown of figures which brought the estimate that there are 1,250,000 potential customers in the Detroit area was explained by Mr. Richey and Mr. Trendle as follows:

"A breakdown of the census of Wayne County shows that 9 per cent of the population of approximately 1,900,000 are under five years of age; 18 per cent from five to 14; 17 per cent from 14 to 24; 21 per cent from 24 to 34; 17 per cent from 34 to 44; 15 per cent from 44 to 64, and 3 per cent over 64.

"The census also shows that there are in Detroit 548,000 employed males; 140,000 females employed; 414,000 children in school. It is apparent, in figuring the possible attendance at theatres, that the 9 per cent under five and the majority of the 3 per cent over 64, will not be attendants at theatres. Add to this the number of unemployed plus those confined in institutions, hospitals, or the physically incapacitated; take out a majority of the time of those normally out of the city; those who live out of the city but work in Detroit; take those who in a normal week attend the other functions of the city, such as boxing, hockey, football and civic entertainments; take out the bridge clubs and the home parties; those who work nights and the estimated 1,700,000 potential customers is reduced by a substantial amount."

Each Resident of Columbus and Detroit Would Have to Attend Theatre Three Times a Week to Fill Seats

by EDWIN MAYER
in Columbus

"An inflated bubble can stand only a certain amount of pressure; something is bound to explode sooner or later."

With this analogy, an exhibitor described the overseating condition in Columbus, Ohio, where 47 theatres have a total seating capacity of 40,500, whereas the constant population of the city is 290,000.

A breakdown of the figures showed that precisely the same condition existed in Columbus as in Detroit (see column 1). With each theatre running an average of 21 performances a week, every person in Columbus would have to attend a theatre three times a week if all the houses were to play to capacity audiences for all performances.

The Columbus statistics took into account none of the recognized factors that govern attendance at theatres, such as old age, sickness, counter attractions, and the like, but these are partially offset by a transient population of approximately 10,000 students who foregather in Columbus from all sections of the state to attend Ohio State University.

Five First-Runs Close Together

Columbus' 47 theatres include five first runs, all within a square and a half of one other in the heart of the downtown business section, and 42 second and subsequent-run houses that have 29,700 of the total of 40,500 seats.

The overseating condition is further emphasized in a comparison with the seating capacities in Toledo and Cincinnati, which is the second largest city in Ohio. In Toledo, which has the same population as Columbus, there are 27 theatres with a combined seating capacity of 27,700. In Cincinnati, with a population of 750,000, there are 62 houses with a total seating capacity of 46,250. Comparatively, then, Columbus, with 460,000 less population than Cincinnati, has within 5,750 as many seats.

See Closings Necessary

The natural division of business due to the overseated condition in Columbus is becoming a matter of concern to both first and subsequent-run exhibitors, and the consensus is that some of the neighborhood and suburban houses sooner or later will be compelled to close, because of insufficient business, even including the territorial draw, to support the number of theatres now in operation.

Admission prices are at an exceptionally low level in some instances. The first run scales are 25 and 40 cents while the range at the second subsequent runs is from 10 to 25 cents, with double feature predominating in virtually all cases.

The student body at the university, although contributing to the sum total of attendance at both first and subsequent run houses, cannot be relied upon for steady patronage due to the numerous other activities both scholastic and outside.

134 FILMS SELECTED FOR 'BOOK WEEK' TIEUP

Titles Listed for Exhibitors' Promotion with Libraries and Stores November 14 to 20

"National Book Week," sponsored each fall by the National Association of Book Publishers, again offers exhibitors specific opportunities for tying-in with libraries, book counters and book stores in their localities in exploitation motion pictures based on or related to recent film releases.

Recognizing that the library and other public sources of reading material frequently aid exhibitors in publicizing pictures, the National Board of Review this week compiled for such usage a list of some 134 films which may be tied in during "National Book Week," from November 14th to 20th.

The list, which follows, covers films selected by the Board's Review Committees from October, 1936, to November, 1937; the order of arrangement is: picture title, source title of book, if different from film release title, names of authors and distributors. The symbols preceding the titles indicate audience classifications: f—for the family audience, 12 years up: m—for the mature audience, 18 years up; j—for the juvenile audience under 12 years; *—especially interesting or well done.

Midland Deal Arranged

Herbert M. Woolf and M. B. Shanberg of Kansas City, while in New York last week, arranged to have Midland Investment Company, the owners, take over the Midland theatre and office building property in Kansas City, since the lease to Loew's made 10 years ago had expired. The deal included a temporary arrangement for future operation of the theatre by Loew's.

THEATRE RECEIPTS

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

BOXOFFICE BONER

Some time back, the industry did a commendable job of cooling down fan magazine writers who strayed off the reservation. Currently, the headmen are concerned with a similar endeavor directed against radio chatterers. When that task is cleaned up, this department recommends a bit of squelching pointed at theatremen who employ such feeble terms as "lousy" to advertise pictures they happen not to approve. The latest offender, one Worth Stewart, theatre manager in Dunn, N. C., is credited by Motion Picture Daily with calling attention to a recent program by marquee copy reading: "Two lousy features and a comedy."

This business of apology to patrons for supposed shortcomings in motion picture entertainment is bad enough. But the monotonous device of publicly labeling an attraction as a stinkeroo indicates amazing shortsightedness in operation and alarming disregard for the welfare of the business.

If whatever damage that followed Mr. Stewart's unique advertising concept was confined to his own bank balance, there would be little need here of finger-pointing. But such unwarranted attack tends to undermine confidence in the motion picture as a whole, tarnishes the product of the company or companies so unwillingly spotlighted and, more directly, aims to kick holes in the grosses of every theatre in that sector.

Contracts between exhibitor and distributor, of course, contain no clause that prohibits the theatreman from hitting below the belt in his advertising. But it certainly is in line to call for some kind of protection against such uncontrollable broadsides that place within the line of fire a lot of innocent bystanders.

It might be that the North Carolina theatreman was misled by the publicity given the gag (and that's about the best can be said for it) when first used in Boston for the attention of a highly sophisticated Back Bay audience. But even if that were offered as an excuse, and we can't see why it should, Mr. Stewart should realize that Dunn isn't Boston.

Let's call a halt to this kind of popping-off in public. There is no reason to regard it as less damaging to the boxoffice than any other menace to the industry, in or out of it.

Add arguments in favor of animation in display:

The Fiftieth Street crowds beneath our office seem to pay little attention to the store windows along the way. But they come to a full stop and gaze for hours at the skaters going round in the Rockefeller Center skating rink.

FATTER GROSSES CAN BE HAD

In the Round Table picture section of this issue will be found a shot of Dick Powell studying a Wilmington, Del., daily. The stunt is nothing new. Neither is the occasion—a "Let's go to the Movies" campaign to bow in the local Greater Show Season. But how it was put over rates comment, since the putting over involved cooperation of all local theatremen who presented a united front for mutual benefit.

According to "Doug" George, Warner Philadelphia zone publicist, the same promotion was applied in Reading, Pa., and that the drive was successful in both spots is indicated in the shoulder-to-shoulder lineup presented by such talented theatremen as Warnerites Dwight Van Meter and Lew Black, Loewman "Bob" Suits and Wilmer & Vincent's Paul Glase. So gratifying were the results, reports George, that there is planning ahead for next year when a bigger-'n'-better drive is being aimed for to cover additional communities in that sector.

True, where competition between managers is keenest, business is apt to be healthier. But true also is that invaluable prestige and fatter grosses are to be had in the execution of community theatre promotions which merit the honest support of all showmen concerned.

DOES THE BEST HE KNOWS HOW

Transferred to a spot, some time back, where he does not have the opportunity or the latitude to do his usual bang-up job, a member writes he is dissatisfied with results and is seeking another spot where he can cut loose.

No theatreman is to be penalized nor should he "cook himself" unduly for not being able to overcome situations that prevent the execution of ideas he is thirsting to put over. Lack of cooperation from newspapers, handicaps of city ordinances and regulations, opposition of important local groups, among other deterrents, are to be counted with the obstacles in the path of the man who is honin' to go. Your spirited manager fights as hard as he knows how to soften the tough spots. No more can be expected.

QUICK REPORTS FROM THE FIELD

Rifle Range

Unusual lobby display was conceived and executed by Al Hayne, Belmont Theatre, Belmont, Cal., to plug his new season's hits in the form of a rifle range. Targets with small holes in center were round cardboard discs each carrying title of a forthcoming attraction. Patrons supplied with "rubber-band" guns promoted from local inventor, were invited to try their marksmanship and to those shooting a rubber band through a bull's eye, guest tickets were awarded. Haynie reports that 90 per cent of the incoming patrons pause to take a shot and consequently cannot help but notice the titles on coming product.

Foyer Display

Jim Runte, Capitol, Glendale, Cal., to exploit "Wife, Doctor and Nurse," promoted use of latest type electric range, operating table, doctor's kit with sterilizer and cabinet and installed them in his lobby. Articles represented each title—member of the cast and their profession—the stove for the "wife," operating table for "doctor" and sterilizer for "nurse." To link the idea with the picture, small standees spelling out title were placed nearby, one on each article represented.

Bridal Party

For "Bride Wore Red" Ralph Bartlett, Illinois Theatre, Jacksonville, Ill., worked out a bride's reception party which was held at leading hotel. Management furnished and decorated a special bride's table and acted as host to all brides with a dinner evening before opening of picture. Theatre plugged the stunt in lobby and on screen, hotel exploiting it in lobby, dining room, etc.

Fan Fare

An ingenious stunt used by Loew's Cleveland publicist, Milt Harris, is small heart-shaped cardboard fans imprinted with title, playdates and cut of stars in current picture. These fans are distributed to manicurists in beauty parlors to use in drying polish on nails, after which they are presented to patrons as souvenir. Manicurists are also instructed by beauty salon managers to discuss the picture as part of their conversation.

NOVEMBER DEADLINE IS DECEMBER SEVENTH

Deadline for the Quigley November Award entries has been set for midnight of Tuesday, December 7th. Campaigns, to receive consideration, must arrive not later than that time. Also to be stressed is that entries, to be eligible for the November Awards, must be on single pictures played during that month.

Teaser Ads

Series of one-inch teaser ads was used for "Ever Since Eve" by Breck Fagin, Grand Theatre, Grand Island, Neb., with witty catchlines such as "Saps have been leading with their chins wherever a girl is concerned ever since Eve," etc. And for "Easy Living" Breck advertised in the personal column for the young lady who was trying to imitate Jean Arthur at one of the leading hotels to go to the theatre instead and see the star in the picture. Another personal read "Wanted: 10 tons of clover, a bed of roses, rose-colored glasses and anything else that provdes easy living, to be delivered to Jean Arthur and Edward Arnold at the," etc.

Herald Ad

To bring his fall picture lineup to the attention of his patrons, L. M. Three, Texas Theatre, Lufkin, Tex., rearranged a United Artists eight-page ad in the MOTION PICTURE HERALD and ran full page announcement in the Lufkin Daily News heralding a "$26,000,000 picture schedule," centering around 15 U. A. releases.

Using the catchline "We know it's not polite to boast, we know it's rude to say 'we told you so,'" Manager Three emphasized his promise of seven hits in a row was being fulfilled.

Short Plug

To sell Universal's short "Going Places," new series telling how Irish linen is grown, gathered and manufactured, Irwin Waite, Melba Theatre, Dallas, Tex., promoted leading department store for prominent window. Display was devoted to all types of linen merchandise and tied in with the theatre by special card and blowup stills from the film. In addition, cards were placed on all linen counters plugging the date and store's ads called attention to the engagement.

24 Hour Queen

An ingenious stunt for "It's All Yours" was pulled by Vic Meyer, RKO Orpheum, New Orleans, through cooperation of leading department store. Complete fall costume was displayed in store's window with card advising that it would be given to the girl that could fit into the complete ensemble, shoes included. Store and theatre advertised the stunt and five men, including radio station and hotel manager, Columbia press agent, theatre publicist and disinterested party acted as judges. All applicants submitted measurements through a card system, 40 of them were chosen by elimination and judges chose one of the girls whom they considered the best looking.

Winner was aclaimed queen for a day with suite at leading hotel, private car with chauffeur placed at her disposal, and was guest of honor at picture opening night. Entering theatre under battery of klieg lights, girl was escorted to private box, where she was presented with award. Photos and stories were run in local dailies.

Bus Band

Street bally for "Broadway Melody" was bannered bus promoted by Francis Deering, Loew's, Houston, Texas with eight-piece band riding throughout city playing hit tunes from picture. Francis reports the bally stopping traffic as it progressed through business section.

Miniature Theatre

At the county fair which took place in Glendive, Mont. recently, Bill Redmond, Rose-Uptown Theatre erected a miniature theatre in exact proportion to his own house. Shorts and cartoons were shown and trailers plugged coming attractions. Redmond reports that his mailing list was considerably increased with names of those attending the show.

Book Matinee

Annual event in Henryetta, Okla., is the "school book" matinee sponsored by Manager T. H. Wilson, at the Morgan Theatre, with books turned over to the school's superintendent for distribution to underprivileged children. One school book in usable condition serves as admission to the matinee and Wilson reports some 2,000 volumes brought in recently at two of these gatherings.

"SELL IDEA OF REGULAR ATTENDANCE"

—DICK WRIGHT, District Manager, Warner Ohio Theatres

FINDS INSTITUTIONAL SELLING PROFITABLE

DEAR MIKE:

Considering that motion pictures are the cheapest form of entertainment and that the movie theatre today has reached the high standard that it has, it seems only logical that theatre managers should make an enthusiastic drive for additional new patronage . . . through an intensive institutional campaign on the basis of "Attend the Movies Regularly." This basic idea should be included in every picture campaign, supplementing of course your regular selling on particular attractions.

"Attend the Movies Regularly" should be the slogan upon the lips of every manager and every individual in his organization . . . and to sell the idea of regular attendance in order to make his community as "movie conscious" as possible he should stress this thought continually, utilizing every publicity channel at his command. The movie theatre, today, in dispensing recreation, contributes an important part of life and need in every community. Endeavor to impress your townspeople that their social plans are incomplete without a visit to your theatre at least once a week. In your campaign of building regular attendance your particular interest is, of course, to establish your theatre in the consciousness of prospective patrons.

Sells His Theatre

Many times the favorable impression a patron has of a theatre will determine his habitual attendance to that theatre when there is not a great deal of difference in attractions playing at opposition houses in the same community. Then too, there is always the possibility of your habitual patrons recommending and bringing new patrons to your theatre. So if you have sold your theatre and have built a good institutional foundation, you will find that your average picture will have a much better chance of bringing in a satisfactory gross. This response to your theatre as an institution rather than to the product you are playing is not a matter of over night effort but is a gradual development and the gratifying result of an intensified selling campaign which is designed to accomplish that for you.

Local business men realize the vast importance of the movie theatre in their community. It is an asset to them. It livens up dead sections of a community. And most important—it brings people into their neighborhood who might otherwise go elsewhere to spend their money. Consistent theatre attendance brings people to the community regularly. Merchants are aware of this fact and in most cases will work with the theatre to stimulate regular attendance.

The wide-awake manager takes the initiative in suggesting to groups of business men ways and means of working with them along sales promotional lines and assisting and pointing out profitable tie-ups. Thus he institutionalizes by being friendly with his neighboring merchants. The results obtained depend upon the degree of enthusiasm and practicability of the tie-up.

In the Round Table editorial page, October 16th issue your Chairman set down an analysis on institutional advertising which presented both sides of the question and invited opinions from readers on the subject. The value of this form of advertising and the place it should occupy in general theatre advertising is discussed on this page by representative Round Tablers. What they say is interesting, and others who have something to say on the subject are invited to say it.

Determine today what plans you can adopt to increase your regular patronage. Build your campaign on a "regular attendance" foundation. Every theatre manager will have his own particular application in setting up this principle, but every theatre needs it!—DICK WRIGHT, District Manager, Warner Bros. Theatres in Ohio.

SAYS THEATRE MUST BACK UP MANAGER

DEAR MIKE:

Institutional advertising of a theatre will never take the place, nor carry the weight that the advertising and exploitation of the pictures and stage attractions carry; because it is the entertainment offered that attracts the patron and because today finds the majority of theatres offering upholstered seats, good projection, and pleasing lounges and auditoriums, and a goodly majority have a modern cooling and heating plant that gives body comfort the year round. People take this for granted and if a theatre in competition with another theatre, both playing equally rated pictures—the theatre having the more comfortable accommodations will get the majority of the business, regardless of what institutional advertising the theatre without the accommodations uses.

Sincere Advertising

Institutional advertising must be sincere—the theatre manager must have everything he advertises and not deceive the public in any way. Naturally, such advertising is excellent, especially when the manager has a theatre that he has full confidence in and which will stand back of all the advertising he can give it. A manager should boost his particular theatre in every way and usually is constantly plugging its good points, if he has any pride in his work. In my present position we constantly use the catch-line "The Finest Theatre In Central Missouri" and in the summer stress the modern Carrier Air Conditioning Equipment and the ease of relaxation in the modern, comfortable seats which is one of our most used selling points during the summer season.

In other words, institutional advertising, in my opinion, comes second to the advertising of pictures and stage attractions; but is highly essential and should be used extensively. But such advertising should be honest; the particular theatre should be able to back up all statements made. An outstanding modern theatre naturally would use it more extensively than a theatre in need of remodeling and with fair-to-poor accommodations.

A theatre-manager can build his business gradually by careful planning to the comfort of the patrons and by securing the good will of the community he caters to by working out service slants that please. For instance, package checking, courtesy and good conduct of the staff meeting the patrons, and the manager mixing and learning to know his regular patrons. All these really are a form of institutional advertising, and a form that should be applied to every theatre regardless of its appointments.

Such are my views of institutional advertising as applied to the theatre.—R. M. THOMASON, MGR., Uptown Theatre, Sedalia, Mo.

STRESSES IMPORTANCE OF PATRON-CONTACTS

DEAR MIKE:

In reading your most interesting article "What Price Institutional Advertising," having sold for ten years before getting into the theatre business, I find the personnel of the theatre can help publicise our coming attractions. We have always made it a point to have the staff thoroughly familiar with outstanding productions. They in turn when mixing with their friends tip them off regarding the merits of outstanding coming attractions that they should see. Whereever we mix with people the point of shows arise and we immediately go to work absorbing criticism, and straightening out certain impressions to the best of our knowledge.

We have always made it a point to contact our patrons when leaving the show to find their reaction, and to tip them off on a coming picture that you know they will enjoy. This of course is only one phase of selling, because it is impossible for the manager and the staff to spread the good news on pictures to the whole community without the aid of newspapers, cards and photos. These of course are better taken care of by an enthusiastic theatre manager than the job holders, and naturally have their compensation at the box-office.—H. RANKIN, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ont., Canada.

Newspaper Contest Sells "Great Garrick"

Through tieup with local paper, Frank Boucher, Strand Theatre, Altoona, Pa., for his date on "The Great Garrick," offered cash prizes daily for those submitting best ten-word expressions of their opinions on the picture. Ballot box was stationed in lobby and all patrons were presented with blanks when entering theatre. Paper ran answers together with names of winners each day during run.

When you book an expensive, nationally famous feature, you are planning to cash-in on people's expectations. You are planning to impress them — not to disappoint them.

You can't afford to be penny wise with big features, and especially with color.

The only way to deliver the goods is the same way 5000 theaters are now doing it — with high intensity projection.

Almost any house can now afford modern projection. New SIMPLIFIED HIGH INTENSITY lamps and "Suprex" Carbons make it possible to double or triple screen brightness at so little more cost that one extra admission per show will cover it.

Round Table In Pictures

Colorful setpiece in the lobby display for his date on "Double Wedding" was the giant pallet shown directly above and used by Manager Roscoe Drissel at Loew's, Norfolk, Va., with art work credited to Joe Halliman. Sizeable paint daubs made up backgrounds for action stills in the picture.

Omaha, Neb., theatre personnel goes varsity when usher staff of the Omaha Theatre (above, left) is togged out in regulation uniforms to advertise the date on "Life Begins at College." Campaign to make local patrons Ritz Brothers as well as football conscious was the work of Manager Eddie Forester and publicity chief Ted Emerson.

Diamond-shaped backgrounds to emphasize the atmosphere of the picture were planted prominently in the front display by Manager Irwin Waite to publicize "King Solomon's Mines" at the Melba, Dallas. Above the title strip spreading across width of front was placed giant-size cutouts of the five leads in the picture, with names of stars and ad copy bordering both sides of the elaborate display.

Main thoroughfare of Guayaquil, Ecuador, was used for an unusual exploitation by Eduardo Rivas Ors, Olmedo Theatre, for "Romeo and Juliet." Life-size cutout of Leslie Howard was attached to street corner with cutout of Norma Shearer planted in especially constructed balcony which also carried copy on the picture. The display, planted well in advance, measured approximately 10 feet in height.

Prominent in the publicity planted in favor of the city-wide drive put on by all theatremen in Wilmington, Del., to celebrate the new season was a shot of Dick Powell reading the special ten-page Greater Show Season newspaper section. Copies of the issue were rushed to the Warner Studio where the star was posed as illustrated. Campaign, also duplicated in Reading, Pa., was put on by "Doug" George with the cooperation of Warner Zone Manager A. J. Vanni and the added help of Warner Managers Dwight Van Meter and Lew Black, Loewman's "Bob" Suits and Wilmer & Vincent's Paul Glase, among others.

For "They Won't Forget" at the Circle, Philadelphia, Manager C. L. Yearsley arranged a Jury Box in lobby consisting of 12 chairs, each marked with card bearing name of local prominent. Posters explained that the jury of 12 would review picture opening night and their individual letters on the subject displayed in lobby during the run.

Luxury display in main window of Stockholm's smartest jewelry establishment proved one of the highlights in the exploitation of "Easy Living" for the engagement at the China Theatre in the Swedish capital. Promoted by Manager Alfred Bjorck, giant jewel case was constructed and cutout of Jean Arthur affixed to the satin background of the cover. Theatre card was planted alongside with tiein copy. Bracelets similar to that worn by the star in the picture were used to round out the display.

Civic leaders and other prominents took part in the celebration arranged by Manager Adolpho Caruso for the reopening of the Forest Hills Theatre, Forest Hills, L. I., further emphasized by participation of fife and drum corps and other uniformed local units. Automobile parade that covered the entire sector wound up in front of the remodeled theatre where Borough President Harvey cut the official ribbon in the lobby to signal the reopening.

SAYS LONG FEATURES HANDICAP EXHIBITORS

Dear Mike:

It is a well known fact that the American public is more susceptible to fads than any other people on the face of this earth. Miniature golf swept the country, yo-yo's took us by storm, then we thought that bicycling was the thing to do and for the past year the automobile trailer has spread like wildfire. In the course of the rapid development of the motion picture industry itself has had many innovations that might be termed as "fads." Whether it was amateur night, bingo, or what have you, there was always a demand for it, and that was the reason that the exhibitor allowed it. Something has happened at the production end of the business that has the exhibitor handcuffed. That is none other than "long features."

I don't know who started the "fad" for long features, but one thing is certain, the fad has spread with each producer trying to out-do the other. It has come to pass where an "A" production is considered a failure unless it is at least 90 minutes in length, and in order to get consideration as an outstanding production it must be anywhere from 100 to 180 minutes.

The producers surely haven't given this as much thought as it requires, for one thing is certain, that the exhibitors have suffered, and the public that pays their good money to see the shows hasn't been given a fair deal. A good example can be found in our situation, where we operate on a single feature policy and have trained the patronage on 1-3-5-7 and 9 o'clock for the starting time of a complete show. With any feature over 100 minutes it is impossible to do this and still give them a well balanced program. No matter how much you might advertise the starting time it is a break from routine and the patrons are coming in at the middle of the feature. Our ailment is minor in comparison to the suffering that houses with double feature policies have to undergo. With one long feature a complete show runs three hours or better. The disadvantages are many but of outstanding importance are that the patrons will suffer from "squirmitis" no matter how interesting or diversified the program may be and the other is that a long program gives such a poor turnover at the peak hours that the gross receipts also suffer.

The odds are all in favor of shorter features, but still no attempt has been made toward adjustment. It is a sad state of affairs that without a doubt is hurting the industry; therefore if the boys in Hollywood are playing a game let's find a way of informing them that we, as exhibitors, think that the novelty has worn off, and that the game is over; they also should be informed that the public that pays its good hard-earned money is tired of the game. In other words, the "fad" is over and we are ready to come back to normal. From now until some adjustment is made I will be wondering where this long feature craze will end.

—PETER PANAGOS, Publicity Director, Indiana and Lyric Theatres, Marion, Ind.

Serialization Sells "Stella" for Schlaifer

Six day serialization in the San Francisco News ushered in publicist Charlie Schlaifer's "Stella Dallas" campaign at the United Artists Theatre, with 2,000 half sheet cards at all newsstands and the paper's ten trucks bannered with title, playdates and plug for the serialization. Other newspaper publicity included accounts of Anne Shirley's recent marriage was tied into the picture.

Various merchants came through with attractive window displays in which scene stills were planted and as part of his teaser campaign, Schlaifer dropped 100,000 stickers about town on which title was printed.

ONLY A SHORT TIME TO THANKSGIVING

Since the members are well acquainted with details of various Thanksgiving Day tieups, this is set down merely as a reminder that the canned goods matinee and other similar prestige builders are appropriate for the occasion. Civic organizations, newspapers and leading citizens are always willing to cooperate.

Special matinees are usually held Saturday ahead, with publicity planted well in advance. Contributions may be displayed in front of theatre for newspaper photos and stories, goods being later distributed so that all denominations are represented.

Mayor Throws Switch Opening New Season

Mayor George C. Marsted threw the switch in Schine's State Theatre, Cortland, N. Y., to usher in Morris Seymour's Greater Movie Season. Local dailies carried stories and cut, as did all weekly papers in the county. Wires were received from Luise Rainer and Paul Muni congratulating Morris on his choice of "Good Earth" for the opening vehicle of his season. Blowups were made and used for lobby display and reader placed in paper.

Another highlight of Seymour's campaign was a 32-page booklet all art work and printed offset which was distributed locally, 15 merchants' ads included in the booklet completely defrayed cost and did an excellent job of selling his theatre and shows.

Atmospheric Front Plugs "Paradise"

J. Wallerstein, manager of the Hohman Theatre, Hammond, Indiana, with his assistant, William Albach, exploited "Paradise Isle" by transforming front into atmospheric setting. Tropical fish were painted on box office windows and front doors, large marquee setups were displayed week in advance and aquarium filled with tropical aquatic life. Hawaiian ukes, guitars and tiples were placed in a local music store window in return for a trailer plugging "Learn to Play Hawiian Music." Local music instructor gave short Hawaiian musical interludes in front of the theatre and in window of music shop, and heralds were distributed throughout business sections by girls wearing leis.

ANSWER TO QUESTION NO. 92

Bluebook School Question No. 92 was: (A) Explain the reasons for resistance in an electric arc and various causes of its variation. (B) Explain how work performed by electric power is calculated. (C) What is the maximum permissible temperature of a resistance wire and how may it be roughly approximated without actual measurement?

The following made acceptable answers: S. Evans and C. Rau; G. E. Edwards; C. Oldham; L. Cimikoski; J. R. Prater; O. H. Schmidt; W. Limmroth; W. H. Edmonds; J. A. Zachritz; H. B. Smith; M. and J. Devoy; L. F. Hayes; D. M. Stinson; J. J. Petersen; G. L. Goss; P. and L. Felt; C. Caldwell; W. L. Brandon; B. and M. Walker; W. V. Henderson; L. M. Roberts; H. Bunker; F. H., S. and P. Dalbey; C. H. Lowrie; H. T. Billings; T. W. Redhouse; F. B. Shilshome; M. D. McGuire; D. and W. Porter; S. L. Maxwell; H. T. Randolph; R. and K. Wells; H. Lathrope and M. Dey; B. B. Hornstein and R. R. Jacobs; L. A. Beachwood and M. F. Robinson; G. Maybe; F. B. Brandenburg; W. C. Bant; W. Winkler and R. R. Robbins; O. L. Goldstein and M. Samuels; R. Davis and F. M. Brown; D. Coates; B. L. Kent; K. J. Robinson and R. E. Bullard; E. F. and M. Wentworth; D. D. Strobey; R. and K. Wells; F. E. Dorp and F. E. Ames; J. Morton; L. F. and B. Brown; A. H. Bradley; A. C. Greene; L. Jones and S. H. Billings; F. L. and L. Savlor; A. W. Baxter; R. S. Welch; G. A. Simmons and K. L. Brant; R. H. Carter; P. S. Baker; B. L. Bunt and W. R. Davis; D. A. Shea and H. T. Plum; P. F. Maxwell and S. U. Lamont; H. T. Tood and L. E. Dodson; E. Exline; R. M. Schnider; H. H. Grant; N. S. Reid and H. T. Watkins; J. R. Davidson and W. R. Matthews; S. Leonard and G. T. Jones; D. M. Stinson; D. Dennis.

J. R. Prater offers the following excellent explanation of section (A): "The resistance of an electric arc is due to the relatively poor conductivity of the gases formed by volatilization of carbon particles which serve the current as a path of travel between negative and positive carbon tips. That the resistance offered is relatively high for the distance traveled may be demonstrated by the following calculation:

"Assuming a 20-ampere low intensity arc operated by a 70 volt d.c. generator. For such an arc the proper setup is an arc gap of approximately 1/16 inch; arc voltage about 55. Applying Ohm's law it is evident the resistance offered should be 55 ÷ by 20 = 2.75 ohms. The ballast resistance must therefore be 15 ÷ 20 = 0.75 of an ohm. It thus is shown that the arc gap resistance is more than 3.5 times that of the ballast (rheostat) resistance. Although the arc resistance may not be exactly proportional to length of the arc gap, it nevertheless is nearly so. Any alteration in its length would very materially alter the resistance offered by it.

"Other factors operate to alter arc resistance. The gases which offer the path of conductivity being very hot, tend to rise as they leave their source, which chiefly is the positive crater. In doing so they induce an upward air movement. It then follows that if there be strong or uneven drafts of air in the lamphouse, the path of these rising gases will be more or less altered, hence the conductivity between negative and positive carbon tips will not be constant because at different times there will be greater or less gas density between them.

"Again, if the composition of the carbon varies, or if the carbon contains impurities, the amount or nature (or both) of the gases produced will vary, which in the nature of things would or might alter the conductivity offered by them or, in other words, the resistance they would offer to current flow. Moisture in the carbons will cause sputtering caused by tiny explosions of steam at the crater face. These cause serious disturbances of the gases, hence tend to alter the resistance offered."

May I suggest, gentlemen, that this answer offers indisputable evidence that the one who submitted it has really studied the projector, source of light. He has comprehensive understanding of it, hence is in position to secure the best possible results from it, and to secure them with maximum economy of operation. Moreover, it advises us he is "on the job," for it is extremely unlikely any man would thus study and understand unless he had real interest in his work and very genuine pride in the results produced. May I direct attention to the fact that continued active membership in the Bluebook School is proof of progressiveness and a desire to advance in ability to give satisfactory service. True, there may be no immediate visible advantage to Bluebook School students, but by all rules of common sense advantage must and will come in due time.

(B) C. Oldham says: "In considering power in relation to the amount of work performed, we must take into consideration not only the amount of work done, but the time consumed in its doing. Voltage is regarded as the force or pressure that operates through the medium of current flow against the resistance of the electrical conductors and the mechanical medium by which the work is performed.

"The amount of work then is calculated by simple process of multiplying voltage by the number of amperes flowing, which result gives the number of watts used and since 746 watts equals one horsepower, we thus have the work performed expressed in that well understood unit."

(C) O. H. Schmidt says: "The maximum permissible operating temperature of resistance wire is 900 degrees Fahrenheit: This temperature is that which will make the conductor appear dull red in a dark room."

One correspondent, after a rather long and very complete answer to this section, wrote: "Phew! I'm glad this answer is compiled. Making it up reminds me of a bad print. One may work on it for hours, yet its projection consumes only a few moments of time. You see, Mr. Richardson, we do not have occasion to use this sort of thing every day, and believe you me it required plenty of study to prepare an intelligent answer."

I honor this good friend for having taken the trouble to dig out the facts required for so complete an answer. It must be remembered that this "School," save for an occasional question such as will be found in section (A) of the one accompanying answer No. 93, is a "Bluebook School," and all answers to questions may be found by searching the pages of that book. In this instance the answer will be found on pages 40 and 46.

The basic reason upon which this "School" was founded many years ago was the teaching of owners of the Bluebook to use it effectively, to become really well acquainted with all the great store of knowledge its pages contain. We skip the questions around from week to week for the express purpose of obliging students to search the Bluebook, and thus finally to become really well acquainted with it.

Improving the knowledge and ability requisite to production of the best possible entertainment for those who support us all by their frequent calls at theatre box offices is basic. It is far, far more important than any other one thing.

BLUEBOOK SCHOOL QUESTION NO. 98

(A) How can amplifying power per stage be increased?

(B) Describe the construction and purpose of a 4-element, or screen grid tube.

(C) Describe the construction and purpose of a 5-element tube, or "pentode."

(D) Explain "triode" and "Tetrode."

(Note: Remember this is a Bluebook school and the answer to all save possibly some special question can be found in that book.)

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Columbia

IT'S ALL YOURS: Francis Lederer, Madeleine Carroll—Although Francis Lederer and Mischa Auer gave an excellent performance, my patrons do not go for these foreigners and showed it by turning in one of the lowest grosses in months. Running time, 80 minutes. Played Oct. 9-10.—H. M. Gerber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, N. D. Small town patronage.

LOST HORIZON: Ronald Colman, Jane Wyatt—Well, the great "Lost Horizon" has come and gone, and as far as we are concerned it's still lost. And not only that, but it rolled up quite a loss for us. We went the limit on advertising, even used the radio, but that was before we saw it ourselves. If we had to do it over, we would play it as the second half of a dual with a good Western and give the people a chance to walk out if they wanted to. It's really the height of something or other, I don't know what, as I never saw more wonderful scenery, better photography or better acting, although the sound is rather erratic, but the fact remains the people did not care to see it and those who did, did not like it. Not one could tell me why; they just said, "It's not my type of a picture." Columbia must think they have something, as we encountered our first experience with a checker, which suited us, as they would never have believed how little this picture grossed without a checker. My personal opinion is that Frank Capra has spoiled his reputation as a director of successes. Running time, 118 minutes. Played Oct. 22-23-24.—H. M. Gerber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

RIO GRANDE RANGER: Bob Allen, Iris Meredith—We had many favorable comments on this one, and had a good crowd. Played Oct. 8-9.—Mrs. Gene Michael, Best Theatre, Freeburn, Ky. Coal mine patronage.

ROARING TIMBER: Jack Holt, Grace Bradley—Badly produced. Direction or cutting certainly messed up continuity. A flop from every angle. Played Sept. 21.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

WESTBOUND MAIL: Charles Starrett, Rosalind Keith—This boy is making a place for himself with my customers. This was a very good western. The usual business. Played Oct. 22-23.—Mrs. Gene Michael, Best Theatre, Freeburn, Ky. Coal mine patronage.

First National

CASE OF THE STUTTERING BISHOP: Donald Woods, Ann Dvorak—A fair picture. Nothing that will cause your patrons to pat you on the back to express their appreciation of your efforts to amuse them. And, on the other hand, you'll doubtless hear no complaints. Played Sept. 22.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

CHEROKEE STRIP: Dick Foran—This was doubled with Paramount's "Internes Can't Take Money." This western is decidedly above the average westerns, and perhaps it was this western that brought us some extra business the second day. Who knows?—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

EMPTY HOLSTERS: Dick Foran—Dick Foran at his best. Why Warners ever stopped making this series of pictures is beyond any reasoning as they rate with Paramount's Cassidy series. Foran, the plot and the photography are tops. Running time, 57 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

EMPTY HOLSTERS: Dick Foran—Very good western and pleased generally. O.K. on double bill.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

EVER SINCE EVE: Marion Davies, Robert Montgomery—A fair picture. It still seems like a good idea for Miss Davies to remake "When Knighthood Was in Flower," one of her finest comedy portrayals. The story is weak in "Ever Since Eve," or suffers because of its familiarity. Played Oct. 9.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H.

PRAIRIE THUNDER: Dick Foran, Ellen Clancy—A crackerjack western. There's action plus here and not too far fetched either. Dick, as usual, sings one good number. Played Oct. 9.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H.

PRINCE AND THE PAUPER, THE: Mauch Twins, Errol Flynn—Now, here is a picture that merits praise in the highest terms. Having seen it before showing it, I decided to arrange the showing so that most of our patrons could see it from the start. If ever a picture needed to be seen from the start this is one of them. On my double bills I usually show the important picture first and last. The other picture and shorts I show once during the evening in the middle. I secured some extra shorts so that "The Prince and the Pauper" went on at 8:45 for one showing during the evening and what a treat to see this picture from the start. The extra pleasure of our patrons was reflected in the second and third night's business, which were above average. Go the limit on this, for it is one of the real masterpieces among the fine pictures of the year.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

SAN QUENTIN: Pat O'Brien, Humphrey Bogart—Excellent on all counts. Played Oct. 2.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

SAN QUENTIN: Pat O'Brien, Humphrey Bogart—This is a swell picture. There are really four stars, as we must not forget Ann Sheridan and Barton MacLane. All we can say is, just a good show and will fit in any day of the week. Plenty of action, a good story, and with Pat O'Brien you always have sincere acting. Running time, 70 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

STOLEN HOLIDAY: Kay Francis, Ian Hunter, Claude Rains—Poor picture to poor business. Pass it up if you can. Running time, 80 minutes. Played Oct. 6-7.—Frank Ross, Majestic Theatre, Joliet, Ill. General patronage.

Grand National

SING, COWBOY, SING: Tex Ritter, Louise Stanley—After showing this I wondered just how much action Mr. Held of Iowa wanted. It was crowded with action and they like his singing. Here's how it is with us. We run opposition. We have Ritter, the other place Autry. Our show is a barn, with benches; they have a nice theatre. We pack them and they take in $10. Now figure it out for yourself. If they like Ritter this is another one for you to show, and I would advise Grand National to give Snub Pollard more to do and say-so in their future pictures, as I had the opportunity to see Tex and Snub in their appearances in "Kentucky." His bit in "Sing, Cowboy, Sing" proved he can still make them laugh. Why not give him a break, Grand National? I am sure glad to play Tex Ritter pictures. Played Oct. 26-27.—Mrs. Gene Michael, Best Theatre, Freeburn, Ky. Coal mine patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BORN TO DANCE: Eleanor Powell, James Stewart—A big glittering affair, sort of pageant of pulchritude and terpsichore. Did well, above average business, but did not draw as much as expected. Eleanor Powell's dancing is in a class by itself, but someone really ought to tell her that she dances just as well with her mouth closed, was the general opinion of my patrons. Running time, 105 minutes. Played Oct. 11.—Kenneth B. Parker, Tudor Cinema Theatre, Dewsbury, England. General patronage.

BROADWAY MELODY OF 1938: Eleanor Powell, Robert Taylor—Not the equal of "Born to Dance." Many rated Judy Garland and Sophie Tucker as the real hits of the show. Taylor is wasted entirely while Eleanor Powell didn't dance enough to suit many. And where were the dance numbers anyway? Certainly not much to the finale by way of chorus work and none elsewhere. Our folks like girls and plenty of them in their musicals. Solo and dance team stuff is okay, but why forget chorus routine entirely? Played Sept. 26-27.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

DAY AT THE RACES, A: Marx Brothers, Allan Jones—Am very glad this will be the last Marx Brothers picture I'll have to play. A high rental and no profit. Not half as good as Metro would have you believe, and much too long. Am glad it's over. Running time, 111 minutes. Played October 24-26.—R. Schaber, Jr., Senator Theatre, Ashley, N. D. Small town patronage.

GOOD EARTH: Paul Muni, Luise Rainer—About perfect. Everyone went away content that they'd seen something really "big" in motion pictures. It should have done better at box office, for it's great stuff. Muni and Rainer were the very personification of the characters they portrayed. Played Sept. 19-20.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

GOOD OLD SOAK: Wallace Beery, Betty Furness—Played with second feature and did excellent business, due rather to the popularity of the star than the film, but why worry if the boxoffice clicks. Running time, 76 minutes. Played Oct. 18.—Kenneth B. Parker, Tudor Cinema Theatre, Dewsbury, England. General patronage.

MARRIED BEFORE BREAKFAST: Robert Young, Florence Rice—A jolly piece of film fun convincingly played by Robert Young, a player who consistently remains sincere in whatever his role. Metro should toss him a few choice story morsels. He might surprise them. Played Sept. 15.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

MAYTIME: Jeanette MacDonald, Nelson Eddy—A wonderful production which proved a flop for us. Enjoyed it personally, but I don't count. A percentage picture which hardly took in rental. If you haven't a high class audience to cater to, don't play it—not for profit—unless you want to run it for prestige. Had walkouts on this. Played October 10-12.—R. Schaber, Jr., Senator Theatre, Ashley, N. D. Small town patronage.

PARNELL: Clark Gable, Myrna Loy—A high class attraction that spells "death" to a boxoffice. Talk, talk, talk. Good stars wasted on a poor story with a sad ending. People here want comedy and action. Goodness knows they need the comedy part on this drought stricken area. Can't pay your coal bills with this. Running time, 119 minutes. Played October 3-5.—R. Schaber, Jr., Senator Theatre, Ashley, N. D. Small town patronage.

PERSONAL PROPERTY: Jean Harlow, Robert Taylor—We enjoyed this picture, but audience reaction was very unfavorable. Business normal.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

SARATOGA: Jean Harlow, Clark Gable—A difficult job well done and satisfactory entertainment. If viewed only from a novelty standpoint it was worthwhile just to see what could be done. But to Jean's glorification the fact remains that without her completion of so many scenes they'd have had to abandon it. There is no substitute for the personality that was Jean Harlow. Played Sept. 12-13.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

TOPPER: Constance Bennett, Cary Grant—The cast is good, the trick photography excellent, but withal just fair entertainment of a sort that makes a sequel seem uncalled for. Played Sept. 16-17.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

UNDER COVER OF NIGHT: Edmund Lowe, Florence Rice—A very good program picture. Played on a dual bill with a Hopalong Cassidy picture, it drew many favorable comments. Glad to have played. Business fine.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

WAY OUT WEST: Laurel and Hardy—Personally thought this a bit tiresome except for the dancing and singing of the two. Drew well and seemed to please the audience so give us more of them, also more music, as Hardy is a good singer. This drew better than any of the others. Was it because of the title?

MOTION PICTURE HERALD
Rockefeller Center, New York

Running time, 64 minutes. Played October 21-23.—R. Schaber, Jr., Senator Theatre, Ashley, N. D. Small town patronage.

Paramount

ARTISTS AND MODELS: Jack Benny, Gail Patrick—Disappointing picture and business. No story worth the telling. Played Oct. 3-4.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H.

DOUBLE OR NOTHING: Bing Crosby, Martha Raye—There's not much wrong with this picture as we saw it. Wonder why it got so many lukewarm reviews? They must have prejudiced the public against it, however, as business failed to meet expectations. Played Oct. 10-11.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H.

DOUBLE OR NOTHING: Bing Crosby, Martha Raye, Mary Carlisle—A good musical comedy. This picture has far more plot than most musicals and is playing to very appreciative audiences. The specialty acts are tops with Ames & Arno and the Calgary Brothers in the respective offerings as good as anything offered to date. There is a trifle too much Raye as usual but still the audience like it, so why criticize. Running time, 90 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

EASY LIVING: Edward Arnold, Jean Arthur—One of the funniest features we've played this year and yet business was not satisfactory. We can seldom make any headway with comedies; they're not well attended with us. Played Sept. 9-10.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

EXCLUSIVE: Fred MacMurray, Frances Farmer—Unusual melodrama that is good entertainment. Played Sept. 11.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

FORLORN RIVER: Larry Crabbe, June Martel—So-so western that is not good Zane Grey quality. Played Sept. 11.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

HILLS OF OLD WYOMING: William Boyd, George Hayes—My customers like these and that's what counts. They especially like George Hayes. Played Oct. 15-16.—Mrs. Gene Michael, Best Theatre, Freeburn, Ky. Coal mine patronage.

HOTEL HAYWIRE: Leo Carrillo, Mary Carlisle—This is just what the name implies. A farce comedy which seemed to please and kept the patrons laughing a good part of the time. We did just a fair average Sunday with this and below average Monday, so there was not enough about this to pass the word along for others to go to see it.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

INTERNES CAN'T TAKE MONEY: Barbara Stanwyck, Joel McCrea—An above-the-average hospital and doctor drama, though a good part of the action takes place outside of the hospital. We played this on Sunday and Monday. Sunday business was a bare average but Monday was above average, which is a sure sign that some of our Sunday patrons urged some of their friends to see it Monday. This was doubled with "Cherokee Strip" with Dick Foran, a Warner Brothers western. This western is decidedly above the average westerns.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

MIDNIGHT MADONNA: Warren William, Mady Correll—Pretty sloppy story. Don't expect much from this maudlin melodrama. Played Sept. 18.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

MOUNTAIN MUSIC: Bob Burns, Martha Raye—They don't come any better than this. Give us more Paramounts like this one. And also we want more of Rufe Davis. Folks, I did this one up big and it was even better. Will stand all you can give it. Thanks, Paramount. Played Oct. 19-20.—Mrs. Gene Michael, Best Theatre, Freburn, Ky. Coal mining patronage.

NORTH OF THE RIO GRANDE: William Boyd, George Hayes—These Hopalong Cassidy series are very popular with us, with good prints and comedy relief. Business excellent.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

PLAINSMAN, THE: Gary Cooper, Jean Arthur—We had nice business and everybody was satisfied. Played October 9.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

SOPHIE LANG GOES WEST: Gertrude Michael, Larry Crabbe—Was OK on a double feature program. Pleased all, or at least I heard no complaints. Running time, 63 minutes. Played October 22-23.—A. E. Eliasen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minnesota, Rural and small town patronage.

SWING HIGH, SWING LOW: Carole Lombard, Fred MacMurray—Very good, although some objected to too much drinking. Normal business. Played October 20-21.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

WAIKIKI WEDDING: Bing Crosby, Martha Raye, Bob Burns, Shirley Ross—One of the best pictures it has been our pleasure to play. It will get the money where there is any money to be gotten. Runnnig time, 89 minutes. Played Oct. 6-7.—H. M. Gerber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

WILD MONEY: Edward E. Horton—A 50-50 picture; first half dull, last half entertaining. Played Oct. 5.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H.

Republic

WRONG ROAD, THE: Richard Cromwell, Helen Mack—It's a swell little picture and will satisfy. Running time, 65 minutes.—E. C. Arehart, Strand Theatre, Milford, Iowa. General patronage.

RKO Radio

FLIGHT FROM GLORY: Chester Morris, Whitney Bourne—Good melodrama. The ladies didn't care much for it, however. Played Sept. 25.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

NEW FACES OF 1937: Joe Penner, Harriet Hilliard—Not so bad as we'd expected from reports. In fact, it was well liked by our folks. Played Sept. 22-23.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

ON AGAIN—OFF AGAIN: Wheeler-Woolsey—Their worst in a long while. This should have been junked. We doubt the fault is Wheeler-Woolsey; they just can't make something out of nothing forever. And the absence of Dot Lee hurts plenty. Played Sept. 18.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

SHALL WE DANCE: Fred Astaire, Ginger Rogers—What more can I say? If you've seen one you've seen them all, and our boxoffice proved it. Lowest Sunday gross in many months. Also too long. Half would have been more than enough for us. I'd say the pair are slipping. Am I right? Running time, 116 minutes. Played September 26-28.—R. Schaber, Jr., Senator Theatre, Ashley, N. D. Small town patronage.

SUPER SLEUTH: Jack Oakie, Ann Sothern—Satisfactory film fare. Played Sept. 29.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

SUPER SLEUTH: Jack Oakie, Ann Sothern—Fair picture and did average at the boxoffice. Running time, 70 minutes. Played Oct. 16-17.—H. M. Gerber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, N. D. Small town patronage.

TOAST OF NEW YORK, THE: Edward Arnold, Frances Farmer—Excellent picture that failed to draw 'em in. Donald Meek merits some sort of a prize for his acting in this. It was a dandy characterization. Played Oct. 7-8.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H.

WINDJAMMER: George O'Brien—One of the best George O'Brien pictures and if he clicks for you you're all to the merry.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

WOMAN I LOVE, THE: Paul Muni, Miriam Hopkins—Not the special Radio wants you to think it is. Poor title and no drawing power. Picture too gruesome in spots. Paul Muni does his best with his part but these war stories are getting old. Not worth your best time. Running time, 88 minutes. Played Sept. 22-23.—R. Schaber, Jr., Senator Theatre, Ashley, N. D. Small town patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

ANGEL'S HOLIDAY: Jane Withers, Sally Blane, Robert Kent—A very good Jane Withers picture. Drew well at the boxoffice. Did better than "Stowaway." Played Sunday, Monday and Tuesday. Running time, 71 minutes. Played Oct. 17-18-19.—Frank Ross, Majestic Theatre, Joliet, Ill. General patronage.

BORN RECKLESS: Rochelle Hudson, Brian Donlevy—Nice little program picture of gangsters. Will please all the way. Running time, 58 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

CAFE METROPOLE: Loretta Young, Tyrone Power—This can be termed as a smart and clever romantic drama lavishly produced, but it drew below average. I cannot blame the low gross on the picture, so I will blame it on the title. Somehow this title had no allure for our patrons.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

CAFE METROPOLE: Loretta Young, Tyrone Power—Just an average programer that pleased those who came to see it. Title failed to draw any rural patronage. Too much talking and not enough action, but as it was in the "B" classification, I'm satisfied. Running time, 83 minutes. Played Sept. 19-21.—R. Schaber, Jr., Senator Theatre, Ashley, N. D. Small town patronage.

LADY ESCAPES, THE: Gloria Stuart, Michael Whalen—Definitely poor. Many complaints on this one. Played Oct. 6.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H.

MIDNIGHT TAXI: Brian Donlevy, Frances Drake Just another one of those program pictures; pleased those who came, only trouble not so many did come. General opinion Brian Donlevy of better material. Running time, 74 minutes. Played Sept. 27.—Kenneth B. Parker, Tudor Cinema Theatre, Dewsbury, England. General patronage.

THIS IS MY AFFAIR: Robert Taylor, Barbara Stanwyck—Keep up the good work, Fox. This was a fine picture and drew well. Good action and kept you guessing. Out grossed Metro's big specials. This is what our patrons want, down to earth entertainment, and Fox has them. Running time, 99 minutes. Played October 17-19.—R. Schaber, Jr., Senator Theatre, Ashley, N. D. Small town patronage.

WEE WILLIE WINKIE: Shirley Temple—This is not the type of picture that appeals to most of our Shirley Temple fans but nevertheless we feel safe in saying it pleased generally. Business not quite up to normal for Shirley. Played Oct. 13-14.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

WINGS OF THE MORNING: Henry Fonda, Annabella—A beautiful picture. Pleased all who saw it. Was afraid of it at first as the title did not mean much. Drew more the second night than the first, due to word of mouth advertising. By all means play it. The singing of John McCormack worth the price of admission alone. Running time, 87 minutes. Played Oct. 20-21.—Frank Ross, Majestic Theatre, Joliet, Ill. General patronage.

YOU CAN'T HAVE EVERYTHING: Don Ameche, Alice Faye—Here was one of the greatest surprises to us, making us scratch our heads trying to figure out why such a good musical failed to do extra business.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

United Artists

ACCUSED: Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Dolores Del Rio—Moderately entertaining. There were several walkouts, however. Played Sept. 14.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

PRISONER OF ZENDA, THE: Ronald Colman, Madeleine Carroll, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr.—I have not shown this as yet, but having seen it I want to pass the world along that this is great. It had a three-week run in Detroit in a theatre that rarely runs a picture that long. Also, if at all possible, arrange your program so that they can see it from the start. If I were in a small town and could not afford the added pictures to run to about 8:30 or 8:45 so that this could be seen from the start, I would try on a picture like this to start later. Advertise this fact in a big way. Have a couple of shorts to start about 8 P. M. and in that way your patrons will enjoy a real show. Of course, if you have more than one full house during an evening, this method is not practical.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

Universal

CALIFORNIA STRAIGHT AHEAD: John Wayne, Louise Latimer—This is real action! A very good picture even if nothing super-super. Played Sept. 28.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

CARNIVAL QUEEN: Dorothea Kent, Robert Wilcox—Suitable for a double bill. Running time, 65 minutes.—E. C. Arehart, Strand Theatre, Milford, Iowa. General patronage.

MAN WHO CRIED WOLF, THE: Lewis Stone, Tom Brown, Barbara Read—If your patrons go for murders here is their meat. Peach of a story and well acted. Running time, 75 minutes.—E. C. Arehart, Strand Theatre, Milford, Iowa. General patronage.

OH, DOCTOR!: Edward Everett Horton—We had fine weather and good business but most of our patrons thought the story was a little weak. Played October 16.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

100 MEN AND A GIRL: Deanna Durbin, Adolphe Menjou—While opinions differed widely from our patrons concerning the merits of this picture it did seem to bring out new faces and possibly the better class trade. We are glad we played it even though it was no outstanding grosser. Running time, 85 minutes.—E. C. Arthart, Strand Theatre, Milford, Iowa. General patronage.

ROAD BACK, THE: John King, Richard Cromwell—The obvious changes in plot, especially in the closing sequence, have definitely lessened the story's worth. Those who may not have read the book will accept it as fair entertainment, but the legion who admire the book will find keen disappointment in the screenplay. Played Sept. 30-Oct. 1.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

WEST BOUND LIMITED: Lyle Talbot, Polly Rowles—We get so many calls for railroad stories that when we do get one we're tickled pink. And yet this is not tops in its class. They could do a lot better. Played Sept. 25.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

Warner Brothers

CHARGE OF THE LIGHT BRIGADE: Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland—An excellently produced picture with remarkably fine photography which somehow or other did not quite hit the mark. The acting of Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland and the remainder of the cast was up to expectations. The final scene featuring the charge of the six hundred, upon which this historical film is based, just missed being one of the epics of filmdom, due, I believe, to it being too long drawn out and exaggerated. However, even with these faults Warner Bros. did a good piece of work and the picture should do good business. Running time, 115 minutes. Played October 30.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

GOD'S COUNTRY AND THE WOMAN: George Brent, Beverly Roberts—Just a natural for any spot. Why not more like this? Have been running here for 15 years and patrons say the best yet. Good business in a town of 240 souls in the middle of the dried-out country—for the last eight years no crop—and this picture drew for forty miles and all satisfied. Thanks, and play it. Running time, 80 minutes. Played October 28.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural patronage.

GO GETTER, THE: George Brent, Anita Louise—This feature, although not classed as a special, was given more good comments and enjoyed by all than some big productions. I was agreeably surprised at its reception as Brent not popular here. Play it and hear the chuckles. Running time, nine reels. Played October 14.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural patronage.

LIFE OF EMILE ZOLA, THE: Paul Muni, Gale Sondergaard—Wonderful picture. Good story well produced. Will stand extended runs. Running time, 120 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

ONE WAY PASSAGE (Reissue): Kay Francis, William Powell—One of the best reissues we have ever had and did excellent business. Pity there are not more of this type being made today. Running time, 68 minutes. Played Sept. 30.—Kenneth B. Parker, Tudor Cinema Theatre, Dewsbury, England.

POLO JOE: Joe E. Brown—Passable Joe E. Brown picture. Will please and did. Running time, 60 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

TALENT SCOUT: Donald Woods, Jeanne Madden—A bad picture, almost zero in entertainment value. Less than that at B. O. Played Oct. 2.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H.

Short Features

Columbia

DIZZY DOCTORS: Broadway Comedies—Well, let me express my appreciation for these Three Stooges; they sure mean a lot to me.—Mrs. Gene Michael, Best Theatre, Freeburn, Ky.

FROM BAD TO WORSE: Broadway Comedy—Charlie Chase is still very popular and while this particular effort is okay they should bend every effort towards improving his story material—and let him sing!—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H.

GRAND HOOTER: Broadway Comedy—Charlie Chase's best attempt of recent date.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H.

GRIPS, GRUNTS, AND GROANS: Broadway Comedies—Usual for the series and okay nonsense where they go for the Three Stooges.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H.

MY LITTLE FELLER: Broadway Comedies—Andy Clyde is tops with us—in fact, all Columbia Comedies are.—Mrs. Gene Michael, Best Theatre, Freeburn, Ky.

NEW NEWS: Collins-Kennedy Broadway Comedy—Excellent fill-up that proved very popular here. Running time, 17 minutes.—Kenneth B. Parker, Tudor Cinema Theatre, Dewsbury, England.

SCRAPPY'S BAND CONCERT: Scrappy Series—This is a good cartoon—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H.

SLIPPERY SILKS: Broadway Comedies—A big improvement on the last comedy of the Three Stooges. Excellent fun that seemed to please generally. Running time, 17 minutes.—Kenneth B. Parker, Tudor Cinema Theatre, Dewsbury, England.

THREE DUMB CLUCKS: Three Stooges—A slapstick panic as usual.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H.

Educational

BUG CARNIVAL: Terrytoon—Better than average Terrytoon.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H.

FRESHIES: Two-Reel Comedies—A fair comedy.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H.

HAY RIDE, THE: Terrytoon—No better, no worse than average in this weak series of cartoons.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H.

MECHANICAL COW, THE: Terrytoon—A fair cartoon.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H.

OZZIE OSTRICH COMES TO TOWN: Terrytoon—Only fair.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H.

PLAY BALL: Terrytoon—Okay cartoon.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H.

SCHOOL BIRDS: Terrytoon—A funny cartoon.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BAR-RAC'S NIGHT OUT: Peter Smith Specialties—Don't mistake this for a one-reel western short subject as we did. It's the adventures of a raccoon well worth playing.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

BOSKO AND THE PIRATES: Happy Harmonies—A very clever Happy Harmony. These are becoming very outstanding.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

EQUESTRIAN ACROBATICS: Peter Smith Specialties—A very entertaining subject.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H.

EVERY SUNDAY: Deanna Durbin, Judy Garland—Expected more of this short after reading other comments on it. However, it seemed to please a small audience. Running time, 10 minutes.—R. Schaber, Jr., Senator Theatre, Ashley, N. D. Small town patronage.

INDIA ON PARADE: Fitzpatrick traveltalks—Excellent.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H.

IT MAY HAPPEN TO YOU: Crime Doesn't Pay Series—As we have always contended this is the finest series of shorts made by any producer. This picture is interesting as well as educational. Give it a top booking. Running time, 20 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

PUBLIC PAYS, THE: Crime Doesn't Pay Series—Another Crime Doesn't Pay series exposing the milk racketeers. Excellent.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

SUNKIST STARS AT PALM SPRINGS: Musical color revue—One of those very excellent and very popular colored musicals of Metro which are always a hit with my patrons. Running time, 20 minutes.—Kenneth B. Parker, Tudor Cinema Theatre, Dewsbury, England.

Paramount

BLUE VELVET MUSIC: Headliners—A fair band act.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H.

CHICKEN A LA KING: Color Classic—Excellent cartoon.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H.

LOST AND FOUNDRY: Popeye the Sailor—Average Popeye cartoon.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H.

YOU CAME TO MY RESCUE: Shep Fields and Orch.—Fair screen song. We still think these were better when originally released with the cartoon drawings of the lyrics for a second chorus. By the time the audience is warmed up to singing, it's all over.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H.

RKO Radio

BIG LEAGUE: Bill Corum's Sports—Okay baseball short.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H.

DEADLY FEMALES: Struggle to Live Series—Very engrossing material.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H.

DESERT LAND: Struggle to Live Series—The best in this series to date and that means plenty good.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H.

FOREST GANGSTERS: Struggle to Live Series—Good novelty reel.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H.

IT'S A GREEK'S LIFE: Rainbow Parade—A fair color cartoon.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H.

MARCH OF TIME, NO. 12: The usual so-so audience reaction.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H.

PATHE TOPICS, NO. 7: Entertaining, especially the acrobatic sequence.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H.

Twentieth Century-Fox

TOURING BRAZIL: Magic Carpet Series—A good travelogue.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H.

WESTERN GRANDEUR: Magic Carpet Series—An excellently photographed travelogue in black and white.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H.

Universal

KIDDIE REVUE: Oswald Cartoon—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H.

STEEL WORKERS: Meany, Miny, Moe Comedy—An amusing cartoon.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H.

Vitaphone

CUT OUT FOR LOVE: Broadway Brevities—A swell little musical short that should be good for a buildup on a weak picture. Plot and recording is very good. Running time, 18 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

DAY AT SANTA ANITA, A: Sybil Jason—This is a fairly good picture in color which is marred somewhat by the attempt to inject a dramatic story into two reels. The final reel, however, introduces a host of Hollywood stars and features a thrilling horse race which should serve to make it a good addition to any program. Running time, 18 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

Columbia

JUNGLE MENACE: Frank Buck, Charlotte Henry—This is the first Columbia serial and it is as the company promised, different and well produced, but, I am sorry to say, does not have any drawing power. We are on the 8th chapter and I don't believe there is one patron who has seen all of them; in fact, they walk out just as soon as the serial is flashed on the screen. Not enough excitement and suspense. The animals are so tame, they run for their cages the minute Frank points a stick at them, and they expect you to get a thrill out of it.—H. M. Gerber, Roxy Theatre, Hazelton, N. D. Small town patronage.

Universal

WILD WEST DAYS: Johnny Mack Brown—This is one of the better serials. The story, action and production values are considerably above the average run of serials. Where westerns are popular, this serial should also be popular.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

IN COURTS

Kromocolor Hearing Ends in New Jersey

The hearing in Paterson, N. J., on the application by Joseph O'Donnell to rescind a bid of $105,000 for the Kromocolor Laboratory, Paramus, N. J., and to have his deposit of $21,000 returned to him, was completed last week. At the same time, a counter petition by the receivers of the laboratory declaring that O'Donnell had no right to rescind the bid and if he did not go through with the deal should default the deposit, also was heard.

A decision is expected shortly. William Krimsky, co-receiver for Kromocolor, represented the laboratories. Vice-Chancellor Vivian M. Lewis presided at the hearings.

Ross Federal Service Wins Mississippi Appeal

Ross Federal Service last week reported that it had won a decision in the Mississippi supreme court, which reversed two lower court rulings relative to a state tax law aimed at checkers. The suit was preferred by the city of Oxford, Miss, as a test case. A. B. Hugo, checker for the company, who filed the appeal, was discharged by the court.

The license law attempted to impose a fee of $50 on every theatre checker in the state. The court held that checkers for Ross Federal do not fall within the provisions of the law and at the same time confirmed the confidential nature of the checkers' reports to distributors.

Pathe Corporation Sued

J. F. O'Keefe, as assignee of Zasu Pitts, filed a suit in supreme court in New York last week for $5,940 and interest against Pathe Film Corporation and Pathe Studios, Inc. A judgment was recovered in superior court in Los Angeles but remained unpaid. Mr. O'Keefe alleges that Miss Pitts was hired by Pathe Studios in May, 1930, and that damages amounting to $5,000 were promised if she was not assigned to a picture before the end of the year. Mr. O'Keefe claimed that assets of Pathe Studios were sold to RKO Radio without notice to creditors and that the sale was "fraudulent."

Brown Suit Settled

The infringement suit of Daniel L. Brown against Jacob and Lee Shubert, Select Theatres Corporation and Tams-Witmark Music Library was marked settled in the United States district court in New York last week. The stipulation filed provided that no damages or profits were to be paid, but the defendants acknowledged the plaintiff's ownership rights to the opera, "Sari," which Mr. Brown claimed having acquired from the composer in 1911. It was alleged that the defendants infringed by granting radio rights to the music.

Caruthers Suit Dismissed

Federal Judge John M. Woolsey in New York last week formally dismissed the $1,000,000 plagiarism suit of Allan Caruthers against RKO Radio and awarded the defendant $61 in costs. Mr. Caruthers claimed infringement of his play "The Sooners," in "Cimarron."

'Hurricane' Opens In East and West

Months of advance publicity on Samuel Goldwyn's production "The Hurricane," reputed to have cost in the neighborhood of $2,000,000, came to a gala climax with two premieres, the first at the Carthay Circle, Hollywood, last Friday night, and the second at the Astor theatre, New York, on Tuesday night.

To both performances streamed a host of celebrities, attired in evening gown and fur wraps and in stiff white shirts, tuxedos and tail coats. Prominent among the guests at the New York premiere showing for representatives of the press on Monday night was Mrs. Randolph Hearst, while Elsa Maxwell, high in social circles, entertained a group of friends that included several persons of nobility.

Arc lights played their customary important role in announcing the openings at both houses. In Hollywood, stands were erected near the theatre to accommodate the thousands who flocked to the scene to obtain a glimpse of the stars, but at the Broadway premiere a squad of good natured patrolmen kept the curious moving and opened lanes through the crowds to admit guests.

Mr. Goldwyn attended the New York showing and was on hand, at the rear of the orchestra, to greet those attending, who included executives of United Artists and virtually every other motion picture company. Among those at the premiere were Y. Frank Freeman, Charles and George Skouras, John S. Hertz, Moss Hart, Jules Glaenzer, Walter Wanger, David Rose, Ernest Lever, Joseph Bernhard, William T. Powers, Nate Blumberg, Gus Eysell, Barney Balaban, Nicholas M. Schenck, Mike Rosenberg, I. J. Hoffman, John Nolan, John Hay Whitney, William Paley, Max Gordon, Clayton Bond, Joe Vogel, Charles C. Moskowitz and Rufus Le Maire.

Alternative Writ Signed In "U" Inquiry Proposal

An alternative writ of mandamus directing officers and directors of Universal Pictures Corporation to exhibit their books and records from 1930 to date to Murita Trading Corporation, or to show cause before November 30th why they should not be compelled to do so, was signed by Daniel I. Rosenman, justice, in supreme court in New York on Wednesday. Justice Rosenman previously had denied a peremptory writ on the ground that Universal questioned the right of the petitioner to see the books.

Under the writ Universal may go to trial to determine whether Murita is acting in good faith or whether it is a stockholder under the Delaware law.

Roadshows Planned for "Chicago"

Twentieth Century-Fox is planning to roadshow "In Old Chicago," throughout the United States it was announced last week. It was indicated that the picture will be withheld from general distribution until the 1938-39 releasing season.

Korson-Ambassador Deal

Louis (Pop) Korson and Ed Boreth, operating Masterpiece Film Attractions, will distribute the 1937-38 Ambassador program of sixteen pictures in the Philadelphia and Washington territories. Maurice Conn, president of Ambassador, closed the deal.

OBITUARIES

Louis Alterman

Louis L. Alterman, owner of the Comedy, Victory and Rialto theatres, Jamaica, N. Y., died Sunday at his home. Death was due to a complication of diseases. Mr. Alterman was founder of the Biltmore Film Exchange and was active in real estate.

McBeth, Giannini, Kelly

Danny McBeth, Alex Giannini and William Kelly of Witmark and Sons, Warner Brothers music subsidiary, were killed last week in an auto accident near Rhinelander, N. Y. They were on their way to attend the opening of a new show in Albany when their car swerved off the road and struck a tree.

Martin Brennan

Word was received at the Paramount offices Monday of the death last Saturday of Martin C. Brennan, founder and editor of The Film Weekly, in Sydney, Australia. Mr. Brennan formerly had been editor of Everyone, a weekly film paper there.

John Kane

John E. A. Kane, 38, business agent of the New Orleans Moving Picture Machine Operators Union No. 2935, died last week following a year's illness.

Spencer Bettelheim

Spencer Bettelheim, 39, treasurer for the Music Box theatre, New York, and the lessee of the Lyceum, died last Friday.

Gertrude Kingston

Gertrude Kingston, English actress, associated with Henry Irving and Beerbohm Tree at the height of their popularity, died in a London nursing home Monday.

Open Artcinema Branch

The Artcinema Film Exchange, Inc., last week opened offices in the Film Center Building in New York. Charles Kranz, formerly with United Artists, is general manager of the exchange. Al Bondy and Willian Ravnor are associated with Mr. Kranz. The company will release 10 films of Artcinema Associates, Inc., of which Emil C. Jensen is president.

Alsop, Lynch Combine

Former Mayor John T. Alsop of Jacksonville, Fla., and S. A. Lynch, Florida theatre man, have renewed a former business association and will open offices in Jacksonville. Mr. Alsop was associated with Mr. Lynch in the opening and operation of virtually all of the theatres in Jacksonville and Miami, Fla.

Universal Dropping Two

Kent Taylor and Wendy Barrie are being dropped from Universal's contract list, the studio announced last week from Universal City.

Schenck Buys Estate

Nicholas M. Schenck, president of Loew's, Inc., last week purchased an additional three-acre estate known as "Delcrest," at Great Neck, Long Island, N. Y.

THE RELEASE CHART

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Letter in parentheses after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger symbol indicates picture is of the 1937-38 season.

NOTE: The totals for running time are the official figures announced by the home offices of the distributing companies.

When a production is reviewed in Hollywood, the running time is as officially given by the West Coast studio of the company at the time of the review, and this fact is denoted by an asterisk() immediately preceding the number. As soon as the home office has established the running time for national release, any change from the studio figure is made and the asterisk is removed.*

Running times are subject to change according to local conditions. State or city censorship deletions may cause variations from the announced and published figures; repairs to the film may be another reason.

J C JENKINS—HIS COLYUM

Pipestone, Minnesota

Dear Herald:

We stopped here at Pipestone to see Lou Feldman, who operates the Orpheum theatre, but he had gone to Canada with a bunch of friends to shoot deer and elk. We don't know what they had along with them outside of "Johnnie Walker" and "Malcomb Frazier," but we presume they took a slab of sowbelly to be sure to have some meat.

Lou's Orpheum theatre is the show place of western Minnesota. He has two fish ponds in the lobby. We presume the botanical or Swedish name for them would be "aquaria," but we call them fish ponds for short. Anyhow, they certainly add interest and beauty to the place.

We had a very pleasant visit with Mrs. Feldman, but it was very short because she was busy tearing off tickets by the yard for the customers of the Orpheum. Pipestone is where the Indians used to get the stone to make their pipes out of. Lou "smoked the pipe of peace" with them so long that he knew every squaw and papoose by their first names. As we understand it, there are no Indians here now.

If you ever go to Pipestone be sure to visit the Orpheum theatre and see what a nice show house Lou has, and be sure to meet Mrs. Feldman. You will find her a most excellent lady.

Herman Jochims of the New Palace theatre at Luverne had gone to Sioux Falls to consult a doctor when we called. We called on Herman several years ago and sold him the HERALD. After they waited for several weeks and the HERALD didn't show up, Mrs. Jochims said to him, "Well, you have been hooked by another magazine peddler." It was all our fault. When we took his subscription we dated the order Luverne, Iowa, instead of Minnesota. We remembered Luverne, Iowa, because we were in a passenger wreck there one time, and since then the wheels in our gourd have run every-which-way. But Herman is getting the HERALD now and he keeps it paid several years ahead. He simply will not be without it.

While Herman was calling on the doctor, Charlie Snyder and we were calling on Mrs. Jochims at the theatre, and we had a very pleasant visit with her. The New Palace is another of the show places of south west Minnesota. Somehow Minnesota has a lot of fine theatres, which is probably due to the fact that they haven't had a crop failure since Horatio defended the bridge that time.

Henry Hower used to operate the Circle theatre in Omaha, which lately has been acquired by Sam Epstein. Henry went to Estherville, Iowa, where he operated the Estherville theatre, but later he built a new and very beautiful theatre in Worthington, Minnesota. He also bought the Ehlers theatre from George Ehlers and the Wonderland theatre at Windom, Minnesota, from Messrs. Redding & Stroud.

Operating all of these theatres will keep Henry busy, which means that Mrs. Hower will have to bug the potatoes and pull the weeds out of the cabbage patch. G. H. Hower told us to send him the HERALD to his Windom theatre. We have already done it. Thanks.

George Ehlers has taken over the theatre at Sherburn, Minn. It will be opened as soon as it has been decorated and finished to his notion, which he says will be in about a month.

We have been looking very closely for any "Shelter Belts" but we haven't seen any in this part of the country.

It seems that the boys don't go very strong for shelter belts out here. They run more to corn, wheat, oats and alfalfa. We understand that they have some up in the north part of the state, and we have been told that they cut down some of the small timber to make room to plant the trees. Minnesota seems to get plenty of moisture, which makes it unnecessary for the the government to use dogs up there.

Charlie Snyder, the booker for F. B. O. at Sioux Falls, was going to call on some of the F. B. O. customers and he persuaded us to leave April Shower at Sioux Falls and go with him. We were easily persuaded, as he is an excellent driver, and he had a big Buick automobile, and besides that April Shower needed a rest.

George Schroeder is the deputy county treasurer at Windom and operates the theatre at Mountain Lake. We called at Mountain Lake some years ago to see George. There was a small mountain out in the lake and George told us they were going to move either the lake or mountain, but he didn't know which. This time he told us they had decided to move the lake by draining it. This is going to make fishing bad around the mountain. George said he wanted his subscription renewed to the HERALD. We have already done it. Thanks, oldtimer.

George Raunhorse of the Fulda theatre at Fulda had just got home from hunting ducks as we called. He had a lot of 'em, but it takes too long to cook 'em and we couldn't stay. We did stop long enough to have a very delightful visit with George and Mrs. Raunhorse, just as we always have done every time we have called on them. We wish them a lot of good luck, for they are lovely people.

When we last called at Slayton Ole Vesta was operating the Murray theatre, but this time we were told that he had passed on. Mrs. Bessie Okerman now is operating the Murray and she wanted her subscription renewed. Charlie did about all the talking. Doggone that doggone guy; every woman in the country knows him by his first name.

W. R. Hiller operates the State theatre at Marshall, and he has a fine theatre, too, and Marshall is a mighty good town. W. R. said he was going up to Crookston to hunt ducks with his brother. That's the way it goes; the boys all go duck hunting and we have to work. Good gosh, gee whiz.

B. B. Nielsen operates the Scenic theatre at Tyler, C. H. Sartorius has the Capitol at Hartley, and H. Von Bextel the Nira at Orange City. Mr. Sartorious told us he was going down to New York and we asked him to go to Rockefeller Center and call on the HERALD folks and he said he would. We had a very pleasant visit with Mr. and Mrs. Von Bextel.

Orange City is where they raise tulips. They have an annual tulip day every year, and thousands of people come to it like they do on "Cherry Blossom Day" in northeast Wisconsin.

Bill Bogart at Rock Valley said: "Say, Colonel, don't forget to let me know when my subscription expires. You know I am depending on you." Bill is awfully particular that way. Not only that, but he is a dandy chap.

"FREE TRADE"

HERE is another sample of how things get going in the papers. The other day, as Mr. Will Hays emerged from a Hyde Park chat, he was overtaken or waylaid by the lay press. He made some remarks calculated to bear only on the British motion picture quota situation, in which he observed in effect that he did not want to see obstacles raised to the international trade intercourse of the screen.

By the time that the newswriters had done with it and the editorial writers had put it through their filters, the papers had Mr. Hays substantially declaring for "free trade." And, not without some prankish guile, they remarked upon that as an odd inconsistency from so outstanding an exponent of the high tariff Republican party, etc.

Probably it was all in good fun, too. Meanwhile, a number of reflections arise: It has been our impression these several years that Mr. Hays quit working for the Republican party in a big way about the same time that he came to the motion picture. If you can recall that period, it seems like it was a good time to do about that, too.

Since then the G.O.P. has been mislaid and now it seems that it will take an archæologist to find out whatever became of it. But it is our recollection of the tradition that it was dedicated to the notion of a protective tariff.

Currently about all the protection that the motion picture industry needs is at home, along with a lot of other American industries. Imported notions of political and social economy appear to be troubling business more than imported goods.

THE motion picture as an industry is a "free trader" of the old school and it will do its own trading. Mr. Hays is the head of the organized industry's trade association, which has as little as is practical to do with politics, asking nothing but the opportunity to tend to its own business.

The motion picture industry of the United States could have had a protective tariff, incidentally, years ago, if it had wanted it, and in fact very nearly had one thrust upon it through the office of the late Senator Lorimer of Illinois, then chairman of the Ways and Means committee of the Congress, about 1912.

Speaking of international relations, a reading of the editorial page of the Los Angeles Examiner of November 6 suggests that the public relations department of the industry has yet to inform a certain editorial writer. He set down as the utterance of his paper, right at the door of the international film factory of Hollywood, remarks, thus:

"Every foreign country of any importance, where the arts of the stage and screen have reached an advanced development, has very wisely adopted stringent laws making it difficult, and sometimes impossible, for artists of other nations to invade the field and deprive native talent of employment.

"America has never provided adequate laws to protect its own artists from foreign invasion. . . . Hordes of mediocre or incompetent players whose only recommendation is that they carry the label of importation, for whom there is no popular or critical demand, are allowed to invade our stage, screen, and concert hall, to make their stakes and to return and spend them at home. . . . The public and the lawmakers have a definite obligation to at least equalize the situation. . . . The coming session of Congress should see a bill introduced to effect the object. . . ."

It would be very nice if Congress would let production alone.

Meanwhile, foreign, alien, personalities as servants of international demand have given the American screen a quality of entertainment merchandise that could have evolved and could have been supported only in an international and world market.

The world market for Hollywood wares gives the consumer a better buy at the box office. In every foreign land where walls of nationalism have been reared about the screen the theatre has suffered, and with it its patrons.

IMPORTED & DOMESTIC

OUT in Hollywood, which is a nice place to do it, Mr. Gabe Yorke has been considering some aspects of the cinema and related matters. He poignantly writes:

"We are all familiar with the argument of bluenoses that American films give wrong impressions of American life to foreigners, but on that score you ought to see what our pictorial services are doing! I've been looking over a large number of foreign magazines lately and am arrested by the large volume of crime, pornographic and other objectionable photographs that our American services sell for foreign publication. Presumably those magazines can buy from the whole world, but when they want shocking stuff, there is no place like the dear U. S. news picture services to get it."

THE other day the Washington Times, and presumably other newspapers sharing the service, presented a special article bearing the by-line of Eric Friedheim (I.N.S.), meaning International News Service, opening with: "The Federal Government today called on Hollywood to produce motion pictures with an 'international appeal' as a means of combatting growing foreign opposition to American films."

This seemed dreadfully important—almost too big for page 14, even in a Washington paper.

Motion Picture Herald asked its Washington correspondent to wire the exciting details.

His reply: "Concocted from Department of Commerce annual review of the foreign situation, issued last April."

THE incense of burning leaves; the aroma of winter apples heaped in cellar bins; the rich damp exhalations of fall earth freshly turned by the plough: these are of an order of emotion stuff which, despite substantial reality, must ever elude the arts, never to be captured and put in a can against a release date. Twilights come early now to the valley of the Silvermine, and southbound birds are passing with quickening wings. A year is all but gone.

16mm Newsreel

Motion picture newsreels in this country will face their first new competition in 10 years on January 1st when the Herman A. DeVry Company, Chicago manufacturers of portable and 16 mm. projectors, undertakes a national 16 mm. newsreel for use in the growing list of theatres which now produce their own local 16 mm. newsreels.

The plan is described in detail on page 13.

March on Hollywood

Production cost conferences, production executive changes and whatnot sent an army of top notch motion picture generals training westward this week from Broadway, all figuring in one way or another in the week's news headlines, as reported elsewhere, and including: Barney Balaban, Stanton Griffis, executive committee chairman, and Russell Holman, production executive, all of Paramount; Samuel Goldwyn and Alexander Korda, new buyers of United Artists; Walter Wanger and David Selznick, United Artists producers; Nate Blumberg, theatre general, and Phil Reisman, foreign distribution director, of RKO; Maurice Silverstone, United Artists' British distribution chief; Sidney R. Kent, president, and Joseph M. Schenck, board chairman of Twentieth Century-Fox; Nicholas M. Schenck, president of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, et al.

Details on page 49.

Chance Games Hit

Chance games at motion picture theatres lost more ground through court decisions and actions than in any similar period in months. In Georgia, the court of appeals ruled that Bank Night violates the state lottery law while in the same state a Statesboro grand jury indicted an exhibitor for conducting the games. The Independent Theatre Owners Association in New York was reported as still hopeful that chance games and giveaways will be discontinued. In Oklahoma City, Standard Theatres abandoned Bank Night in their downtown houses on the grounds it is "waning in popularity."

A compilation of chance games developments during the week is on page 74.

Classroom Films

Motion pictures in education rapidly are bringing the film business and the classroom to a partnership, more than 30 states to date showing tangible signs of interest in adapting projectors to the process of teaching and learning.

The status today of the film in the classroom is explained by Dr. Charles Hoban, of the American Council on Education, in Washington, on page 73.

ASCAP Victory

The fight being conducted by the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers achieved at least a partial victory with the granting of a temporary injunction in Lincoln, Neb., restraining Nebraska state officers from enforcing a recently enacted law intended to outlaw the society in the state. Similar actions are under way in other states which have threatened ASCAP's operations.

Blame Newsreels

A. Karuppan Cheetier and Ramprakash Kohli, young motion picture photographers in India, have returned to their native Bombay, from Hollywood and New York, by way of Berlin's and London's studios, to start an independent newsreel with which they hope to end much of the "vicious propaganda and misinformation" about India which they say has been carried in newsreels. They blamed England's strict control over newsreels in India for the prohibition of a "true picture" of the country.

They are quoted on page 60.

Anti-Trust Enforcement

Homer S. Cummings, United States attorney general, said this week that he has asked that his present appropriation of $472,000 for the enforcement of anti-trust statutes be increased to $1,000,000. He did not disclose, however, how budget bureau officials view his proposal nor did he make known what industries have been singled out for immediate attack. Enforcement of the anti-trust statutes is one of the most important duties of the department, said Mr. Cummings, who then explained that the additional funds are needed to permit an expansion of the staff and the undertaking of a number of cases in which action is believed necessary. Mr. Cummings said his department is working on a report on anti-trust regulations to be submitted to Congress for consideration in connection with legislation modernizing the laws.

Trade Practice Reforms

Persisting in its efforts to meet with Allied States Association and the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America in an attempt to create concerted exhibitor pressure for a trade practice program, the Independent Theatre Owners Association set December 14th at the Hotel Astor in New York as a date and invited Allied and the MPTOA to attend.

The ITOA arrangement for a meeting in New York with Allied and MPTOA, the Paramount strike developments and other trade practice activities are detailed on page 75.

Television Predictions

The Bell Telephone Laboratories' successful demonstration of the use of a coaxial cable to broadcast motion pictures from New York to Philadelphia partially supported the contentions of E. F. McDonald, president of the Zenith Radio Corporation, and Harry R. Lubcke, director of television for the Don Lee Broadcasting System.

Developments in the field of television are explained on page 70.

Universal Gains

J. Cheever Cowdin, speaking for Universal Pictures of which he is chairman of the board, reported a marked upturn in income during the 13 weeks ended October 30th, the fourth quarter of the company's fiscal year. Domestic billings for the period showed an increase of approximately 17 per cent over the total for the corresponding quarter last year, Mr. Cowdin said.

Dewey Made Offer

A motion picture producer has offered Thomas E. Dewey, New York City district attorney elect, $150,000 to play the hero's role in a gangster picture, according to a United Press dispatch from Hollywood. If Mr. Dewey declines, it was reported, the offer will be made to J. Edgar Hoover, head of the federal bureau of investigation. No one expects either of them to accept, the dispatch continued. The offer apparently came from Jack Linder, a motion picture agent and a former Broadway stage producer, who represented an unnamed major studio. The picture he had in mind was one based on the life of Charles (Lucky) Luciano, whom Mr. Dewey sent to Sing Sing. Mr. Dewey would play the part of himself prosecuting Luciano. No offer was made to Luciano. Ray Le Strange, former publicity man for Tammany Hall in New York, announced Mr. Linder's proposition.

Return of Chivalry

With his rapier wit for sword and lance and righteousness for his shield George Jessel has entered the lists of knightly combat for his Lady Hollywood. The Black Knight, his opponent, is the personification of the radio commentators who have slurred the honor of the lady; the jousting field is the radio forum and, to mix metaphors unpardonably, Mr. Jessel's theme song is "tolerance and discretion."

His challenges to Messieurs Fidler, Skolsky and Pantages are quoted on page 18.

Goldwyn-Korda Deal

Arrangements for acquisition of the controlling interest of United Artists by Samuel Goldwyn and Alexander Korda were completed at conferences in New York. Financially backed by a group of four or five English companies, Mr. Goldwyn and Mr. Korda will exercise options they hold on the stock owned by their present partners, Charles Chaplin, Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks, for a total of $6,000,000 of which $4,500,000 will be in cash. Miss Pickford and Mr. Fairbanks agreed to accept $750,000 each in new preferred stock. Under the new arrangement, according to Mr. Korda, he and Mr. Goldwyn "will split authority."

Details of the deal and the highlights of the company's history are on page 16.

Editorial Representative

Hope Williams, London manager of MOTION PICTURE HERALD, has announced the appointment of Aubrey Flanagan as London editorial representative. Mr. Flanagan for the last ten years was associated with The Cinema, London.

25th Anniversary

Preparations being made by the North and South Carolina Motion Picture Theatre Owners for their annual convention early in December which will mark the 25th anniversary of the organization, include the invitation of speakers who will appear on the program. Edward Kuykendall, national president of the MPTOA, Walter Vincent, Pennsylvania circuit operator, and Martin Quigley will make the principal addresses.

Plans for the anniversary and activities of other exhibitor organizations are detailed on page 40.

AT&T Bowing Out

The American Telephone & Telegraph Company on January 1st will bow out, entirely, from the business of selling and servicing sound reproducers to motion picture theatres, the business that has been conducted both for AT&T and Western Electric by their subsidiary, Electrical Research Products, Inc., since the advent of sound in 1926.

On December 1st, a Wall Street banking group, consisting principally of Roswell C. Tripp and Howard P. Engels, will acquire all of the field and home office operating, installation and servicing divisions of Erpi, on a purchase to be effected by the Tripp and Engels interests this week. The financing is strictly private; there will be no public financing.

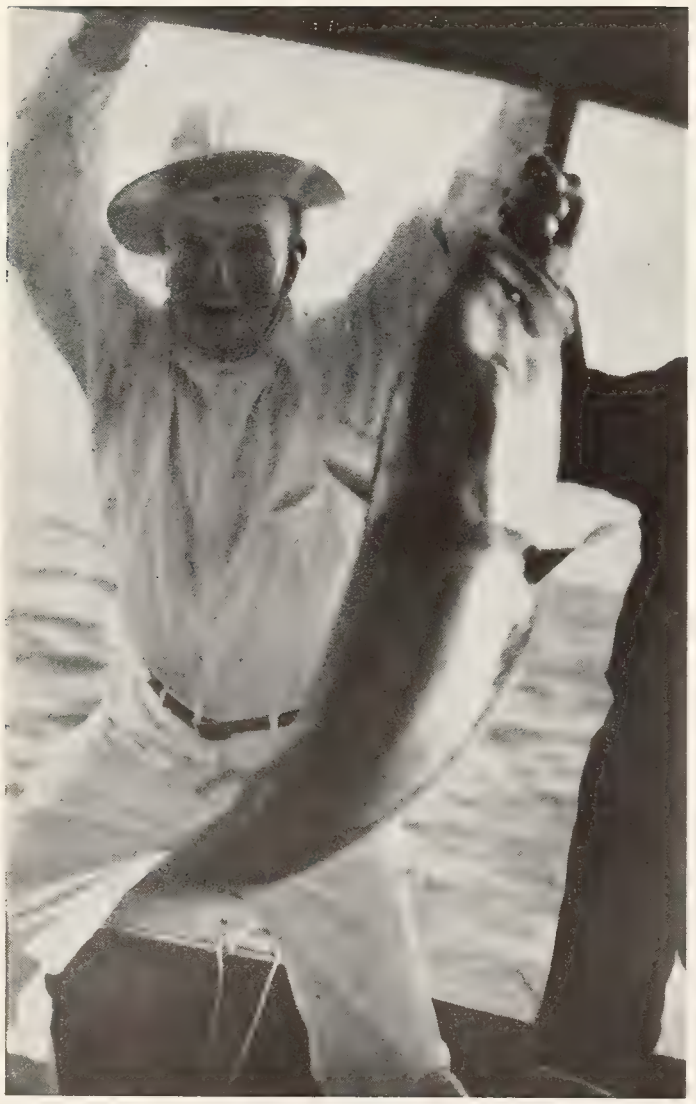
There are now 7,000 Erpi theatre accounts in the U. S.

Erpi will become virtually only a corporate entity, to continue to hold the recording rights held by producers and studios, and to continue to hold the rights to the licenses given two weeks ago to National Theatre Supply - International Projector and to Motiograph to manufacture Erpi sound heads in conjunction with their respective projectors.

International Projector (Simplex and Powers projectors) and Motiograph hereafter will sell the Erpi projectors; the Tripp-Engels company will install and service them, also handling Erpi sound parts.

The new company will take over the present Erpi home offices in New York's Fisk Building, at 250 West 57th Street; all the Erpi servicing and operating forces, the Erpi field offices and stocks of sound parts, and only half a dozen of the present key Erpi sales representatievs in the field, including Stanley Hand, of Chicago, and "Red" Hacking, in Boston.

L. W. Conrow, present Erpi operating head, will become general operating manager of the new project, Mr. Conrow already having appointed George Carrington as operating manager and Bert Sanford, Jr., as director of all sales. Mr. Sanford now is sales head of the Erpi operating division. Stanley Hand's position will be that of executive staff representative in the field.



The new company will set up eight principal division offices, each in charge of a division manager, assisted by a branch manager. Branch managers will have charge in remaining offices in each of the eight divisions. Some of the present Erpi offices will be closed, and new branches will be opened where required. Stock parts, however, will be available all over the country.

Divestment of Erpi comes after a long series of discussions, proposals and counter-proposals among the Telephone interests, various motion picture interests who considered the purchase, and outside groups who had a possible purchase in mind. It is reported to have been brought about by the Government's investigation into the Telephone company's growing interests in fields other than communications to which it originally was committed as a public utility.

This Week In Pictures

ABOUT 1914 the late and famous Marie Dressler starred in a hit film titled "Tillie's Tomato Surprise." Exhibitor readers of the HERALD who have long memories may see history, and publicity, repeating itself in the picture at the left in which Miss Gladys Swarthout is undergoing makeup repairs for a slight black eye received in her 1937 version of the tomato surprise, a barrage of the fruity vegetable for which she was the target during filming of "Romance in the Dark." The singer's husband, Frank Chapman, accused by the Paramount publicity department of having thrown the particular tomato which blackened his wife's eye, seems almost too pleased with his marksmanship. The scene, incidentally, involved sending to New York for tomatoes said to be more squashy than the California product.

As one result of the recent agreements among the International Projector Corporation, Electrical Research Products, Inc., and Radio Corporation of America, George Friedl, Jr., above, is the new director of the sound engineering division of International. In his new post he will make a survey of sound reproduction requirements for the motion picture field, recommend and design new equipment to meet the practical problems of theatre owners, and work in general for the integration of sound and visual projection equipment. His appointment is the initial move by International in its preparations for the manufacture of sound equipment under the terms of its recently acquired license.

SIXTH NATIONAL NEWSREEL, ON 16 mm., STARTS JAN. 1

Exhibitors Making Local Reels Will Cooperate with DeVry Company of Chicago in Providing Material for Project

A sixth national motion picture newsreel, this one on 16 millimeter film, will bow in on January 1st, marking the first competitive interruption in the newsreel structure as it is presently constructed since Universal resurrected its abandoned newsreel at the advent of sound in 1927.

The new reel will be distributed by the Herman A. DeVry Company, Chicago manufacturer of socalled "portable" and 16mm motion picture projectors, both sound and silent.

The decision was made on the strength of the growing popularity of local 16mm newsreels being produced by exhibitors on events and personalities in the news of their immediate neighborhoods or towns. The new national newsreel will be released for use in any theatre throughout the country, and will be so made as to combine with the local 16mm newsreels which theatres now are starting on their own. According to the DeVry company more than a hundred of the local newsreels will be in operation within the next few weeks in various cities in all territories.

The theatres which seem most interested in the 16mm newsreel are those in the smaller cities. The 16mm local newsreel idea is said to have developed into a box office factor as exhibitors have found encouraging attendance figures for the nights on which the newsreel is shown. Theatres started turning to local newsreels this fall in their search for some new device to take the place of chance games and giveaways.

Plan for Exhibitor Production

In order to make it possible for theatres who so desire to produce their own newsreel, the DeVry company has set up a plan whereby the exhibitor may lease the equipment. A camera, projector, exposure meter, reels, splicing machine and other necessary paraphernalia are included in the outfit, which rents for $12.50 a week. The film for making local reels costs extra, but through the DeVry company negative film may be purchased and developing and printing obtained. In other words, an exhibitor can produce a newsreel that will run from five to eight minutes for $15 to $20 a week.

The idea of the national 16mm newsreel is to make available to all theatres showing local newsreels, national scenes which would be of special interest to their audiences and which now are not available in the 16mm form from the 35mm newsreel as supplied by the large companies.

Would Submit Reels to DeVry

The theatres using the DeVry plan are to submit their own local newsreel negatives to the company for any use it desires to make of them. In this way the theatres showing the 16mm newsreels will send their films to the home office and out of this footage will come the material for the national newsreel. It is estimated that the national newsreel will consist of a 100-foot reel each week and as this runs about four minutes it can be coupled with a 100-foot reel of local material and give the exhibitor a complete newsreel.

Laboratories Contacted

Many theatres probably will not be able to get much more than 100 feet a week of local news. In these instances the national newsreel offered will make up the remainder of the program.

To aid in establishment of film laboratories to handle the films for the theatres, the DeVry company said it is making arrangements with independent local film laboratories throughout the country to handle this film on a rush service basis and at a nominal cost.

Nine Months Renewal Privilege

The contracts for the newsreel equipment, along with the assistance of the DeVry company to help in getting the reel started, call for a renewal privilege at the end of nine months. The contract when renewed is open to a reduced price, in the expectation that the longer the plan is conducted the less it will cost to operate, from an equipment standpoint.

In order to help stimulate the taking of 16mm films suitable for the national newsreel the De Vry company is planning to establish an organization of 16mm newsreel photographers who will be supplied with identification cards to assist them in covering news events. The films they take would be sent to the home office, if a newsreel is not operated in the vicinity. Footage rates for usable material will be paid to the amateurs whose films are used.

Besides being available to theatres which can use 16mm film, the national newsreel will be sold through photographic supply shops to owners of 16mm home projectors. Owners of eight mm projectors also will be able to buy copies of the newsreels for their equipment, as plans call for reduction of the national newsreel also to this size film.

In making the newsreel the film will be shot at sound speed and a sound track will be recorded for the national 16mm news.

Because of the interest being shown currently in the 16mm newsreel by theatres, it is understood that other companies which make 16mm equipment are planning to investigate the plan and possibly start special departments for this service alone, such as the DeVry company has done.

DeVry will charge $12.50 a week for the newsreel equipment rather than the $7.50 first announced. Additional equipment will be furnished, however, such as tripod, small projector for cutting purposes and fast lens. Total cost of equipment to be leased to the exhibitor by the company under the arrangement is estimated at near the $1,000 mark were it to be purchased.

Considerable local newsreel activity already is reported from theatres in Grand Junction, Colorado; in Pueblo, and in T. C. Riddells' Erie theatre in Hugo, Oklahoma, where Mr. Riddels himself produces such a reel. The Tosa theatre in Wawatosa, Wis., reports business improved by the new reel, as does Walter Green, theatre operator at Morgantown, N. C. Iowa, Illinois and Indiana, Wisconsin, North Carolina and Minnesota also report similar activities.

190 Theatres Served

The Burton Jerrel "News Flashes" in Iowa is serving local newsreels to some 190 theatres in that state (MOTION PICTURE HERALD, page 92, August 14th).

In Minneapolis, Radio Station WTCN and the World theatre are cooperating on a local newsreel covering that city and St. Paul, filming events of local interest, particularly those upon which the radio station's news broadcasts place emphasis. The World theatre provides the camera equipment and cameraman, and Stephen Wells, publicity director of WTCN, edits the film and writes the continuity. Charles Irving is the commentator.

The Experiment at Evanston, Ill.

The 16mm newsreel being produced by the Stadium theatre in Evanston, Ill., is an example of the development in the Chicago area. Interest in the weekly showing has been growing rapidly, according to Stuart Tomber, manager of the theatre. The newsreel is worked out in cooperation with the Evanston News-Index, daily newspaper, which supplies the cameraman with information regarding news events in the territory.

Evanston is the home of Northwestern University, and many of the school activities lend themselves to the newsreel's coverage. Football games have been shown on the screen a few hours after the closing whistle with encouraging support from students and supporters of the University.

Full cooperation has been given the theatre by the University, which plans to use some of the footage for showing to alumni groups and prospective students.

The cameramen are two college students of experience. John Fuller has made many travel films in the far north. Bart Spence, his associate, also has been active in the 16mm line for several years.

Newspapers Cooperate

The Stadium theatre is a 1,200-seat house and the throw from the projection booth, where the 16mm projector is set up, is close to 120 feet. The projector used is a rotary sprocket intermittent machine made by the DeVry company.

Newspaper cooperation has been reported general. In Evanston, the News-Index runs stories about the reel almost daily and prior to the showing of the reel, which is for one night a week only, a half-page advertisement is given the theatre for advertising the film along with the current feature attractions.

UNION CAMERAMEN WATCH EXPERIMENT

Orders have been issued from national headquarters of the IATSE in Washington that locals of the union shall follow closely the development of 16 millimeter newsreels in theatres.

The aim is to prepare the local unions to enter the field when the occasion is considered appropriate.

"BROADCAST" NAMEFUL

A HERALD PICTORIAL PREVIEW

by GUS McCARTHY
in Hollywood

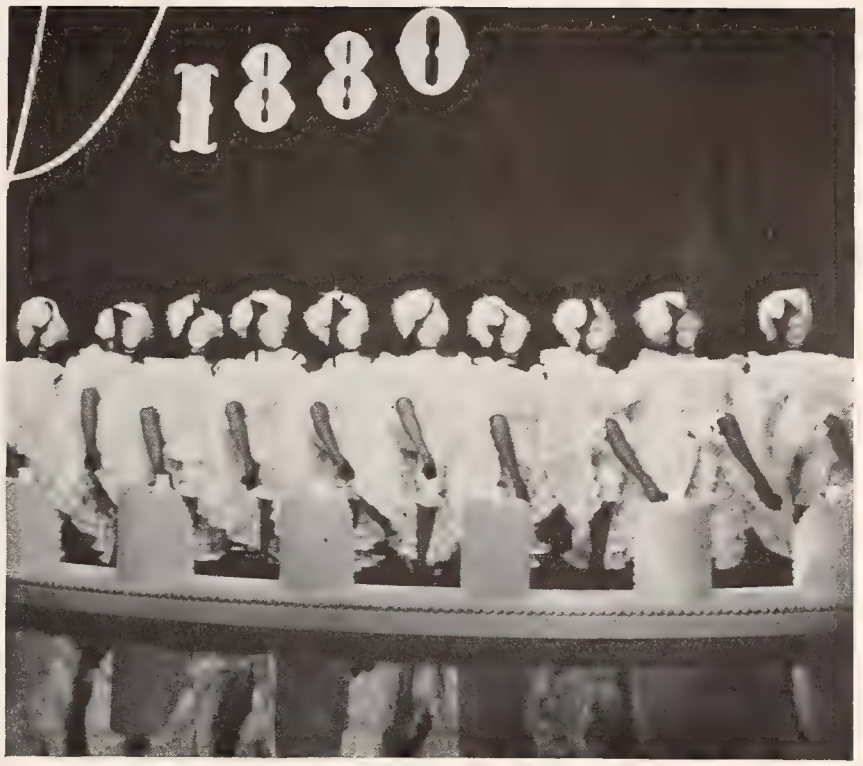
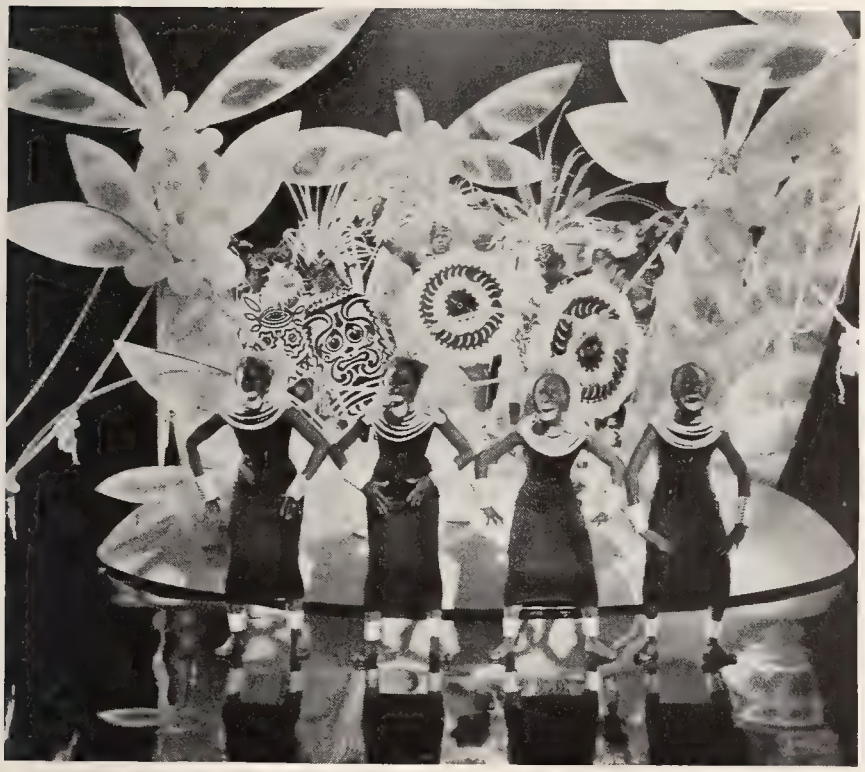
FIVE years ago Paramount conceived the idea of making a picture in which famous radio, vaudeville, concert, opera, and legitimate stage personalities could be brought, logically, to the screen. The success of the first venture, 1932's "The Big Broadcast," led to a decision to make an annual edition of the idea. Through the intervening years, the scope of "The Big Broadcasts" has widened until they have become a cinematic revue including all types of entertainment from low comedy to farce, from chorus girls to grand opera, and with a love story included. All have been strung together on the thread of a comedy premise associated in some manner with radio broadcasting.

With a wealth of novel production, thematic, musical, personnel, photographic and technical detail provided, "The Big Broadcast of 1938" adheres to the established formula. In order that necessary novelty may be attained in successive treatments of the same idea, Paramount makes sure of freshness and difference by entrusting each production to new hands, and to the farthest possible extent assigns different players to each edition. Thus this year Harlan Thompson, maker of "Champagne Waltz" and "College Holiday," is the producer. Mitchell Leisen with a dozen hit pictures to his credit, embracing such varied forms of entertainment as "Swing High, Swing Low," "Hands Across the Table," "Murder at the Vanities," "The Cradle Song," "Death Takes a Holiday" and the last "Broadcast," is the director. The musical score and music and lyrics for the featured song numbers, of which there are five, were prepared by Leo Robin and Ralph Ranger. It will be remembered that, among many other song hits, they composed "Love in Bloom" and "June in January."



Cast assignments in "The Big Broadcasts" always have been a subject of important consideration. Previously such notables as Stuart Erwin, Jack Benny, Bing Crosby, and Burns and Allen, to name a few, have held starring spots. This year, comedian W. G. Fields, following a long absence, is returned to the screen in the leading role. The new featured player is Bob Hope, starred in such musical stage shows as "Roberta," "Red, Hot and Blue," "Ziegfeld Follies" and recently a notable of the radio. The specialty artists are noted operatic stars, Kirsten Flagstad and Tito Guizar, and the featured musical organization is Shep Fields and his orchestra.



There will be an abundance of established screen names for exploitation attention. Important in the scheme of things are clownish singing and acting Martha Raye and the exotic Dorothy Lamour, now attracting considerable attention in "The Hurricane." Sharing the spotlight with them are Ben Blue, eccentric dancing comedian, Lief Erikson, seen in "College Holiday," "Waikiki Wedding" and "Conquest," and Shirley Ross. Additionally listed are Lynne Overman, Grace Bradley, Rufe Davis, Stanley King, Rex Moore, Bernard Punsley, Don Marion and Dorothy Howe. A bevy of chorus beauties will accentuate the eye glamour.

While the thematic idea originally was found in a Frederick Hazlitt Brennan story, which Howard Lindsay and Russell Crouse adapted and which Walter de Leon, Francis Martin and Ken Englund whipped into screenplay form, it is rather hazardous to attempt a descriptive summarization. Practically all the action takes place aboard an ultra-modern ocean liner. The reader is referred to the accompanying photographs for an idea of the bizarre production quality.

From an unbiased viewpoint, ignoring the enthusiasm that prevails at Paramount as "The Big Broadcast of 1938" rolls on towards completion, it appears that the production will embody all the forms of entertainment for which modern audiences are demonstrating an appetite. The release will follow January 14, 1938.

GOLDWYN AND KORDA ANNOUNCE THEY ARE ALL SET TO TAKE OVER U A

Stock of Chaplin, Fairbanks and Miss Pickford Will Be Security for $4,500,000 Loan from English Companies

After almost 19 years of participation in the activities of United Artists, the three remaining founders of the organization, Mary Pickford, Charles Chaplin and Douglas Fairbanks, are about to relinguish their controlling interest in the company to their two partners, Samuel Goldwyn and Alexander Korda.

The deal, whereby Mr. Korda and Mr. Goldwyn are to exercise options they hold on the stock owned by the trio, has been pending several months and was the sole subject of a series of conferences held in New York City during the last two-and-a-half weeks. The secret sessions came to an end Saturday with the joint announcement from Mr. Goldwyn and Mr. Korda that all details for the transaction, including its financing, had been agreed upon.

Details on the financing of the transaction were not mentioned in the brief announcement, but before departing for Hollywood Mr. Korda disclosed that a group of English companies will advance the $4,500,000 in cash needed to exercise the options which expire December 23rd. Mr. Chaplin, who has insisted upon cash for his one-fifth share of the company, will receive $2,000,000, while Miss Pickford and Mr. Fairbanks will each take $1,250,000 in cash and $750,000 in new preferred stock.

The stock now held by the trio will be pledged as security for the loan, and thus the actual controlling stock will not be owned by Mr. Goldwyn and Mr. Korda until after the loan is repaid. However, under the arrangement, Mr. Korda and Mr. Goldwyn will have complete authority, according to Mr. Korda. He said:

"Everything will be even. Goldwyn and myself will split authority. We will share 50-50."

Mr. Korda said he did not know the names of the British companies but most prominent among those mentioned were Prudential Assurance Company, principal backer of Mr. Korda's company, London Films, and Lazenove, Akroid and Company. Hemphill, Noyes & Co., of which Stanton Griffis, of Paramount, is a partner, also was mentioned but Mr. Griffis denied the company was interested.

Meanwhile, Mr. Goldwyn, en route to the coast, announced in Chicago that Bank of America, National Association of San Francisco and Los Angeles had no interest in the financing.

One of the immediate results of the announcement was a report that David O. Selznick was leaving United Artists to rejoin MGM, which he had left to form Selznick International.

Once the agreements were signed by the two principals, all who had taken part in the conferences left New York. Mr. Goldwyn and Maurice Silverstone, United Artists managing director in England, left for the coast by train; Mr. Korda and David Rose, financial adviser of Samuel Goldwyn, Inc., also went to the coast, but they went by airplane, and E. H. Lever, secretary of the Prudential Assurance Company, of England, sailed for his home aboard the Queen Mary.

CIRCUIT DIRECTORS WILL MEET MONDAY

United Artists Theatres Circuit Corporation will conduct its election of directors at its annual stockholders' meeting in Baltimore Monday. All directors are expected to be reelected.

Although the company's annual statement for the year ended August 31st may not be prepared in time to send it to stockholders it is expected a complete report will be submitted at the Baltimore meeting.

The circuit has an interest in approximately 250 theatres.

Mr. Goldwyn, silent on all plans while the conferences were in progress, declined to elaborate on the formal announcement. His only comment on the entire deal was to assert that the United Artists board of directors will not have to approve the deal.

Mr. Lever, having been empowered to act for the British financing principals, took the necessary papers with him when he sailed, and is expected to have them signed immediately when he arrives in London.

Mr. Korda said he believed the legal documents would be drafted and signed and the options exercised within the next two weeks. He also explained there will be a new board of directors for the company but that there will not be a voting trusteeship. Aside from saying there will be some "minor adjustments" when he and Mr. Goldwyn take over the company, Mr. Korda said he did not know who would be on the new board of directors or whether a report that Mr. Silverstone is to become president would be borne out. Mr. Goldwyn, in Chicago, said that all reports linking Mr. Silverstone to the presidency were unfounded.

The future policy, according to Mr. Korda, has not been definitely determined but, as for his and Mr. Goldwyn's aims, he declared: "We aim to distribute as inexpensively as possible and give producing members the benefit. This also applies to outside producers who distribute through us as well."

Text of Announcement

The formal announcement made by Mr. Korda and Mr. Goldwyn was as follows:

"All parties are in agreement on the conditions by which financing will be made available to Mr. Goldwyn and Mr. Korda to exercise their option. Final action, the exercising of the option, is being deferred until the legal advisers of the various interested parties, both in the United States and England, have examined the proposed details."

The announcement, cabled to London, was greeted with caution. It was pointed out that the phrase, "all parties are in agreement on the conditions by which financing will be made available," made it clear that final papers had not been signed.

Under the company's new arrangement, Mr. Korda said he will produce six pictures a year for international release and that the company will distribute about 20 annually. He also said plans called for leaving the company open to first class independent producers.

In connection with financing productions, Mr. Korda declared: "We don't need working cash. We have enough to take care of it." He added that arrangements were made for the financing of Walter Wanger productions.

Mr. Wanger said he knew nothing about the arrangements made for his future production activity at United Artists.

The blocks of stock which Miss Pickford and Mr. Fairbanks will accept with the cash for their present holdings will be the only interests retained by the five founders of United Artists.

Miss Pickford, Mr. Chaplin and Mr. Fairbanks, with D. W. Griffith and William S. Hart, signed the articles of incorporation for the company April 17, 1919.

Having become acquainted with William G. McAdoo, former secretary of the treasury and son-in-law of President Wilson, while making personal appearances in connection with the Liberty Loan drives, the founders proposed that Mr. McAdoo accept the presidency of the new organization. He declined the position but agreed to serve as counsel and his assistant, Oscar Price, was elected president. Mr. Price served for one year and then Hiram Abrams succeeded him as head of the organization, which was incorporated under the laws of Delaware.

Dennis F. O'Brien was chosen vice-president when the company was organized. He has served until the present both in that capacity and as legal adviser.

During the first ten years of its existence, United Artists released pictures for 29 producers, and added three additional owner-members to the corporation. Joseph M. Schenck, now head of Twentieth Century-Fox, was the first of the new owners. He was elected chairman of the board of directors Dec. 5, 1924, and fostered a policy of expansion. It was during this period that Mr. Goldwyn aligned himself with United Artists. Among others associated with the company at that time were Gloria Swanson, Morris Gest, John Barrymore, Corinne Griffith.

Mr. Goldwyn, after producing such pictures as "Stella Dallas," "Bulldog Drummond," "Arrowsmith," "Palmy Days," "Whoopee" and "Condemned," was elected, on Oct. 13, 1927, as an owner-member of the corporation over which he will now rule as half owner.

Shortly after his election, Gloria Swanson joined the company in a similar capacity.

Changes from 1926 to 1935

Mr. Abrams died in 1926 and Mr. Schenck was elected to fill the vacancy. He served until 1935 and during that period the United Artists Theatre Circuit, a group of 20 pre-release theatres, was organized; Walt Disney began releasing his cartoons through United Artists; Edward Small and Harry M. Goetz organized Reliance Pictures, Inc., for exclusive release through United Artists, and Mr. Korda formed his own company, London Film Productions, and became affiliated with United Artists as an independent producer.

Mr. Schenck, in 1933, formed an independent producing firm with Darryl Zanuck, Twentieth Century Pictures. The company's product was released through United Artists until 1935, when Mr. Schenck resigned to amalgamate his interests with Fox. In the same year, Mr. Korda became one of the producer-owners of the organization. In the meantime Mr. Hart, Miss Swanson and Mr. Griffith had sold out their interests.

Mr. Selznick formed his company in June, 1935, leaving Metro, and contracted to distribute his early output through United Artists, and Walter Wanger joined the roster of United Artists producers this year. Jock Whitney's Pioneer Pictures meanwhile became an important stockholder and financier in the Selznick International unit in 1936.

WARNERS SECOND TO GO ON AIR; ALLIED SEES LOSS OF MILLIONS

Cleveland Exhibitors' Secretary Cites Newspaper's Article on Industry's Entry Into Radio; Allied Asks Study of Effects

The second link in the "merger" of the radio and motion picture industries was welded by Warner Brothers this week when it contracted to present its stars en masse in 52 weekly broadcasts from Hollywood under the sponsorship of the American Tobacco Company, manufacturers of Lucky Strike cigarets.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer took the initial step toward uniting the two fields when it launched a series of programs from Hollywood under the title of "Good News of 1938," two weeks ago.

The most recent attack on the industry's first broadcasting venture, sponsored with MGM by General Foods in behalf of Maxwell House coffee, was voiced by George Erdmann, secretary of the Cleveland Motion Picture Exhibitors Association. His personal denunciation of the show was mailed to members of the association along with a clipping of an article in the Cleveland Plain Dealer headed "Some Sad Notes on the Motion Picture's Entry Into the Radio Field."

At the same time, in a bulletin issued at its national headquarters in Washington, Allied States Association took up the question of motion picture stars broadcasting, pointing out that "there is a serious question whether radio broadcasting by stars is not costing the industry millions due to loss of popularity resulting from the inability of such stars to project their personalities (their only stock in trade) over the air waves."

Charges Direct Competition

In his comments on the MGM broadcast, Mr. Erdmann explained that Thursday nights were selected for the broadcasts because they "will conflict least with theatre business."

"In my personal opinion," Mr. Erdmann continued, "that is just about the poorest excuse for an alibi ever used by a distributor to go into direct competition with his customers.

"Inasmuch as Thursday nights will least conflict with theatre business, let us hope other distributors who take to the air will also select Thursdays, then maybe we can save on film rentals, and give us the opportunity of enjoying their programs with our families at home."

Warner Brothers chose Wednesday nights. In announcing that the first program will be offered December 1st and the series will be titled "Your Hollywood Parade," Warner Brothers said arrangements for the broadcasts were made with it and its affiliate, Transamerican Broadcasting and Television Corporation, through the agency of Lord & Thomas. The broadcasts are to go over a coast-to-coast National Broadcasting Company hookup from 10 to 11 P. M., EST.

"Musical, Dramatic, Topical"

The company's announcement also said:

"Designed purely for entertainment and enlisting the entire resources of the Warner studios for personnel and material, the program will be musical, dramatic and topical in nature, including previews of forthcoming Warner Brothers pictures and also featuring guest stars of prominence in all fields. Thus a panoramic radio view of Hollywood and its manifold activities will be afforded by the series."

Dick Powell, who is under contract to the studio, will be master of ceremonies and the central star of the programs. Orchestral work will be under the direction of Leo Forbstein, studio musical director, and Dudley Chambers will be chorus director.

Among the players who will broadcast are Bette Davis, Kay Francis, Errol Flynn, Edward G. Robinson, Leslie Howard, Olivia de Havilland, Fernand Gravet, Pat O'Brien, Boris Karloff, George Brent, Claude Rains, Joan Blondell, Lola and Priscilla Lane, Margaret Lindsay, Anita Louise, Johnnie (Scat) Davis, Hugh Herbert, Ian Hunter, Humphrey Bogart, Basil Rathbone, Frank McHugh, Beverly Roberts, Dick Foran and Ann Sheridan.

"All the programs will be planned and produced with the close cooperation of Lord & Thomas, Transamerican and Warner Brothers," the statement added.

Cites Free Entertainment

Allied States Association, in its bulletin, called attention to the fact that the chief argument against the broadcasting by stars is that the free entertainment tends to keep patrons from the theatres.

"Of course," Allied said, "this applies to all broadcasting and since that can not be stopped maybe it is better that some stars occupy the available channels than more accomplished radio entertainers who would provide tougher competition.

"So long as broadcasting means ready money to the stars, their agents and (dare we suggest it?) the producers to whom they are under contract, exhibitor squawks are going to be ignored. The only argument that can have any weight is one addressed to the cupidity—not the fairness—of those responsible for the stars being on the air."

Says Films Are Affected

To substantiate its argument that radio broadcasting by stars may be costing the industry millions of dollars, Allied named Fred Astaire as an example and explained:

"It hardly seems fair to name one out of so many, but in choosing Fred Astaire we are selecting a star who possesses great popularity with the theatre owners and thus we are absolved from any suspicion of malice."

The bulletin then pointed out that when Mr. Astaire went on the air he was deprived of his principal assets—"his dancing and his funny facial expressions and movements in doing and saying things."

"Since his appearance on the air," the statement continued, "his pictures have slipped at the box office."

Proposes Study of Effects

The bulletin also related how Mr. Astaire recently gave a radio broadcast of bits from his new picture "Damsel in Distress."

"For the sake of RKO, Fred Astaire and RKO's customers, this picture had better be good," Allied said. "There is no clear indication as yet that it is not good. Certainly it could not possibly be as bad as it was made to appear by this broadcast."

Allied then proposed that an accurate check be kept of the stars who appear on the radio and of the effect on the box office.

"We are convinced," the bulletin concluded, "that, based on the facts disclosed, the producers will stipulate that their stars shall not go on the air unless they have displayed such aptitude for broadcasting that they will not risk their box office value by doing so."

RADIO SCRIPTS SEEN AID TO BOX OFFICE

Radio dramatization of certain pictures increases the box office value of the films, Monroe Greenthal, advertising and publicity director for United Artists, said in announcing his company is increasing its picture script service to radio stations.

He emphasized the point that scripts are not mailed to stations, but are delivered in person by the company's representatives. "In that way we can get the time on the air that we want," he continued. "We certainly don't want the script for a rough-and-tumble picture to be used with a women's hand lotion program."

As an example, Mr. Greenthal attributed the matinee success of "Stella Dallas" to the fact scripts were used in the morning and late afternoon to attract women. No dramatizations are given after 7 P.M., Mr. Greenthal said, because if people are going to turn on their radios and hear the story they will not be going to the theatre.

The campaign for "Nothin' Sacred," he explained, will be concentrated on the fist fight staged by Carole Lombard and Frederic March. Special efforts will be made, Mr. Greenthal said, to have the scripts used on fight programs.

Scripts are not used for musicals, he added, because the plot would have to be so sketchy listeners might get the wrong viewpoint on the picture and not attend the theatres.

Lancelot Jessel Jousts for Guinevere Hollywood

Comedian Chides Fidler, Skolsky and Pantages for "Exposés"

In the first national radio program ever to attack air columnists who delve into the private personal lives of film stars, George Jessel, on Sunday in his Mutual coast to coast "Thirty Minutes in Hollywood" program, chided three columnists, James Fidler, Sidney Skolsky and Lloyd Pantages, for their lambastings of film personalities and their exposés of private lives.

Less than 24 hours later, according to Mr. Jessel, he had received approximately 500 telegrams lauding him and his efforts to "clean up the air waves." The telegrams, he said, came from persons inside and outside of the film industry, and included one from Will Hays, in which Mr. Hays was reported by the comedian to have said, "You're on the right track."

Audience of 1,000 Applauds

In an after-broadcast talk at the Filmarte theatre, whence the program is broadcast, Mr. Jessel, who is a producer at Warner-First National during the week, asked the audience of 1,000 persons if they approved of his campaign. They applauded loudly.

Mr. Jessel was introduced as "First Fiddling Jessel, who will bring you every once in a while a worm's-eye view of the people who describe the people in movie land—a critic of the critics."

The record of the Jessel comment follows in part:

"Hello, folks, down through the years Hollywood has been the target for all sorts of gossipers, tattlers and busybodies in general. Today movieland is badgered by a new specie — the Microphoniac — whose motto is: if you can't say something good about anybody, be sure and broadcast it.

"He will also whisper in your ear the big secret that Joe Whosiz and Molly Whatsis are being married in strict confidence next week—but don't tell anybody—the bride wants to surprise her mother! It's all good fun, and I see no harm in it myself, but if they can dish it out, they ought to be able to take it!

A Letter to Fidler

"An open letter to Jimmy Fidler: 'Dear Jimmy; I am a good friend of yours, and I feel I have the right to speak my mind, and vice versa. You must remember that you are in the country's eye, Jimmy. Week before last, however, you were a little bit out of order. You had a closing remark that you yourself would not give anybody half a bell for—so I'll be more charitable. . . . For the same sour note that you finished with I'll give you half a green persimon—"Some of the movie directors should be directing traffic and some of the traffic cops should be directing pictures."

"Well, Jimmy, there are a bunch of swell directors directing good pictures, and good traffic cops are directing traffic and preventing accidents, but it's about time that somebody started directing the accidents that turn out to be commentators.

"'Seriously, Jimmy, and this goes for the folks in your racket who are not playing the game fairly, you have no right to tear down the other fellow's product to advertise the one you are selling.

"'The career of a movie star is a product of the company he or she is working for, and their private lives are their own. They are not public property to be stared at like the billboard of an advertised commodity, and you dare not say, "Mr. or Miss so-and-so was doing the high spots last night. She will have plenty of rings under her eyes in the morning when she gets on the set, and it's going to be tough for the picture she's making for the so-and-so company." So my open letter to her is, "Look out for yourself."

Skolsky Next Target

Mr. Jessel next turned his attention to Sidney Skolsky.

"And now we come to Junior, little Sidney Skolsky. He's traveled a long way from Lewis & Gordon's office boy to a big shot on the radio. Sidney, I can't write you an open letter—it would be too heavy for you to lift—so I'm writing this on the back of a postage stamp. You always finish with 'Don't get me wrong . . . I love Holywood.'

"Well, don't you get Hollywood wrong. It isn't fair to a great industry for you to give national prominence to anyone who writes you such a criticism as this: 'In a picture I saw last night the leading man walked in to a house with a brown suit and came out with a gray one.' This is the most educated country on the globe, and ninety-nine and nine-tenths of the people have the intelligence to realize that the camera can't follow the man while he changes his suit.

"And remember, Sidney, and this goes for all the fellows in your racket, a little tolerance is protection to yourself.

"You know you are all going to appear in pictures—sure you are. Every commentator that comes out to Hollywood has a typewriter in one hand and a makeup box in the other. You may be in pictures soon yourself. Let's hope when you first flash on the screen the same people whose letters you print don't say: 'Look Mamma, It's a movie boner'."

Next — Lloyd Pantages

Then to the third objective of Mr. Jessel's sallies, Lloyd Pantages:

"Listen, Loydy Poydy Poo, you're just starting a new program, and I for one know how hard that is—because you're around pretty early. I'll never forget the first radio broadcast I did—six o'clock in the morning singing lullabies to the gamblers—but take it from me, Loydy, because I've been around a long time, you can do more good building things up than tearing them down. Try to develop your sense of humor instead of your sense of rumor, and remember, it's because of the good things in Hollywood that you have your job on the air."

Good-Will Campaign In Australian Press

To help bolster theatre attendance in Melbourne, gravely affected during a recent infantile paralysis epidemic, exhibitors sought the aid of newspapers to restore the confidence of the public. The press donated space for several days for a series of advertisements, prepared by representatives of the film industry. Reproduced above is one which appeared in the Melbourne Herald.

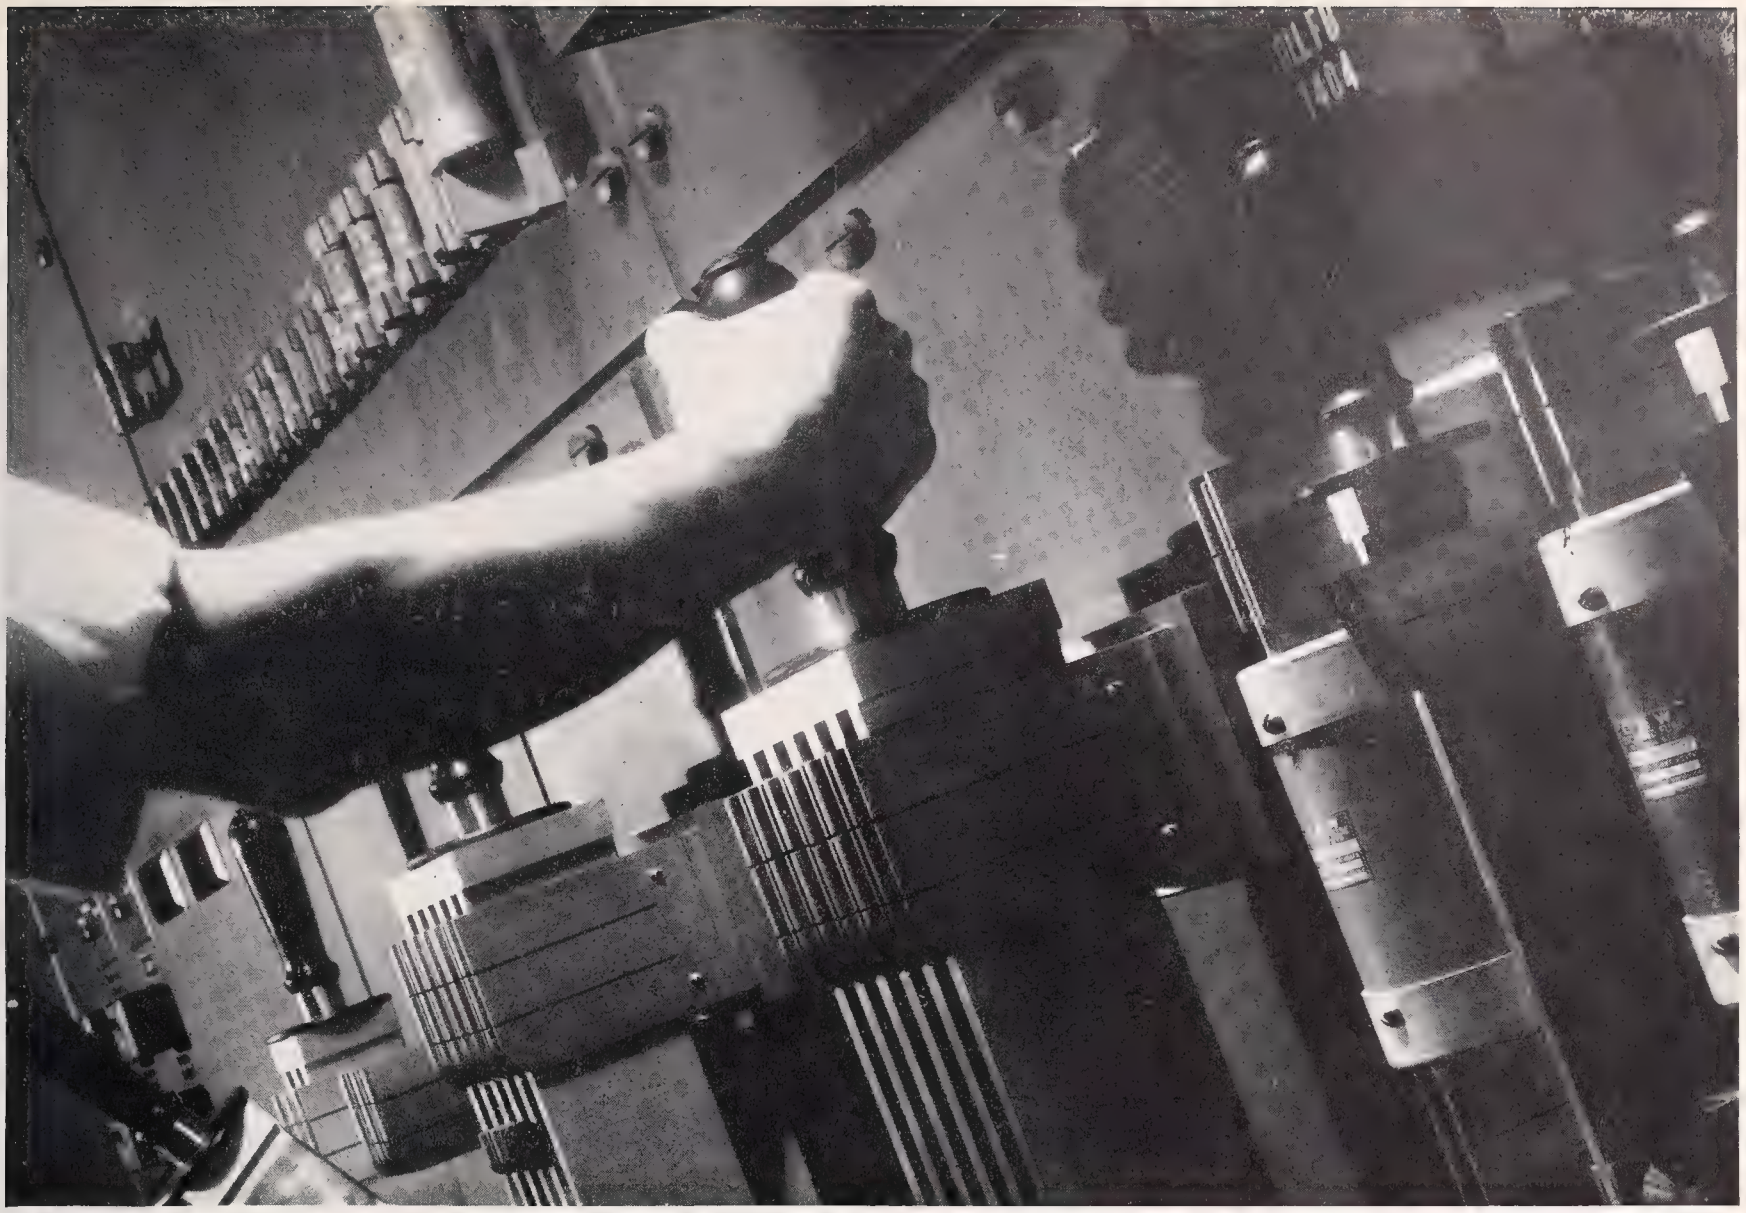
Hartley Joins Staff of General Theatres Equipment

E. M. Hartley, for many years manager of Photophone sales for RCA, has joined the managerial staff of General Theatres Equipment Corporation and its subsidiaries, National Theatre Supply Company and International Projector Corporation.



Mr. Hartley immediately will assume full charge and direction of the sales of sound equipment for National and, as manager of that division, will make his headquarters at its general offices, 92 Gold Street, New York.

In August, General Theatres Equipment Corporation was licensed by both RCA and Electrical Research Products, under all patents of both companies relating to sound reproducing equipment and electrical and mechanical equipment of this character will, in the future, constitute a major item of manufacture and sales by the subsidiaries of that corporation.

WB Meeting Cancelled

Tuesday's meeting of the Warner Brothers board of directors in New York was cancelled because Harry M. and Albert Warner were on the Coast.

Daniel F. Greenhouse this week was appointed by RKO Radio to fill the new post of managing director of the Manila branch.

COMPLETE COMPOSITE CAMPAIGN!

Including Description of the Promotion Illustrated in Preceding Double Spread

EXPLOITATION shown inside and above is described in the following items so that you can readily visualize the possibilities of their application to your popular-price engagement. All four Road-Show cities are represented—giving you a composite, cross-section campaign which will directly box-office influence all types of movie-goers.

FIREFLY CANDY. This was a special contest and advertising stunt. 56 full windows and the same number of counter displays appeared in every Dutch Mill Candy Store in Chicago and Cook County. For 3 week-ends that company newspaper-advertised a special Week-End Firefly Mixture at $1.25 for a two-pound package. All tie-up media mentioned the picture. An attractive young lady, in Dutch costume and wooden shoes, handed out "Comment Cards" to each person entering the theatre. Movie-goers were instructed to write their picture opinion in as few words as possible and return the card to the Dutch Mill Hostess stationed in the lobby. For the best comments at each of the two performances daily, the winners received a two-pound box of the special "Firefly" Candy Mixture. This contest was advertised in the newspapers, store windows and theatre lobby.

FIREFLY HATS. An outstanding cooperative arrangement was made with Chicago's Davis Store. Its hat designer created a special model known as "The Firefly", similar to the one worn by MacDonald in the picture. An entire window was given to it with background showing giant cutouts and production scenes. Ads on "The Firefly Hat" ran in the Chicago Tribune and Daily News. Store-wide announcements also called the public's attention to it. The Boston Store followed with a Firefly Hat creation of its own—and exploited it just as strongly.

FIREFLY MUSIC. All leading music stores cooperated with window and counter space. Every one of the popular orchestra and band leaders in each city played one or more numbers on his program. Some of the music went over the air via band radio broadcasts. Special tie-up displays appeared in windows of many musical instrument stores. There are production scenes showing Miss MacDonald at the harpsichord and Allan Jones playing the guitar.

FIREFLY JEWELRY The 7-foot and 3-foot cutouts showing large figure of a dancing MacDonald (see press book exploitation section) are excellent for appearance in jewelry store windows featuring costume jewelry, illuminated dial watches, diamonds or anything else which sparkles, glows or has a lustrous quality or surface.

TRICK LIGHTING EFFECTS. Giant golden-yellow title letters in an Astor Theatre (N. Y.) 3-storied sign glow and flash off and on with "firefly effect". When the sign flashes off, separate dark red bulbs flicker like hundreds of fireflies. Trick lighting stunts add immeasurably to the effectiveness of the picture title and are possible on every type of theatre engagement in some form or other.

SHOWMANSHIP ADS. New York advertised the picture as the First and Biggest Attraction of the New Fall Season in a special series of ads. Singing heads of MacDonald and a glamorous Spanish Senorita illustration were other outstanding pictorial elements. Music, Romance, Spectacle, Glamour and other entertainment angles were stressed in other cities.

COUNTRY NEWSPAPERS. In the preceding double spread you will also see a printed special story with coupon attached, which went out to a special list of newspapers. Personal letters were mailed to another group of editors of country newspapers within a radius of 50 miles. A scene mat and publicity story were enclosed. Letter explained that if they ran the story and mat, and returned tear sheets, they would receive complimentary tickets.

FIREFLY RECORD. Electrical transcription was tied-in with many sustaining and sponsored programs — latter in conjunction with The Firefly Hat, Firefly Jewelry, Firefly Watch, Firefly Music, etc.

JUVENILE CONTEST. The value of continued publicity was realized on the Chicago engagement and the big circulation of the Chicago Tribune was turned into additional box-office profit. Sally Brown, columnist, and also in charge of charitable activities for this newspaper, ran a story on the front page of the second section for 6 days—devoted to picture highlights and asking all Tribune children that desired to attend a picture performance to write her a letter. Children's desire to see "The Firefly" was the keynote of the contest. Children chosen from thousands of replies paraded from the Chicago Tribune to the theatre.

SPECIAL PRESS SCREENINGS. All motion picture, drama and musical critics as well as columnists, managing and city editors were invited to special showings. Resultant reviews were very satisfactory and bore out the advisability of this procedure.

POSTAL TELEGRAPH WINDOWS. Both the Jumbo and regular-size Postal Telegrams appeared in all windows of this company and the latter were house-to-house distributed by their messenger service. See press book exploitation section regarding this tie-up.

MUSIC LOVERS. Members of all singing and musical societies received a special letter concerning the lavish musical presentations in the picture. They were also asked to make comparisons between the MacDonald-Eddy combination and former well-known singing stars who appeared in earlier stage productions of "The Firefly."

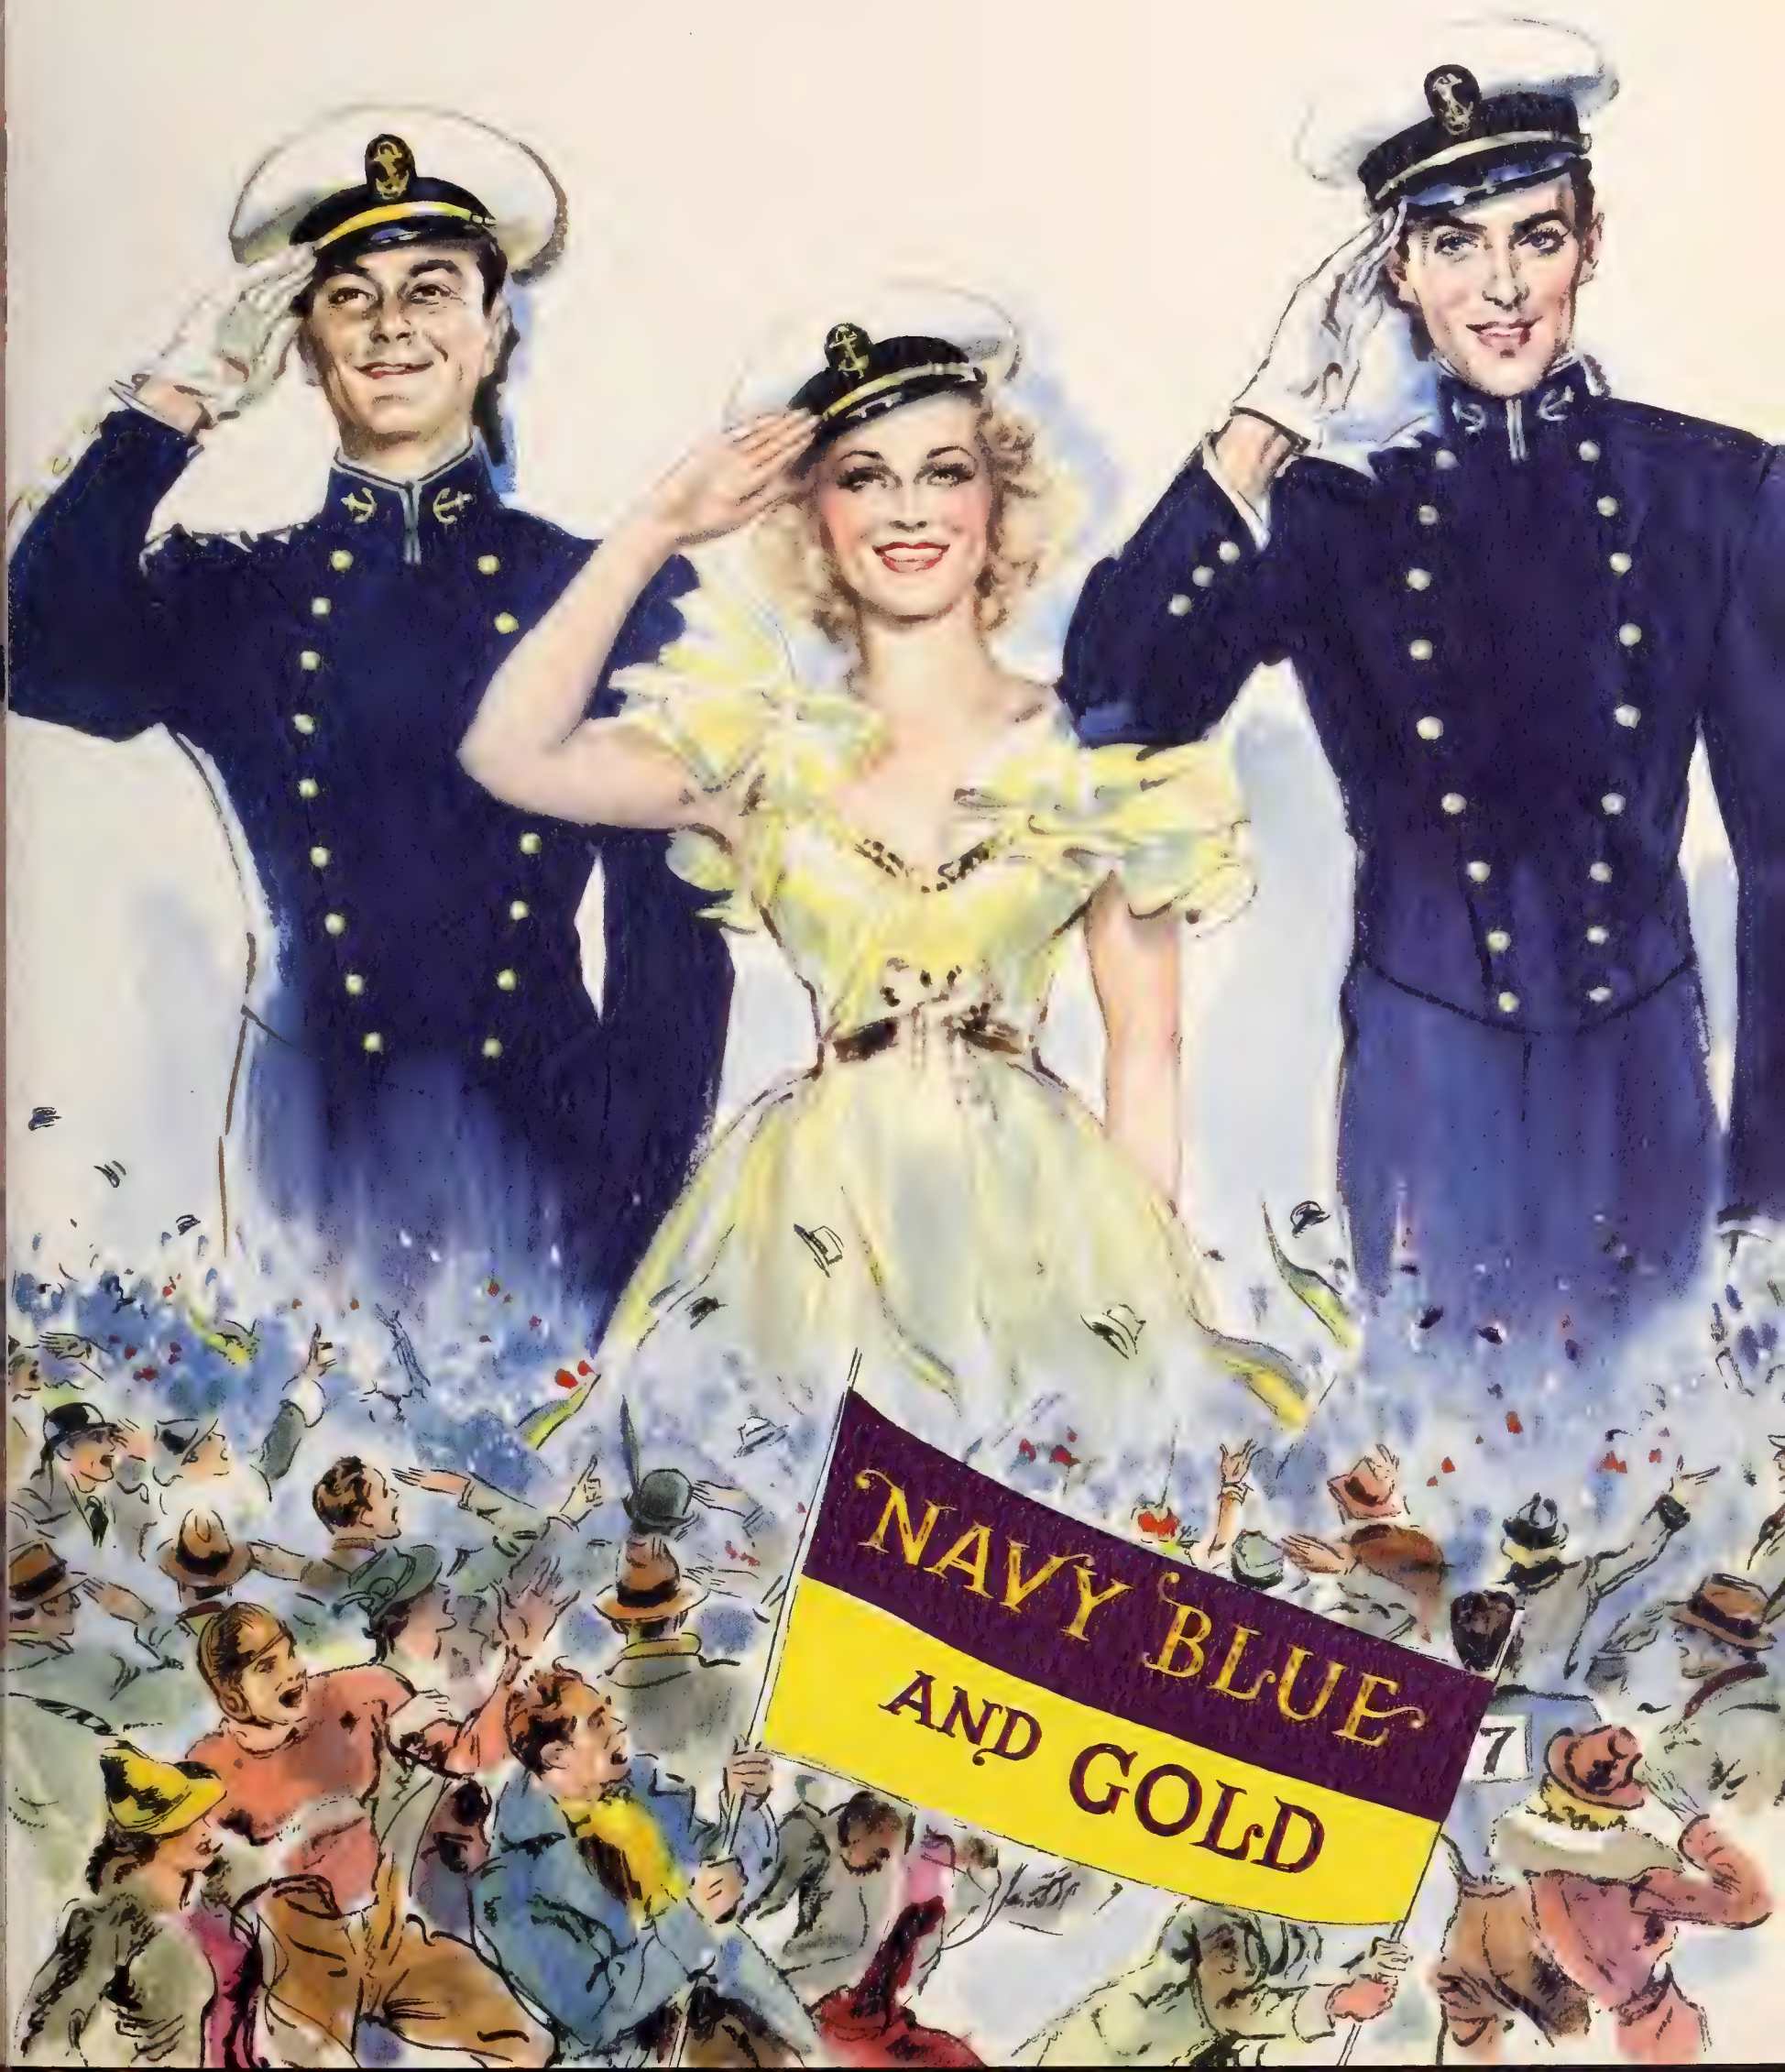
WINDOW POSTERS. Timely Events, Inc., issues a weekly poster which is placed in over 8,000 windows in the Chicago territory. Passes secured their cooperation to the extent of placing a production scene in one of the issues.

MIDGET LETTERS. Thousands of miniature envelopes, containing miniature letter-inserts, were mailed to the F.O.E. Convention, in Chicago, through cooperation of hotels. This is a good idea even for general distribution—smallness of the envelope makes it stand out from other mail received by residents. Tie it in with something like: "The Smallest Letter in the World Announces the Biggest Musical Attraction on Earth", etc.

GIANT CUTOUTS. Local enlargements of the guitar-playing figure of Allan Jones and the dancing posture of Jeanette MacDonald—one playing and singing to the other star in a combination display effect—are among the best designs you can use for box-office appeal. Make them up locally.

BIG CUTOUT LETTERS. Appliqued letters of title and star names give the utmost in smash theatre presentation. Title is a natural for this because of its brevity.

VALANCES, FLAGS AND BANNERS. Any important attraction is only as big in the public's mind as you sell it. Therefore use valance, flag and banner material on the front of your theatre.



COLOR ROTO. Those newspapers which specialize in Roto Sections printed in extra colors are excellent contact points for presentation of a "Firefly" scene via Firefly Red color.

"THREE CHEERS FOR THE NAVY BLUE AND GOLD!"

"THE BEST"

"There always has to be a best of everything. And 'Navy Blue and Gold' is probably the best Annapolis naval academy life story to date with a football sideshow. 'NAVY BLUE AND GOLD' has story punch and character that do not confine or limit its period of exhibition life to the football season. It has the stuff that should enable it to do business any day in the year. It is possessed of elements that naturally appeal to the entire audience. It has many exploitation angles. Let 'em know it is a strong character melodrama more than anything else."

—Motion Picture Daily

"REAL BOX-OFFICE"

"Metro's production of 'NAVY BLUE AND GOLD' combines elements of entertainment in such showman-like manner that it can be nothing else than real box-office. The b. o. tills should tinkle a lively tune wherever it is shown."

—Daily Variety

"HEART-WARMING"

"Ace performances by Jimmy Stewart, Robert Young and Tom Brown! Everything is well woven together in a film that is human, heart-warming and genuinely appealing."

—Los Angeles Times

"SOMETHING TO CHEER ABOUT"

"Top notch entertainment from the opening flashes to the final touchdown of the Army and Navy game is 'NAVY BLUE AND GOLD'. It kept last night's preview audience in enthusiastic response to every move. The three featured players are all so good it is difficult to credit top honors but perhaps James Stewart comes off a shade the best because of his very sympathetic role. Sam Wood's direction is splendid. A picture that is something to cheer about."

—Los Angeles Examiner

"STIRS THE EMOTIONS"

" 'NAVY BLUE AND GOLD' fine. Told so freshly and movingly, the picture should win its way to the heart of every American. With a great deal of genuine patriotic appeal it well and truly stirs the emotions. Gets under the skin in a way that will make it stick in the memory. It is so well made in all departments, thanks to an inspired production job by Sam Zimbalist and the extremely sympathetic direction of Sam Wood, that it should solo successfully in the de luxers and tally handsomely all the way down the line. It will ring plenty of bells."

Pace Slackens

New production sagged to an unusually low ebb during the second week of November. Only five pictures started. In the meantime 15 pictures were finished. Thus the active shooting program is reduced to only 30 productions actually in work.

Columbia is credited with two new films. One is a Larry Darmour production, "A Dangerous Affair," which Lewis D. Collins is directing. It will present Jack Holt, Beverly Roberts, Craig Reynolds, Douglas Wood, Spencer Charters, Marjorie Gateson, Tom Kennedy, Corbert Morris, Dorothy Appleby, Gilbert Emery, Sheila Bromley, Tully Marshall and Greta Meyer. Charles Starrett and Iris Meredith are to be featured in "The Lone Rider." Sam Nelson is directing.

Fox Starts One

"Sally, Irene and Mary" started at Twentieth Century-Fox. To date the cast includes Alice Fay, Fred Allen, Joan Davis, Portland Hoffa, Barnett Parker, Jimmy Durante, Tony Martin, Gregory Ratoff, the Peters Sisters and the Raymond Scott Quintet. William Seiter is the director.

With Dorothy Lamour, Ray Milland, Lynne Overman and J. Carroll Naish assigned to the principal roles, Paramount started "Her Jungle Love." George Archainbaud is directing.

Principal Pictures started "Hawaiian Buckaroo" in which, as Ray Taylor directs, Smith Ballew, Evelyn Knapp, George Regas and Lotus Long will be featured.

Pictures were finished in bunches as three studios each completed three, two finished two, with the balance being accounted for by two other companies. The Warner group includes "Blondes at Work," a "Torchy Blaine" story, which will present Glenda Farrell, Barton MacLane, Tom Kennedy, Ralph Sanford, Tommy Jackson, Frank Shannon, Rosella Towne, Donald Briggs, John Ridgely, Kenneth Harlan, George Guhl, Joe Cunningham, Betty Compson and Carole Landis. Frank McDonald directed. The capital letter picture in the group is "Hollywood Hotel." In it will be paraded Dick Powell, Louella Parsons, Frances Langford, Lola and Rosemary Lane, Hugh Herbert, Johnnie Davis, Mabel Todd, Alan Mowbray, Ted Healy, Allwyn Joslin, Grant Mitchell, Edgar Kennedy, Eddie Acuff, Paul Irving, Jerry Fletcher, Glenda Farrell, Fritz Feld, William Davidson, Libby Taylor, the Benny Goodman and Raymond Paige orchestras and various and sundry specialty characters. Busby Berkeley directed. "Swing Your Lady" will offer Humphrey Bogart, Dorothy McNulty, Louise Fazenda, Frank McHugh, the Weaver Brothers and Elvira, Allen Jenkins, Eddie Acuff, Nat Pendleton, Tommy and Sunny Bupp, Oline Howland, Hugh O'Connell and Sammy White. Ray Enright directed.

MGM completed three productions. "A Matter of Pride" will present Frank Morgan, John Beal, Florence Rice, Janet Beecher, Cora Witherspoon, Erik Rhodes, George Givot, Vladimir Sokoloff, E. E. Clive, Herman Bing, Reginald Denny, Tom Rutherford and Harlan Briggs. William Thiele directed. In "A Family Vacation," which George B. Seitz directed, Lewis Stone, Fay Holden, Mickey Rooney, Cecilia Parker, Sara Haden, Ted Pearson, Charley Grapewin, Eleanor Lynn and Ann Rutherford will be seen. William Anthony McGuire's "Rosalie," which W. S. Van Dyke directed, will offer Nelson Eddy, Eleanor Powell, Ray Bolger, Ilona Massey, Frank Morgan, Edna May Oliver, Virginia Grey, Clay Clement, Janet Beecher, Reginald Owen, George Zucco, Tom Rutherford, Billy Gilbert and the Albertina Rasch dancers.

Two of the Twentieth Century-Fox trio finished look like clickers. "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm" will have Shirley Temple, Randolph Scott, Jack Haley, Gloria Stuart, Phyllis Brooks, Helen Westley, Slim Summerville, Bill Robinson, Alan Dinehart, William Demarest, Paul Harvey, Mary McCarty, the Raymond Scott Quintet, Dixie Dunbar, the Peters Sisters, Paul Hurst and Sam Hayes. Alan Dwan directed. "Love and Hisses" offers Walter Winchell and Ben Bernie with Simone Simon, Bert Lahr, Joan Davis, Dick Baldwin, the Scott Quintet, Wally Vernon, Georges Renavent, Peters Sisters, Cinda Glenn, Charles Williams, Coral Chilton, Meceo Thomas and Chick Chandler. Sidney Lanfield directed. Peter Lorre is featured in "Thank You, Mr. Moto," the third of this series.

Paramount finished two productions. Both were made by subsidized producers. Emanuel Cohen's "Everyday's a Holiday" is a Mae West picture in which she will be presented in the company of Edmund Lowe, Charles Butterworth, Walter Catlett, Roger Imhoff, Charles Winninger and the noted restauranteur of another era, George Rector. Completing the directing assignment, A. Edward Sutherland immediately embarked upon an ocean voyage. ### Columbia Finishes Two Columbia also finished two. "Murder in Swingtime," which had Leon Barsha for a director, rests its aspirations for name value upon the importance of Don Terry, Wynn Cahoon, Robert Paige, John Gallaudet, Marc Lawrence, Rita Hayworth and Gene Morgan.

Mr. Charles Starrett and Miss Iris Meredith quickly learned with what speed Hollywood and Columbia sometimes operate. They were started in their new picture, "Lone Rider," almost before they realized that they were through working with players Dick Curtis, Donald Grayson, Art Mix and Edward LeSaint and director Sam Nelson in "Singing Rangers."

Republic finished "The Lady Misbehaves." This problem play of complicated romantic situations will feature Sally Eilers, Neil Hamilton, Joseph Schildkraut and Patricia Farr, along with such capable performers as Grant Mitchell, Marcie May Jones, George Ernest, Warren Hymer, Robert Greig, Charles Richman, Spencer Charters and Mary Gordon. Lloyd Corrigan directed and is now in San Francisco. He proclaimed that Santa Clara, his alma mater, would beat St. Mary's, which it did.

Sam Katsman, producer and director who functions under the corporate setup of Victory Pictures, completed "Amateur Crook." His personnel enumerates Herman Brix, Joan Barclay, Monte Blue, Jack Mulhall, Fuzzy Knight, Vivian Oakland, Henry Rocquemore, Edward Earle and Fern Emmett.

CLAUDIA SMITH and HARRY SHERMAN

In answer to the contest question "Why I want to be a movie star," she said: "Hollywood is the only place where talent gets a break. That's the place for me. The motion picture industry needs young people as much as we need the industry, so why shouldn't I get my chance? I've prepared myself for it. I can sing and dance and, most important, I can act. I'll make good, too. So look out, Hollywod, here I come."

So saying, Claudia Smith, 16-year-old Seattle high school girl, made a Cinderella girl of herself. And three hundred other aspirants to screen fame who entered Harry Sherman's "Do You Want To Be A Movie Star" contest conducted in conjunction with the world premiere of "The Barrier" are no doubt envious.

Navy Blue and Gold

Annapolis Story

Against backgrounds that encompass many phases of football-embellished Naval Academy Midshipman life, "Navy Blue and Gold" completely and excellently tells a different kind of Annapolis service story. In spirit and ability to arouse and hold audience interest, it stands entirely apart from any of the many previous productions which used the same basic material. A box office show because it is loaded with entertainment qualities, it is also full of exploitation ideas that any exhibitor may adapt in economical yet compelling ways.

This version of a familiar topic makes no radical departure from the formula but the way things are done establishes the big difference. Considering the interest which the preview audience displayed in the film, it might be thought that "Navy Blue and Gold" was the first of its kind ever produced, testimonial to the skill and ability of the featured and support players, of George Bruce, author and adapter; of Sam Wood, director, and Sam Zimbalist, producer.

Three boys go to the Academy. All look upon their opportunity from different angles, but desire to play football they apparently have in common.

Billie Burke, Lionel Barrymore, Samuel Hinds, Paul Kelly and other members of the support add to the film's entertainment value, but the story concentrates on Robert Young, James Stewart, Tom Brown and Florence Rice.

"Roger Ash's" ego is quickly and effectively deflated, while "Cross" and "Gates" earnestly strive to hold to the finest Academy traditions. With football, parading cadets, social, class room, dormitory and campus glamour to contrast the romantic rivalry of the pair played by Young and Stewart, the story concentrates on the character development of the three boys.

In the second year, "Ash" is demoted to substitute on the Varsity, while his pals are stars and student body heroes. "Cross" in classroom listens to an instructor's lecture of how an officer brought disgrace to the Navy. Rising in wrath, in a sequence that provoked applause, "Cross," an ex-gob, tells the true story, climaxing his lines by claiming the man as his father. He is suspended, threatened with expulsion for registering under an incomplete name, as his mates march off to the Army game. Stewart's acting here is the picture's histrionic high spot. Found guilty, but granted leniency because he proved he was a man and because for the first time the Navy has learned the real story of his father, "Ash," "Cross" and "Gates" team up and beat the Army. In the climax "Ash" proves that he is a gentleman and an officer in addition to being a great player, by surrendering his right to ring the bell to old Academy football idol, played by Lionel Barrymore.

Previewed in the Village theatre, Westwood, Cal. Some indication of audience enthusiasm and appreciation having been expressed earlier, it might be said that the U.C.L.A. collegiate gang up in the balcony thought the show so legitimate and natural that it forget to indulge in some of the practices which it has made a custom at previews. The regular customers applauded several times and the concensus of remarks heard as the crowd filed out appeared to be that this was the best of all the Annapolis football-service pictures.—Gus McCarthy.

Thoroughbreds Don't Cry

Horse Racing Comedy

From the stables of MGM comes "Thoroughbreds Don't Cry," an entry at the Box Office Track which, judging by preview audience reaction, is due for a galloping finish at the head of its class. With the combination of Mickey Rooney, Judy Garland, Ronald Sinclair and suitable supporting cast in the saddle, and guided by Trainer Alfred E. Green, it got a rousing send off, introducing, under MGM colors, Master Sinclair, who, as Ra Hould, appeared in numerous productions of other studios.

MGM is in the midst of a campaign to promote public interest in Master Sinclair, who took the role originally scheduled for Freddie Bartholomew, before Freddie's recent contract difficulties. The studio managed to turn this to good advantage by producing a special trailer on the picture showing Master Bartholomew introducing Master Sinclair to the public, a gesture which no doubt will create interest because of the implied sportsmanship.

The Rooney-Garland-Sinclair trio brings to the screen a refreshing delineation of pre-adolescent companionship by the youngsters, whose cinematic ages permit them to portray existences untrammeled by what has been presumed in many quarters to be necessary element of adult romance. Pre-eminent is this theme, mapped out by Lawrence Hazard from the original screenplay of Eleanore Griffin and J. Walter Ruben. It is superimposed upon the background of horse racing, and Director Green has called upon his own fund of information gleaned through owning his own stables and holding high office in the Hollywood Turf Club.

Others in the cast include the dependable C. Aubrey Smith, as the aged English sportsman; Sophie Tucker, playing her first non-selling film role; Forrester Harvey, Charles H. Brown, Frankie Darro and Henry Kolker. In the racing scenes are noted jockeys, Carl Myers, Burl Tatum, Raymond Huff, Al Rickets, Lee Mosbacker, Jack Scott, Paul Lang, Fred Ward, Wesley Edwards and L. A. Grantham.

It is apparent from the production that Green held the reins closely to avoid mawkishness, and vested in the picture the elements of universal entertainment. Mickey Rooney was given an effervescent role of a conceited jockey, tops in his line. Judy Garland plays the young niece of Sophie Tucker, cast as keeper of a jockeys' boarding house. Sinclair is in the role of an English boy addicted to hero worship.

"Roger," the English boy, comes to America with his grandfather, "Sir Peter Calverton," to enter their horse, "The Pookah," in the annual turf classic. Impoverished, they induce "Timmie Donovan," ranking jockey, to ride for them. "Timmie," by a ruse, is forced by his estranged gambling father to throw the first race of "The Pookah." "Sir Roger" dies of a heart attack following the race. Feeling disgraced, "Timmie" wonders away and discovers his father's ruse. He turns up after being found by "Cricket" and obtains money to enter the horse in the big race. His father, determined that "The Pookah" shall lose, exposes 'Timmie" for throwing the first race. But "Roger," encouraged by "Aunt Ralph" and "Cricket," rides the horse to victory. The final fadeout has "Cricket," "Timmie" and "Roger" going ahead to other races with "The Pookah."

County Fair

(Monogram)

Melodrama

A melodrama based on horse racing at county fairs, "County Fair" probably will be released coincidentally with the start of activities at Santa Anita, the most widely publicized race track in America, perhaps a bit too late to capitalize upon its present title. Directed by Howard Bretherton, long associated with action and western pictures, this Crescent production for Monogram release is predicated on the theme of crooked gambling, and it centers upon the love of a discredited jockey for a farm girl whose brother owns a race horse.

John Arledge has the principal male role. Opposite him, making her film debut, is a personable young girl, Mary Lou Lender, is a sweet, naïve type role. Supporting them are J. Farrell MacDonald, Fuzzy Knight and Jimmy Butler, plus a number of character players.

The original screenplay is by John T. Neville, experienced in the action field.

"John Hope" is framed by crooked gamblers after riding the winning horse in a race. Expelled from the track, he and "Whitey," his pal, wander off and find "Julie Williams" and "Buddy Williams," brother and sister, training a race horse secretly in fear of their farmer father, who has been embittered by the loss of his wife. "John" and "Whitey" sign on as hired hands at the farm, to aid in the training of the horse. The four manage to outwit the father in his desire to prevent them racing, and effect his regeneration, as well as consummate the incipient romance between "John" and "Julie."

Children of Loneliness

(Jewel)

Erotica

A camera has no conscience, else there would be no French postcards. A marquee is at its master's mercy, else the ornate superstructure of Tally's Criterion, Los Angeles, would not be sporting banners shouting the title of this film ornamented by reiterated cabalas spelling out "3rd Sex." A newspaper does have authority to reject advertising copy supplied by its customers, but those published in Los Angeles have not chosen to reject Criterion advertisements defining the film as "inspired by 'The Well of Loneliness'" and making that clearer by use of a drawn illustration showing an amorous member of the normally gentler sex leaning languorously over a likewise amorous, if tired, member of the same, supine.

It is a screen presentation of the more widely known varieties of perversion, performed by unknown players photographed with an inept camera and microphoned to the echo, but plainly. Indeed, there is even a prologue and an epilogue in which a person introduced as Dr. S. Dana Hubbard of the New York health department reads an address on the subject in which he manages to clear up any clinical details that the actors may have left vague.

The story consists of two principal threads, tied together about as adeptly as in the B-minus product of the B-minus studios. One concerns a young woman, frightened by a man in infancy who tells her doctor she's about to yield to her ever-loving girl friend and roommate. The doctor's a psychoanalyst under whose coaching she ultimately marries a fullback instead, a timely truck disposing of the thwarted suitoress. The other thread pictures the plight of a she-he artist sought in marriage by a he-she socialite, who says, at the picture's close, when he-she finds out why she-he has committed suicide, that he-she's sorry she-he didn't tell him-her, indicating that everything could have worked out swell. While these revelations are being achieved, visit is made to a cafe where sundry types of persons described on the lobby placards as "queer" are shown billing, cooing, dining and dancing.

There's another item establishing a new low in misuse of the cinema. Following the showing of the picture at Tally's Criterion, a gentleman dressed like a doctor advanced to midstage and, backed by three young women dressed in scarlet, lavender and white, lectured on perversion. After exploring the Winnie Ruth Judd and Oscar Wilde cases, he announced that the girl in red was grievously over-sexed and no doubt in for a bad time of it, while the one in lavender was a normal young person who would have a husband and babies in due course. (He didn't discuss the one in white.) Then he offered a book "in plain English" by Dr. Hubbard, plus a "birth control chart" and other "profusely illustrated" pamphlets. The young women passed among the customers and peddled the stuff.

Previewed at Tally's Criterion, Los Angeles. Your reporter inferred, from the lisping comments of young men on his left and the throaty whispers of middle-aged women on his right, that unless there are, as the lecturer declared, four million of these in the United States, and even if there are, Mr. Sam Cummins of Jewel Productions is going to have quite a time getture.—WILLIAM R. WEAVER.

Produced and distributed by Jewel Productions. No P. C. A. certificate. Running time, 68 minutes. Audience classification, none.

Mr. Boggs Steps Out

(Grand National)

Comedy

This picture follows the amusement idea which adopts as its central character a blundering simpleton, one who encounters no end of hilarious and a few forbidding experiences, but also always emerges as a far seeing, analytical business man and a suave hero. By no means is it the perfect picture, as it includes many discrepancies. The theme has been used several times before. Only in a meager, mechanical sort of way is anything introduced that savors of novelty. However, despite the familiarity and similarity, the film has certain amusement merit, and it has qualities upon which unique exploitation may be based. Stuart Erwin is the one important name to talk about, but there are several twists and developments in the yarn worthy of attention in exploitation plans.

A country yokel, with a penchant for statistics, wins a "number-of-beans-in-the-jar" guessing contest. He goes to a seedy country town in search of romance, adventure and business accomplishment. He buys a run-down barrel factory. Everybody, except a plain, unpretentious young woman think he's cracked when he announces ambitious plans for the town and factory. Love can be seen shining in her eyes, but it's not the same kind of love that the yokel feels steaming towards him from a snobbish, selfish, schemer. Things are unpleasant for the youth until he takes over a collapsible barrel invented by the plain young woman's father. Confronted by and conquering big business gangster tactics, the yokel makes a go of the barrel factory and learns to differentiate between honest and deceitful love.

Previewed at the Lido theatre, Hollywood. The audience, interested at times in some of the bucolic characterizations, dialogue lines and situations, also demonstrated that it was keenly familiar with the theme and knew what to expect. However, in that type of theatre which patrons attend primarily for the purpose of being amused, it is possible to anticipate a more favorable reaction.—G. M.

Trouble at Midnight

(Universal)

Melodrama

This is an oldtime western story by formula, but laid in 1937 in Illinois. The rustlers are gangsters equipped with fleet trucks and automobiles, and they make systematic raids on dairy farms, taking prize stock. Topping the cast are Noah Beery, Jr., Larry Blake, Catherine Hughes and Bernadene Hayes.

"Kirk" is a dairy rancher who saves a gangster, "Tony," from townsmen anxious to arrest him for complicity in a series of cow thefts. The reason for the act is that, in the War, "Tony" had saved the brother of "Kirk." "Tony," by his work on the ranch of "Kirk," becomes regenerated, and materially assists in the roundup of the gang.

This is the first time in the lives of most exhibitors that they have had an opportunity to advertise Weber and Fields. They can do so with confidence that the venerable comedians, portraying themselves, deliver precisely the kind and quality of entertainment for which they so long have been famous.

The story, by Theodore Reeves, is about a confidence man who persuades a country girl to assist him in a plot to obtain possession of a gold hoarder's bullion for purposes of melting it down for resale as newly mined. Against this background are set up various musical and comedy passages, including a satirical treatment of Greek opera (by Phil Boutelje and Ralph Freed) in which Weber and Fields appear prominently.

Miss Ross and Rufe Davis attend to the singing chores. Two songs and a scored finale are by Frank Loesser and Manning Sherwin.

High Flyers

Comedy

It should be a point of showmanship interest that "High Flyers" marks the termination of the team play of Bert Wheeler and Robert Woolsey. The screen association began in 1930 and, until its dissolution, brought about by the necessity of Mr. Woolsey taking a rest, the pair have appeared in 17 or 18 productions. There is nothing about "High Flyers" that conveys the impression that it is a farewell appearance of two entertainers who were proud to have their production, of late years, termed "bread and butter" pictures. In it, aided by several clever artists, again is presented the brand of amusement that has made the pair popular with large numbers of persons, particularly in the smaller communities. Both knew where they were popular and geared their performances to please the audiences that like to see them. Woolsey expressed it pointedly a couple of months ago when he said, "We don't care if we never are featured on Broadway as long as our names are in the marquees of the small town theatres."

With story and backgrounds that show the comedians to best advantage, "High Fliers" is ridiculous comedy through which is woven a bit of music. Originally the team are a pair of aviation instructors, traveling with carnivals and giving flying lessons in captive airplanes. Palming themselves off as ace flyers, they are hired to transport some newspictures from an incoming liner. The package which they deliver turns out, however, to contain stolen jewels. Between trying to get themselves out of a smuggling mess, while pinning responsibility upon a fake newspaper man, they account for much bizarre if somewhat exaggerated fun.

Wheeler and Woolsey deliver up to expectancies. Wheeler's imitations of Charlie Chaplin are particularly funny, and Lupe Velez' character cartoons of several picture notables add noticeably to the show's amusement value. Of course there is a trace of love interest. In this Marjorie Lord is featured. Comedy that provokes laughter, even though some of it in action, situations, dialogue and effects is quite ridiculous, is the dominating quality. As hokum is concentrated upon, "High Flyers" measures up as a satisfactory audience picture and one from which exhibitors may extract numerous exploitation stunts and gags.

Wild Innocence

(Cinesound)

Animal Life

Chute, the kangaroo in this Australian production, deserves for himself whatever honors are accorded to the picture, and supplies a subject for somewhat unusual exploitation. It is a wild life picture of the "Sequoia" type to which the feature is comparable, at least in its natural history sequences.

The thin story thread and the human actors, with one exception, do not hold to the standard set by Chute nor to the promise set forth in the initial sequences showing Chute and his wild companions in the bush. Wendy Munro, Australian star who has achieved some measure of world prominence, gives a competent performance though she is hampered by faulty technical production.

Excellent photography at the start of the picture depicts the kangaroos and other native Australian animals, including the koala, always fascinating to the public because of its resemblance to the teddy bears of childhood. A young kangaroo is orphaned when its mother is fatally wounded by hunters. The frightened animal, avoiding its natural enemies in the bush and seeking food, is caught by a kindly ranchman and raised as a pet. From this point the plot follows the pattern of boy, girl and cruel circus animal trainer.

Critics and buyers who viewed the picture in a New York projection room evinced interest in the picture and appreciation of the early sequences.—James D. Ivers.

Million Dollar Racket

(Victory)

Melodrama

A mild depiction of melodrama and romance, the production concerns a small town family, made wealthy by striking oil, who move east to take a place in "society." The family rents a large estate and goes in for things, including jewelry, in a big way. Whereupon racketeers plot to steal the gems.

A second element of the story concerns the romance of the daughter and the family's chauffeur. The chauffeur, acquired with the estate, actually is its owner. It's his way of exposing the racketeers, who have posed as "society" and have been eagerly accepted as friends by the family.

Suspense is lacking as the story moves obviously toward an exposé of the racketeers at a banquet in their honor. The banquet is anticlimactic, with the racketeers making a feeble effort to steal the jewels.

Herman Brix is the rich young man posing as chauffeur and Joan Barclay the girl in love with him.

CCC Drama

The Civilian Conservation Corps is the subject of a motion picture straightforward in conception and treatment, with an appreciable lack of overemphasis of the dramatic elements of the story which concerns a boy bred on the city streets and living by his wits, who, forced to flee from the police, joins the CCC because he's hungry.

The boy's attitude is changed by the philosophy of his camp companions, who have come to feel that the CCC offers them a chance at rehabilitation.

The climax of the picture revolves around a forest fire. In this the producer had the cooperation of the United States Forest Service of the Department of Agriculture. Frank (Junior) Coghlan, Florine McKinney, Edward Arnold, Jr., Irene Franklin and Guy Bates Post comprise the leading members of the cast.

While attempting to rob a warehouse, "Tommy" (Coghlan) and "Fats" (Arnold) are nearly caught by the police, but hop a freight train. Tired and hungry, in a small town they are befriended by a couple who once were a vaudeville team. On the road again, they come upon a CCC camp and enlist, using the names of the couple who befriended them.

"Tommy" is derisive of the regimented life of the camp and openly hostile. He finally comes to grips with another of the CCC boys. After a series of fights in the camp's boxing ring, "Tommy" apologizes, remarking "that fellow may look soft but he sure can fight." A change has begun in "Tommy," but then he is accused of the murder of a supervisor. He hides out in the woods, but returns to camp to report a forest fire. Though "Fats" loses his life in the fire, "Tommy," cleared of the murder accusation, is confident of the future as a member of the Forest Service.

Under Suspicion

(Columbia-Darmour)

Melodrama

Immediately "Under Suspicion" erects a vein of suspense that continues until the climax. A situation is presented. Everyone is made familiar with it. Yet, as the facts are known, what ensues makes the auditors of this picture participants in a guessing contest. Smart as they may be, it may be anticipated that they will find difficulty and considerable entertainment in guessing the outcome.

"Under Suspicion" might be described as a revealed mystery. Embracing the necessary amusement qualities which have proven exploitation value, compensating its melodrama with comedy, intelligently balancing dialogue and action, and playing down love interest, the film moves speedily, and, while there are occasional lapses, manages for the most part to maintain interest at a high pitch.

For a melodrama the production takes an unique story twist. An industrial leader wants to retire. For devious reasons various forces want him to continue in business. It would be more to their advantage if he were dead rather than inactive. The man, more than he wishes to retire, desires to know who wants to kill him and why. To ascertain this he makes an amateur detective of himself. Several times he puts himself on the spot. He finds that those he trusts as well as those of whom he is suspicious desire his death. As the climax is approached and as tense suspense is applied, he confounds his enemies, amazes his friends, succeeds in trapping the wouldbe killer, and makes it possible to realize his wish to retire.

Although it may not be remembered, the story is taken from a Philip Wylie Liberty magazine contribution. As it was transcribed to the screen by Joseph Hoffman and Jefferson Parker and smartly directed by Lewis D. Collins, its primary purpose is to engage the attention of the masses. It simply gives them a problem to solve and allows them to use their own imaginations in solving it. It may trick and confuse them but it seldom oversteps the bounds of ordinary credulity.

The manner in which Jack Holt, Granville Bates, Morgan Wallace, Katherine DeMille, Craig Reynolds, Luis Alberni, Robert Keane, Purnell Pratt, Maurice Murphy, Margaret Irving, Esther Muir and Rosalind Keith go about their work is convincing without being overly-theatrical.

Previewed in the Forum theatre, Hollywood. The audience was attentive. While it may have reached conclusions it was evident that the climax was generally surprising. It may be assumed that the show will engender quite a bit of word of mouth advertising.—G. M.

Danger Patrol

Melodrama

Delineations of unusual ways of earning livelihoods are of virtually universal interest, provided, of course, that explanations are given without too great technical details. In "Danger Patrol" RKO presents formula plot based on a background of a highly dangerous calling—"soup handling" in vernacular but, specifically, the handling of nitroglycerine, most powerful explosive made, without causing any premature demonstration of its strength.

"Danger Patrol" has as locale a Texas oil town where explosive is used to blow in an oil well to start production, or snuff out flames. The novelty of background is a natural for a well rounded exploitation campaign on the picture, inasmuch as this is the first time, at least recently, that the subject has been touched. For marquee embellishment the Maurice Cohen production offers Sally Eilers, John Beal and Harry Carey.

"Dan Loring," having failed at other jobs, gets work for an explosives firm and is guided by "Easy Street," genial worker whose daughter Cathie falls in love with Dan. Because "Cathie" is insistent that "Dan" quit the job for less dangerous work while "Dan" is adamant in his refusal until he has saved money, they split up. "Cathie's" decision to marry Dan's rival causes him to accept a job flying a load of nitro to Mexico to put out an oil well fire. "Easy" finds out, knocks "Dan" out, and goes himself. Just before the plane crashes in a dense fog, "Dan" and "Cathie" hear a radio conversation between the Mexican landing field officials and the plane, in which "Easy" ends the misunderstanding between them.

Emphasis throughout is placed by Director Lew Landers on suspense, upon impending danger because of the high powered explosives. Before the first 500 feet of the Sy Bartlett script from the story by Helen Vreeland and Hilda Vincent, a newcomer is shown a picture frame with a blank piece of paper in it.

"That's a picture of a nitro truck driven by a careless driver," is the statement. "But where's the truck and the driver?" the newcomer asks. "That's all they found of them," is the crisp answer.

True Confession

(Paramount)

Sophisticated Comedy

It would seem fairly simple procedure to display the names of Carole Lombard, Fred MacMurray, John Barrymore, Edgar Kennedy, Lynne Overman and Una Merkel in connection with a title so filled with connotation as "True Confession," and probably that is what most showmen will do, profitably. It is less simple, if indeed practicable, to rig up a campaign which in some adroit way will winnow out the sophisticates among the admirers of these players and bring them in to enjoy a type of comedy the less flexible sort of cinema goer doesn't invariably consider funny. There is, of course, a convenient and effective device for keeping the kiddies away, which is more or less obligatory.

The picture is a smartly executed comedy of the kind that once would have been called risque, and may still be so regarded in the smaller towns and some urban neighborhoods.

This would be because murder, chastity, hinted incipient maternity and matters falling commonly in the field of serious dramatization are utilized here for laugh purposes, and riotously.

It would not be because these institutions are spoofed or ridiculed, for the treatment is altogether goodhumored, and it would not be because good taste is violated. It is merely ignored, as is increasingly the custom this year, on the evident theory that a successful bid for waistline laughs is its own justification. This bid was extremely successful in the case of the preview covered in this report.

Claude Binyon wrote the screen play from a play by Louis Verneuil and Georges Berr. One or all of these gentlemen is to be credited with an extremely novel idea. It presents the case of a wife unjustly accused of murder, who realizes she will be convicted on circumstantial evidence if she proclaims her innocence, whereas her attorney husband can save her by pleading justifiable homicide in defense of chastity. He does so, and both of them become rich, he in his profession and she as a writer, because of the publicity obtained during the trial.

Then she is forced to confess to him her innocence, whereupon he starts to leave her, returning when she tells him he's to be a father. When he finds this is also untrue he picks her up and starts for indoors with the expressed determination to "teach her a lesson." The precise meaning of which is not precisely clear to eye or ear. (Anyone coming in after the credit title had been run off might readily mistake this for the Lubitsch touch)."

John Barrymore is billed alongside the costars in the picture and "steals" the scene whenever he's on it. Edgar Kennedy, Una Merkel, Porter Hall and Lynne Overman have ideal assignments. Albert Lewin did handsomely by the work as producer and Wesley Ruggles' direction is up to the last minute, if not sometimes a little ahead.

Adoption, Quigley Plaque Featured by Variety Tent

Introduction of George Variety Barker, Variety Club Tent No. One's third adopted baby, was the high point in the showmen club's annual party staged in the William Penn Hotel, Pittsburgh, last Sunday evening, with more than 850 guests present.

John J. Maloney, retiring Chief Barker, gave an account of his stewardship and delegated the new Chief Barker, John T. McGreevey, as custodian of the club's new young son by adoption.

The local Variety Club has adopted three babies. The first was Catherine Variety Sheridan, who has since been adopted by foster parents; second was Catherine Variety Sheridan II, who has also since been adopted by foster parents, and at the 1936 banquet the club adopted George V. Barker, who is still being supported by the club. An educational fund is being raised for him.

One of the highlights of the banquet was the presentation of the Quigley Award of the Managers Round Table Club to Jules Seltzer, advertising executive of Warner Brothers Philadelphia theatres, for the best campaign in October, which he used for Warners' "The Life of Emile Zola," at the Boyd theatre in Philadelphia. Mr. Seltzer received the silver placque from Governors Harold Hoffman, of New Jersey, Harry Nice, Maryland, and former Governor William Conley, of West Virginia and Pennsylvania's Senator James J. Davis, who were guests at the banquet. (Further details of the Quigley Award appear in this week's Managers Round Table Section.)

Among the additional celebrities and guests were secretary of commonwealth David Lawrence, secretary of labor Ralph M. Bashore, attorney general Charles J. Margiotti; Dr. John Bain (Jock) Sutherland, Pitt football coach; Larry Kelley, former Yale football star; Attorney Edward O. Tabor, Pittsburgh; and numerous judges and persons prominent in the world of sports, civic life and the theatre. Norman Frescott, member of the Pittsburgh Variety Club, who flew from Hollywood, was toastmaster. He was introduced by ringmaster Hon. Frank J. Harris.

A variety show in the usual circus ring introduced a varied bill of prominent artists.

John H. Harris, of Pittsburgh, national Chief Barker, welcomed the delegates at a party in the Variety Club Saturday evening. This pre-banquet "open house" night brought out 229 guests, record attendance to date.

In addition to John T. McGreevey, Variety Club Tent No. One's Chief Barker, other new officers are Ira H. Cohn, first assistant chief; Harold Lund, second assistant chief; James G. Balmer, property master, and Harry Seed, dough guy.

This year's "Barker," annual year book and banquet program of 40 pages, was prepared and edited by George D. Tyson.

This ninth annual banquet marked the tenth anniversary of the organization, which was founded by local showmen October 11, 1927 in Childs' Restaurant, Fifth avenue, Pittsburgh, and named "Variety" by Eddie Fontaine. There are now eighteen Tents in the larger cities throughout the country. The various Tents did charity work estimated to total more than $150,000 during last year.

MPTO Asks 3 to Address Pinehurst Convention Dec. 6

Ed Kuykendall, national MPTOA president; Walter Vincent, Pennsylvania circuit operator and chairman of the board of Republic Pictures, and Martin Quigley were named this week as the principal speakers at the annual convention, December 6th and 7th, of the North and South Carolina MPTO convention, to be held at the Carolina Hotel, in Pinehurst. It will mark the 25th anniversary of the organization now headed by Charles W. Picquet.

Other exhibitor organization activities of the week included the closing of the Oklahoma MPTO annual convention, the setting of December 6th to 8th as the dates of the Ohio ITO convention, and the decision of Allied of New Jersey to hold bi-monthly conferences with New York's ITOA for purposes of mutual problem discussions.

Some 250 Oklahoma exhibitors and their guests closed the annual meeting of the Oklahoma MPTO last week with a banquet and dance at the Oklahoma City Golf and Country Club in Oklahoma City.

The same day they re-elected Morris Loewenstein, president of the association for the eighth consecutive year, Leonard White, vice-president, and Orville Enloe, secretary, and directors, Max Brock, Harry Loewenstein, Homer Jones, Ralph Talbot, L. C. Griffith and Fred Pickrel, while in session at the Biltmore Hotel.

They heard both Ed Kuykendall, president of the MPTOA, and Colonel Harry A. Cole, president of Allied of Texas, present their respective viewpoints on the problems of the motion picture industry from the exhibitor's side; Archie Feinburg, Kooler-Aire, Minneapolis, Minn., on "Air Conditioning," and Bert Stern, publicity director for Standard Theatres circuit in Oklahoma City, on "My Impressions of Hollywood."

Colleen Moore appeared before the exhibitors and described in detail the $435,000 doll house she is exhibiting in Oklahoma City for ten days for the benefit of crippled children.

C. B. Akers, district manager of the Griffith Amusement Company, spoke on "Training Better Theater Personnel," explaining how the Griffith circuit of 175 theatres endeavors to select employes of good character, average intelligence, neat appearance and good personality.

He pointed out that theatre personnel makes at least 90 percent of the contacts with the public and stressed the importance of selecting good personnel material to begin with.

"After an individual is employed by the Griffith circuit he is subjected to a book of rules governing his conduct. Our company does not stop there, but tries to train the employe in intelligent thinking," Mr. Akers said. "The type of employe we desire has a genuine interest in the theatre business and we try to make the employe feel that he is important to the business.

"As a means of stimulating intelligent thinking Griffith employes are asked to give reviews of motion pictures at regular personnel meetings. Suggestions made by employes are also aired at these meetings resulting often in suggestions worth following out in improving our service to the public.

"Each week leading citizens of the community make short talks to add to the knowledge of employes which will help them meet emergencies arising in the management of theatres.

Starting this week, committees of five from Allied of New Jersey and the I. T. O. A. will meet twice monthly in New York to discuss mutual problems, following the appointment by Irving Dollinger, allied president, of Maury Miller and Lee Newbury to the Allied committee. Mr. Dollinger, Morris Marks and Louis Gold had previously been named to the committee.

H. Freedman, owner of the Circle in Toronto, this week was reelected president of the Independent Theatres Association of Ontario while N. A. Taylor was reelected vice-president.

The following independents, all of Toronto, were elected to other offices; treasurer, A. Polakoff; secretaries, Meyer Axler and Harold Kay; board of directors, Sam Ulster, S. Lent, H. Yudin, B. Ulster and Harry Firestone.

The organized Ontario theatre owners are working closely with the Quebec Allied Theatrical Industries, of Montreal, which recently interviewed the Quebec Government with a plea for legislative protection against circuits. The Quebec association also asked for a reduction in the amusements tax which represents a four-cent levy on a 25-cent admission. The Ontario tax was abolished last June.

HOLLYWOOD WATCHING CHANGES IN TOP RANKS OF STUDIO EXECUTIVES

LeRoy Leaves Warners for MGM; Carl Laemmle, Jr., Resigns from Metro; Kohner Quits Columbia Production

The contractual status or working relationships of some of some of Hollywood's highest production executives were undergoing readjustment this week, with much if the interest centering upon the executive talent roster of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's large studios at Culver City. All moves might be considered as having an effect on the type and number of pictures eventually to reach theatre owners.

The proximity of the expiration of the contract of Louis Burt Mayer as chief over all MGM production and studio activities brought about preliminary discussion for an extension.

Carl Laemmle, Jr., resigned as producer at MGM, after only five months.

Mervy LeRoy, an executive producer at Warner Brothers in Burbank and son-in-law of Harry Warner, president of the company, abruptly resigned and accepted a similar berth later at MGM's studio.

Verification of a Broadway and Hollywood Boulevard report on the affiliation of David Selznick with MGM was expected, Mr. Selznick apparently preferring to produce elsewhere than at United Artists in view of the projected purchase of the company by Samuel Goldwyn and Alexander Korda. Mr. Selznick left New York for Hollywood Wednesday, presumably to close his deal with Nicholas Schenck, MGM president, also arriving on the coast.

MGM gave a new contract to Jack Chertok, executive producer of short subjects.

Paul Kohner resigned as producer at Columbia, and word came from that sector indicating there might be an amicable adjustment of the differences which have kept Frank Capra, director, away from Columbia for months.

Determination of the production generalship of RKO Studios is far from an actuality, with denials coming this week that Pandro Berman is to assume the post, rather acting only temporarily in that position, along with Leo Spitz, RKO president, who has been in Hollywood since Samuel Briskin resigned three weeks ago.

Then there are the top-line changes in United Artists executives, to be effected as the result of the setting of plans this week for purchase by Mr. Goldwyn and Mr. Korda of the remaining three-fifths producer-owner interests of Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks and Charles Chaplin, additional details of which are reported on page 16.

Both Hollywood and the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio colleagues of Louis B. Mayer take it for granted that the negotiations for an extension of his contract as head over all the company's production will be consummated long before its expiration next year. Also involved are similar five-year employment contracts for MGM's David Bernstein, vice-president and treasurer, and J. Rubert Rubin, vice-president. Options for the additional purchase of Loew stock at stipulated prices are said to be included in the present agreements of the three officials.

Actual discussions for renewal of the Mayer contract were believed getting under way with the arrival in Hollywood this week, from New York, of the Metro president, Nicholas M. Schenck. Mr. Schenck is at the same time at the studio on his annual production visit.

Any contracts signed with any or all of the three would have to be ratified by stockholders, as Mr. Schenck's was last year. The annual stockholders' meeting on Dec. 8, 1936, ratified Mr. Schenck's new contract, running for five years, and providing for a percentage of the profits of Loew's, Inc., in addition to a salary of $2,500 weekly.

Laemmle Leaves MGM

Coming as a complete surprise, Carl Laemmle, Junior, left the excutive producing ranks of MGM this week, after only five months, and though his contract still has seven months to run. A spokesman reputedly representing the son of the former owner of Universal Pictures said the abrupt termination was caused by "inexplicable reasons." He had been preparing a picture for Wallace Beery and also a remake of "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," which Universal had made in silent days.

Selznick Expected at Metro

The speculation of recent weeks over the future of David Oliver Selznick appeared to be ended this week with the anticipation of both Broadway and Hollywood Boulevard that Mr. Selznick soon would be found in the executive production ranks of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer in Culver City, now that Samuel Goldwyn and Alexander Korda have definitely arranged for their purchase of United Artists, for which Mr. Selznick has been producing. The Goldwyn-Korda negotiations for the purchase of United from Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks and Charles Chaplin have down through the weeks brought stories that their eventual consummation would find Mr. Selznick moving over to either Paramount or MGM, but now it appears virtually certain that he will return to the Metro company, from which he resigned some three years ago to form Selznick International and distribute through United Artists.

However, in signing with MGM, where he would remain a separate corporate and executive identity, it is quite unlikely that Mr. Selznick's first new contribution to that company's release schedule would come before 1938-39, inasmuch as he has already finished two for U. A., "Tom Sawyer" and "Nothing Sacred," and still has two more to go. "Gone with the Wind" has been mentioned as probably representing the first Selznick-MGM production, next year, with Clark Gable also mentioned for the lead of Rhett Butler. It has been repeated that MGM might even advance $2,000,000 for the "Wind" filming budget, and, further, that any final arrangements for Selznick's transfer to MGM from U. A. would in all likelihood call for a flat distributing charge of 20 per cent to be made by Metro on the Selznick pictures, and after that there would be a 50-50 division. Mr. Selznick would have first call on Metro talent.

In this connection the deal would represent a significant change in basic MGM policy. That organization persistently has sought to make its production activities self-contained with the sole exception of the perennially renewed contract with Hal Roach for a limited number of features, in addition to his accompanying series of shorts.

Whitney Signing Europeans

Regardless of the outcome, John Hay (Jock) Whitney, board chairman of Selznick International, is en route to Europe on the Rex to sign three new European representatives for the company during his two-week stay abroad.

Mr. Whitney will appoint a European production representative to work under the direction of David Selznick; a distribution representative to work under the direction of Lowell V. Calvert, Selznick general sales manager, and a European publicity representative to work under the direction of Russell Birdwell, publicity manager. The appointees are not known as yet, it was stated.

Mr. Whitney is due back in New York December 1 on the Normandie. His plans call for a trip to the Selznick studio at Culver City on January 1. He will remain on the coast for three months in connection with the company's new plans and activities.

Schenck and Selznick

Nicholas M. Schenck, MGM president, before leaving New York this week for studio conferences in Culver City, is understood to have conferred with David Selznick on rejoining MGM. Also, Louis B. Mayer has previously expressed himself as desirous of having his son-in-law back on the lot. Selznick's last film for MGM was "David Copperfield," which brought Freddie Bartholomew into prominence.

Asked about reports linking David O. Selznick with Loew's, Schenck said: "We haven't signed Selznick and there is nothing new at this time. However, I don't say that we won't sign

LIGHT ON BACK OF SEAT SHOWS IT IS EMPTY

Hollywood's denizens never have been accused of lacking inventive ingenuity. Although their devices quite often are for the purpose of creating or consolidating an alibi, they occasionally come up with something more definite. Alan Hale holds a score or more of patents. Douglas Shearer has patents for sound reproducing paraphernalia and J. B. Nickolaus for developing and printing processes. Warner Baxter has patents on gun sights, Reginald Denny on miniature airplanes.

The latest inventor is Leo Houck, assistant director to Dave Butler on "Ali Baba Goes to Town." His invention is a device that indicates empty seats in a darkened theatre. When a patron leaves the seat, the bottom automatically rises, forming an electrical connection which flashes a pencil line of light on the back. When the seat is occupied, the light automatically goes off.

him. I'd like to have him work for me. I'd give him a job any time."

Other reports in New York insist Mr. Selznick has been discussing an extension of his U. A. pact with Samuel Goldwyn and Alexander Korda and will not make a decision until the two producers conclude conferences for the purchase of control of U. A.

Alexander Korda, new partner with Samuel Goldwyn in United Artists, refused to discuss the departure of Mr. Selznick from United Artists, as he left Newark airport for Hollywood.

LeRoy Joins Metro

Resignation of Mervyn LeRoy, a son-in-law of Harry Warner, from the Warner production ranks, came as unexpectedly as Carl Laemmle, Junior's departure this week from MGM. Metro made the official announcement:

"LeRoy will join the ranks of MGM as an associate producer, under terms of a long-term agreement which will go into effect on February 1.

"A consistent director and producer of outstanding successes during his affiliations of the past few years with Warner Brothers, Mr. LeRoy has been one of the industry's most notable film makers. Critics have applauded his creativeness, story judgment and originality of treatment, while box-office ledgers have proved him to be one of the ace 'money' directors of Hollywood."

Among the productions which he directed are "Little Caesar," "Five Star Final," "Hard to Handle," "I Am a Fugitive From a Chain Gang," "Gold Diggers of 1933," "Tugboat Annie" (for MGM), "Oil for the Lamps of China," "Three Men on a Horse" and "Anthony Adverse." During the present year he directed and produced "The King and the Chorus Girl," also "They Won't Forget," and produced "The Great Garrick," which James Whale directed.

Making Last for Warners

Mr. LeRoy is now working on his final production at the Warner lot, "Food for Scandal," in which Carole Lombard and Fernand Gravet are co-starred. He will leave Warners for MGM immediately thereafter.

A native of San Francisco, he is one of the youngest producer-directors in motion pictures. His first directorial effort was "No Place to Go," produced in 1927. It is understood that he will be responsible for some of the most important story productions on the MGM schedule for the coming year, making about six.

Hollywood commenced to chatter six weeks ago about Mr. LeRoy's future, but intimations that he would sign again with the company came last week from Jack L. Warner, vice-president in charge of production, when Mr. Warner stopped off at Chicago en route back to Hollywood from home office conferences with his brothers Harry and Major Albert. Even earlier reports had mentioned Mr. Le Roy as successor to Samuel Briskin, who three weeks ago resigned as production head of RKO, and, again, as joining United Artists.

Mr. Le Roy will take with him to MGM at least three stories and several important personal contracts. The properties include Jack London's novel, "The Sea Wolf," "Who Asked to be Born" and a story tentatively titled "The Fourth Estate."

The boys featured in "Dead End" are under contract by virtue of a loan deal with Samuel Goldwyn. Mr. Le Roy holds the personal contracts of Fernand Gravet, Kenny Baker, Lana Turner, Vicki Lester, Brian Aherne, Robert Sinclair, director; Irving Brecher and Leonardo Bercovici, the latter two being writers.

A statement issued in Hollywood by Mr. Le Roy said: "It is with sincere regret that I leave my many friends and associates at Warners where all have been most helpful to me in my work over a period of years and to whom I am deeply indebted for their support and co-operation.

MGM Keeps Chertok

Jack Chertok has signed a new extended-term contract at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios as producer of short subjects, thus renewing an affiliation responsible for many one and two-reel series of the last few years.

During the season of 1937-38 Mr. Chertok will be in charge of turning out 69 single and double-reel short subjects, among them new releases in the "Crime Does Not Pay," Pete Smith, Robert Benchley, and "Historical Mystery" groups. An innovation in the cartoon field carded for the coming season is his series of 13 "Captain and the Kids" cartoons, for which a new department was created at the Culver City studios.

Having made his entry into the entertainment field when he came to New York from Atlanta, Ga., and found a job as extra in "The Miracle," Mr. Chertok subsequently worked as assistant theatre and exchange manager. Then he went to Hollywood and in turn held jobs as assistant cameraman, script clerk, assistant music director and head of the music department, learning all branches of the business. He was given his first contract as short subject producer three years ago, when still in his early 30's. Since that time he has been given a major share of credit for the general improvement in quality and variety of shorts characteristic of West Coast studios.

Kohner Quits Columbia

Paul Kohner, for the past three months a producer at Columbia, resigned following arguments over story properties. He will leave for a vacation of a month in Mexico accompanied by Lupita Tovar, his wife, and will decide upon a new affiliation upon his return.

Meanwhile from the Columbia sector in Hollywood came word this week that Frank Capra's difficulties with Columbia may reach an amicable, out-of-court accord momentarily. The director has been conferring with Harry Cohn on an adjudication of the difficulties.

The RKO Situation

Pandro S. Berman, it has been learned, is not interested in the appointment as permanent head of RKO production, but is merely filling in for the time being through a supervision of scripts designed for "A" production pending a realignment.

Furthermore, no credence need be given, it is further learned, to speculation that Leo Spitz may assume the production helm. It is said for the president of RKO that he appreciates that he does not know production. In addition, there is his objection to transplanting his headquarters from New York to Hollywood.

Mr. Berman, pending appointment of a successor to S. J. Briskin as head of the RKO studio, is pinch hitting to the extent of eyeing scripts designed for major production, in addition to his normal activities as the head of his own unit. Lee Marcus, as has prevailed for some time, continues in charge of the "B" product.

Lou Lusty, who was Briskin's assistant and "trouble buster" under the latter's regime, is continuing in a like capacity with Leo Spitz, who, however, and to all intents and purposes, is running the studio.

In the meantime, discussions are being conducted by Spitz with officially undisclosed candidates for the Briskin post. These meetings are not being held at the studio.

Dozen Fights Over 'Blue Laws' Bring Wide Split

Local "blue laws," which prohibit Sunday theatrical and motion picture performances, continued to be a hardy perennial of local legislative controversy, resulting this week in victories for the "blues" in Danville, Va.; Atlanta, Ga.; Ireton, Ia.; Beatrice, Neb., and Woodbury, New Jersey, while the anti-"blues," fighting for Sunday shows, won in Jamesburg and Belvidere, N. J., and gained ground in Manasquan, N. J., and Athens, Alabama.

The Georgia supreme court affirmed an interlocutory injunction granted by the Thomas County superior court restraining the Rose Theatre, Inc., from operating on Sunday in Atlanta.

The action was brought against the corporation and Post No. 31 of the American Legion by George R. Lilly, solicitor general of the southern circuit. He contended the theatre corporation intended to operate for its own gain, but the defendant corporation claimed the American Legion was to conduct the Sunday performances for charitable purposes.

As a result of the higher court's ruling the case will be submitted to a jury in the lower court for determination of issues of fact before action is taken on a permanent injunction.

Sunday films suffered a setback in Danville, Va., when Charles L. Abercrombie was fined $100 for operating three houses on Sunday. The case went to trial twice. On the first occasion, the jury, after deliberating for an hour and a half, failed to reach a verdict and was discharged.

Charles Reid, manager of the Community Theatre, Ireton, Iowa, who appealed to the town council for repeal of a law prohibiting the showing of motion pictures on Sunday, was fined $1 and costs for each Sunday night performance given in his theatre during the last two weeks.

The American Legion's efforts to have the Lincoln, Neb., "blue laws" repealed, met with delay when the opposition successfully challenged the eligibility of District Judge Ellis to preside in the action. Judge Ellis is a legionnaire.

A proposed amendment which would have permitted the showing of motion pictures in Woodbury, New Jersey, after 2 P. M. on Sundays, was defeated by a vote of 2,723 to 856.

However, in a referendum at Jamesburg, New Jersey, voters approved Sunday motion pictures by a majority of more than two to one.

At Belvidere, N. J., similar action was taken and exhibitors are planning to start Sunday showings within the next two weeks.

Lifting of a ban on Sunday motion pictures at Manasquan, N. J., was predicted after voters favored the sale of liquor on Sunday in a public referendum.

A majority of the voters of Athens, Ala., has signed petitions asking that Sunday films be permitted.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

Some of the excuses arriving at the desks of Washington's income tax collectors from Hollywood stars for making deductions in their personal tax reports really are choice. John Barrymore seeks to deduct $2,000 for taking a yacht trip to the Galapagos Islands on the grounds that it was necessary to build up for the public an interesting and glamorous character. Elissa Landi asked the collectors to consider her nerves in connection with costs of a maid, claiming that an experienced efficient maid is essential so that an actress doesn't become upset while working. Adolphe Menjou asked for a $1,119 deduction for dry-cleaning bills because his movie engagements are obtained on his reputation for being the best dressed man in Hollywood. Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., asked permission to exempt $341.25 for massages and baths.

Here was Gertrude Merriam minding her own business at her desk in MOTION PICTURE HERALD'S Managers' Round Table when in walks the postman, without even ringing once, and hands her a postcard addressed "Miriam Gertrude, Sixth Avenue and 51st Street," which is where the HERALD'S headquarters are. On the reverse side of the correspondence, a Mrs. Lieb of Newark, addressing a message to "Miriam-Gertrude," said, "As it happens I haven't been well since you saw me last. It's my leg. Anyway would you send me the girdle and brassiere, too, if you can without a fitting."

After the shock, the HERALD'S Gertrude Merriam led a pack of sleuths around the neighborhood, discovering "Miriam-Gertrude," corsetiere, right around the corner.

Earl J. Corder, running the Cody theatre out in the frontierland town of Cody, in Wyoming, is receiving the plaudits of brother merchants who variously in recent months have been mysteriously missing an assortment of merchandise from their shelves.

Soon after showing Warners' "Penrod and Sam," and, probably as a direct exploitation outgrowth of that showing, there came into Cody's juvenile life the formation of some "Junior G-Men," composed of lads in the neighborhood, running eight or nine years of age, who now religiously adhere to the basic principles of secret sleuthing. Nor do they ever disclose the identities or rituals of the gang.

Typical of what is happening was the experience of one local merchant who was flabbergasted the other day when a small boy walked into his store and laid on a counter a number of little trinkets which had disappeared some weeks before.

The proprietor questioned the lad as to his change of heart, and was informed that not he but another boy had stolen the trinkets. "Us Junior G-Men made him give the stuff back," the youngster answered.

All of the John Q. Milquetoast theatregoers who have shuddered in their seats at some of the gory sights of American prize fights and wrestlings recorded on theatre screens by newsreels, or otherwise, have a real treat in store. Pete Smith, for Metro, is filming an entire short subject on French boxing, in which the fighters use both hands and feet. The "sport" is hundreds of years old in France, but practically unknown elsewhere.

One of the principal pursuits pursued in the columns of The Era, London theatrical weekly newspaper, is the belittling of Hollywood, the motion picture industry of this country, and the persons and personalities in it. The Era now is engaging in another indoor sport, taking on the self-appointed position of savior of souls from Hollywood toils.

Taking for his sermon the recent U. S. newspaper story which told how the national move in this country for finger-printing all persons, everywhere, might be extended to Hollywood, Mr. G. A. Atkinson, editor of The Era, rants in headlines across his front page as follows:

> "Hollywood is now officially identified as the focal crime-centre of the United States, according to evidence submitted by the International Association for Identification, meeting in Washington under the presidency of Chief 'G' man, J. Edgar Hoover.
> "The conference passed a resolution for the formation of a committee to confer with the Hays organization, and urge that everyone employed in Hollywood, and all candidates for employment, should have his or her fingerprints taken.
> "All of the criminals of the United States are heading towards Hollywood. . . . Hollywood is now officially admitted to be overrun with criminals of every kind. . . . Not even in the palmiest days of the banditti were there so many thieves as there are in Hollywood and it is not without significance that gangsters and grafters are the dominant characters of Hollywood films. . . . Who knows but that credit-titles on films may be substituted by fingerprints?"

Mr. Atkinson probably is one of those Englishmen who insist that wild-riding, wild-shootin' cowboys, and scalp-tearing, stake-burnin' Indians still roam the Dakota and Wyoming plains.

The somewhat direct approaches of American press agents to the news columns of Motion Picture Herald, make one appreciate the tenor of the note which accompanied some material from Andre Hirschmann, chief of publicity for Realisations D'Art, in Paris, as follows:

This department mentioned on October 9th an incident at Lake Okoboji, Nebraska, and now the Iowa Government, Iowa State Guard and Iowa Chambers of Commerce are up in arms in protest.

"We have always known over here in Iowa," writes Lee Beckley, of the Spencer Theatre, Spencer, Iowa, "that the Nebraskans would like to have the Iowa Great Lakes over in Nebraska, but as it is we still have them over here. So, to keep the records straight, you had better bring Lake Okoboji back to Iowa before some one drives over to Nebraska looking for it."

Ted Emerson, Tri-State Circuit exploiteer, and William Miskell, Orpheum theatre manager in Omaha, arranged for an honest-to-goodness Omaha fencing instructor and his wife to give a demonstration of the fencing art in the theatre's lobby in connection with the showing of "The Prisoner of Zenda." The instructor is one of those fellows who takes his business all too seriously. And so it was when a stranger stepped up to the Orpheum lobby and told the instructor he wanted to try a bit of fencing. The superior instructor thought he had a student, until, to his deep-red embarrassment and to the edification and delight of the lobby witnesses, the youngster disarmed the instructor three times in a short time, without the instructor getting in even a blow.

The stranger said he was a sergeant in the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, and the story got a big play in the Omaha newspapers, with stories and art. Later, however, and quite by accident, it was discovered that the "sergeant" was nothing more than an 18-year-old kid from Canada, in Omaha taking piano lessons. That story got a bigger play in the papers. So the dignified instructor, hurt to the quick, challenged the boy to a real duel, with seconds, nurses, referees, etc. The duel will be dueled soon—weather and cops permitting.

Warner Brothers are striving mightily to crash the country's page-one headlines with a story, intended as an attention-getter for "Alcatraz," which would easily rate as one of the most sensational jail-scandal yarns in a decade. The tipoff came the other day from Arthur Caylor, who wrote in the San Francisco News that Bryce Foy, of the Warner exploitation department, has been asking former prisoner-residents of Alcatraz Island whether Al Capone "didn't use some of his dough to get special privileges at Alcatraz." So far Mr. Foy has found the ex-convicts to be strong believers in that old "Silence Is Golden" adage.

Trouble begins for him when he mixes up his ticket stubs with the coupons for the automobile raffle and deposits his checks in the giveaway box. Seated at last, he is annoyed alternately by a staring young brat and a fidgety stout man in front of him. A mis-swallowed candy drop necessitates Benchley's exit and when he returns he finds himself walking out on the stage in the middle of a dance act. ## City of the Golden Gate
(Columbia)
Travel Short

A sightseeing tour via the camera of some of the scenic landmarks to be found in San Francisco provides the screen tourist some likeable views. Following the patterned path of similar film excursions, this baedeker explores various and varied civic spots such as the city's famed Chinatown, art center, shopping districts and commercial centers. The highlight is the statistically detailed sequence devoted to inspection of the new San Francisco-Oakland bridge.—Running time, 9½ minutes.

Playing With Danger
(Vitaphone)
Adventure

The adventure of five small town boys who take to swimming in a railroad water tank, with almost disastrous result, is reenacted by the "Headline Hunter," Floyd Gibbons. The five climb to the top of the full tank. A train loads up, and the water level goes down, trapping the boys. The youngest is near drowning. By heroic work the other boys manage to get the lad out, and lay him in their donkey cart, face down. By the cart's motion water is pumped out of the lad and he recovers. Finally we see him being presented with $250 by Floyd Gibbons for his adventure story. In the cast are Radley Collins, Gayne Rescher, Billy Boettcher, Eric Burtis, Jr., Royce Perez and William Blake.—Running time, 13 minutes.

Swell Popeye

It would seem, according to this latest Popeye object lesson, that the miraculously invigorating potency in the magic can of spinach is not limited to rational animals alone, but holds possibilities for creatures of the lower orders as well. Popeye, out airing the puny Pekinese belonging to Olive, protests against walking the "sissy" pooch. Bluto comes on the scene with his pet dog, a bulldog as bullyish as his master. The opponents pair off and when the sailor man and his canine companion are getting the worst of the combat, the perennial stimulant of green causes the sudden transformation. It is all fast and furious good fun.—Running time, seven minutes.

The King Without a Crown
(MGM)
Historical Miniature

Speculating with the historical mystery of whether the young Dauphin, son of Marie Antoinette, died during his prison confinement or was spirited off to safety in far away America, this miniature story opens with scenes that portray the bloody times of the French Revolution, when the royal youngster was seized from the arms of his mother, jailed and finally smuggled off to America. Years later, in the United States, the Prince de Joinville came to the home of a western missionary, Eleazer Williams, and called the clergyman the missing prince. Refusing to sign away his rights to the throne, the cleric, nevertheless, refused to claim restoration. The plot is given careful treatment and should hold special attraction for students and maturely inclined spectators.—Running time, nine minutes.

The Clock Goes Round and Round
Novel Cartoon

One of the best Scrappy cartoons to date, this latest edition is distinguished by a novel treatment. Against photographed backgrounds of natural settings, the drawn figure of the cartoon youngster moves with interesting and amusing results. Getting the idea of stopping all clocks to see what will happen, the lad effects imaginative and disturbing conditions. The strange plight of affairs, particularly those concerning his pet dog, moves the boy to correct matters, but in his excitement he starts the timepieces backward and things are just as bad, if not worse, for everything begins to move backwards. Finally, Scrappy adjusts the clocks. Track camera shots produce the bizarre atmosphere with striking effect.—Running time, 6½ minutes.

Travelogue

The land of the Antipodes, including both the civilized people in the cities and other developed area and the aborigines in the interior, has been made the subject of a camera study in color. In Melbourne and Sydney the emphasis is on transportation facilities and the parks, while in the interior the camera is more concerned with a tribal dance and the throwing of a boomerang. The kangaroo and Australia are synonymous and the camera not forgetting includes a few. Narrated by Howard Claney.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Newsy

Items of news and interest included in this issue of screen reporting include shots of Hollywood personalities at the Rainbow Angling Club, the recent newlyweds, Mary Pickford and Buddy Rogers, Frank Buck and his jungle playmates, and the latest thing in apartments for screen folk. Regular material is detailed and should prove equal to the general standard of entertainment for this series.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Starlets
(Vitaphone)
Juvenile Capers

A large assortment of young performers, some good and some not so good, parade past the camera in this subject, in mostly singing and dancing acts. The subject has for a connecting story a little girl's dream of how her playmates would appear doing various specialties. Among the many performers are Janet Dempsey, Dickie Monahan, Moylan Sisters, Joan Donnenwirth and Carmina Cansino.—Running time, 20 minutes.

Porky's Double Trouble
(Vitaphone)
Good

Pork's latest exploit is not an unqualified success, for though he succeeds in capturing Public Enemy No. 1 of animal land, the cheerful pig loses his sweetheart Petunia. The so-called public enemy escapes from jail. Having a remarkable resemblance to Porky, who is a bank teller, he kidnaps the pig, takes his place, robs the bank.—Running time, 7 minutes.

Charlie McCarthy

The legend of Charlie McCarthy, radio's most noted dummy, has spread far and wide over the land in the comparatively short time since Rudy Vallee had Charlie and his mentor, Edgar Bergen, ventriloquist extraordinary, on the Vallee program. Since then Charlie has been added to the dictionary of household words, besides being the mainstay of one of the most widely known programs on the air. Charlie here is the football star of his college team, but behind in his studies. Charlie's forte is "his" patter. On the football bench after being hurt in a game, at the college dance making love to Bergen's girl friend, and in the dean's office taking an examination, Charlie depends on "his" wits.—Running time, 11 minutes.

Popular Science, No. J 7-2
(Paramount)
Of Interest

The varied items included in this issue of the series number bits of information that should appeal to general and particular audiences. For the motor enthusiast, especially in this season of automobile shows, there is a demonstration of the streamlined car of the future. Human interest sequences are devoted to the training and service of dogs educated to be the "seeing eye" for the blind. A modern rocking bed provides a humorous touch. For the scientifically inclined, there's a visit to a scientific institute where precious gems are analyzed. Finally, for the edification of milady—and her gentleman escort, too—a group of comely lassies parade the latest fashions in leg wear. Careful coloring and editing marks the entire composition. Running time, 10 minutes.

Vitaphone Frolics

Vaudeville

Presented in the usual vaudeville routine, four acts have been assembled here, the Stanley Brothers, doing a comedy dance routine; Jack and Loretta Clemens, from radio, who do a song and comedy act; Zeb Carver and his cousins, hill-billy comedians and musicians, with an assorted collection of "instruments" of the kitchen variety, and the L.I.M.E. trio, doing their specialty.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Columbia Club to Receive Quigley Ball Trophy

One of the highlights of the "Victory" dinner-dance, sponsored by the Columbian Club of Columbia Pictures, to be held on Friday evening in New York's Hotel Victoria, will be the presentation of the baseball trophies won by Columbia's championship team last summer. Columbia's vice-president, Jack Cohn, will receive the prizes on behalf of the Columbia team. James Cunningham, for Quigley Publications, donor of the cup emblematic of the Motion Picture Athletic League championship, will make the presentation to Mr. Cohn. The president's cup, also annexed by the Columbia team, will likewise be presented to Mr. Cohn.

Lights Out

Comedy-Melodrama

Cliff Reid, producer, plans his pictures with consideration of exhibitor requirements. He selects a story having fundamental theatrical necessities, such as romance, melodrama, comedy, suspense, excitement, but most of all he plans plenty of action, in approximately 65 minutes.

Mr. Reid's present effort is adapted from a stage show of the same title which appeared about 15 years ago. Robertson-Cole made it as a picture in 1923. Yet only as it retains the basic theme will the current "Lights Out" bear semblance to its sires. That may be expressed briefly. It will include considerable Hollywood background and will concern a strange coincidence. In collaboration with an ex-convict, a tyro screen writer retells the story of a famous crime. The player taking the part of the real crook is made up to look exactly like the man who engineered the crime. This worthy, seeing it on the screen and becoming convinced that it is part of a plan to capture him, comes to Hollywood to avenge himself upon the writer and ex-convict.

Lee Tracy, playing his fourth RKO-Radio feature, will be featured as the writer, Paul Guilfoyle as the ex-convict and Bradley Page in the dual role of actor-crook and real crook. Romantic content will be supplied by Joan Woodbury and Lee Patrick, Richard Lane, Tom Kennedy, Jack Carson, F. M. Thomas, George Irving, Leona Roberts, Maxine Jennings and Cecil Kellaway are in support.

Lew Landers, the director, handled "Danger Patrol," "Flight from Glory" and "Without Orders," all within the Reid formula, short in running time but including much varied entertainment. The screen play was prepared by Paul Yawitz, who recently did "They Wanted to Marry" and "Saturday's Heroes," and Gladys Atwater, who prepared "Criminal Lawyer" and "The Man Who Found Himself."

Release date to be determined.

Thank You, Mr. Moto

(Twentieth Century - Fox)

Mystery Melodrama

Blood and thunder melodrama in China, intrigue, menaced romance and weird doings in strange places are the ingredients of this forthcoming production, the third of the "Mr. Moto" series. It's an exciting tale of the search made by the fabulous Japanese detective, Mr. Moto, to collect seven mystic scrolls which will reveal the hiding place of Genghis Khan's treasures. The scroll, reverently guarded by Chinese, is eagerly sought by unscrupulous Occidentals.

The production is based on a series of stories by J. P. Marquand appearing in Saturday Evening Post. It is being directed by Norman Foster, who handled "Think Fast, Mr. Moto," and "Look Out, Mr. Moto." The release month of the second picture has been changed to January.

Peter Lorre, who created the screen character of Mr. Moto, again will be seen in the title role. He has been given a capable supporting cast, among them Pauline Frederick, famous in earlier screen days and seen recently in "Ramona," Sidney Blackmer, Thomas Beck and Jayne Regan, who are the central figures in the love interest, Sig Rumann, John Carradine, in "The Hurricane," Philip Ahn, John Bleifer and William Von Brincken, to whom has been assigned the principal menace role.

Entirely fiction, the emphasis which producer Sol Wurtzel is placing upon its swift and thrilling adventure, appealing romance and threatening mystery, suggest the type of exploitation.

Release date, Dec. 24, 1937.

Checkers

(Twentieth Century - Fox)

Action Comedy

This "Checkers" is no kin to the "Checkers" made in 1919. There is but one similarity; "Checkers" Jane Withers of 1937 becomes a jockey, just as did "Checkers" Jean Acker a generation ago. That "Checkers" was a wild and wooly race track melodrama. This "Checkers" is to be more of a comedy, with a dash of romance.

Regardless of character of story or type of production, it appears that in this case the showmanship asset which exhibitors will be most eager to accept is Jane Withers. In her 12 preceding pictures, the talented miss has won increasing popularity for herself.

Today's "Checkers" is listed as being based on an original story by Lynn Root and Frank Fenton, who had the assistance of Robert Chapin and Karen De Wolf in whipping it into screen play form. It is being directed by H. Bruce Humberstone, who has done several recent "Charlie Chans," among them "Charlie Chan at the Race Track."

The supporting cast features two wellknown players, Stuart Erwin, currently in "Mr. Boggs Steps Out," and Una Merkel. Prominent parts also are filled by Marvin Stephens, June Carlson, long featured in the "Jones Family" series, John Harrington, Andrew Tombes and Ivan Miller.

Although there have been race track pictures of every description in the last few months, the starring of Miss Withers in another one will undoubtedly be accepted by many as setting it completely apart.

Second Family Affair

(MGM)

Domestic Comedy-Melodrama

For quite a while now Twentieth Century-Fox has been doing all right with a succession of pictures called the "Jones Family" series. "Second Family Affair," tentative title for this picture, originally called "A Family Vacation," looks as if it might have been made for the "Jones Family" larder.

George B. Seitz, who has been directing for 25 years, recently having made such pictures as "The Thirteenth Chair," "Between Two Women," "My Dear Miss Aldrich" and "Navy Blue and Gold" (this last-named to be released shortly), some sequences in "Big City" and "Last of the Mohicans," is the man who is being depended upon to see that the film has all the qualities that have made the "Jones Families" popular and at the same time to make sure that nobody believes that this is treading the same path. He's been given a story of a juvenile son who gets in girl trouble, a juvenile girl who gets in boy trouble, and a grown-up father who gets in business trouble. There is a mother who always sees a ray of sunshine.

Lewis Stone and Fay Holden have the roles of father and mother. Son and daughter are youthful Mickey Rooney and Cecilia Parker. Ted Pearson is the other boy, and Ann Rutherford is the true blue girl whom Mickey Rooney should have remembered instead of Eleanor Lynn. Charley Grapewin will be a villain who didn't intend to be a heavy, and Sara Haden, the old maid aunt.

The exploitation formula has been established. In various sections of the country it has been applied.

Release date, Dec. 17, 1937.

The Lady Misbehaves

(Republic)

Complicated Romance

This forthcoming production is a problem play. Its plot revolves around an uncommon situation. A serious minded girl devotes her life to bringing up her younger sister, who moves from one dangerous escapade to another, eventually becoming a bigamist. To save her sister from a criminal charge, the elder girl assumes the position as wife to the second husband, meanwhile working to procure an annulment of the first marriage. Despite intentions, the elder sister falls in love with the man. Then she is confronted with the problem of retaining the man who loves and saving all from disgrace. The situation is resolved by the younger sister, who obtains a divorce.

The original story is by Joseph Krumgold, who has written several pictures for Columbia and this studio, among them "Adventure in Manhattan," "The Blackmailer" and "Jim Hanvey—Detective." He collaborated with Olive Cooper on the screen play. Lloyd Corrigan, maker of "Night Key," "Dancing Pirate" and "Murder on a Honeymoon," is directing.

Sally Eilers has the role of the elder sister and Patricia Farr will be seen as the younger girl. The two men are Neil Hamilton, now in "Portia on Trial," and Joseph Schildkraut. The supporting cast lists Grant Mitchell, Marcia Mae Jones, George Ernest, Warryen Hymar, Robert Greig, Charles Richman, Spencer Charters and Mary Gordon.

Release date to be determined.

IN COURTS

Temporary Writ Won by ASCAP

The American Society of Composers, Authors and publishers won a temporary injunction order, filed in federal court in Lincoln, Neb., Saturday and signed by Circuit Judge Gardner and District Judges Donahue and Munger, enjoining Nebraska state officers and county attorneys from attempting enforcement of a law recently passed by the legislature and intended by proponents of the measure to outlaw ASCAP in the state.

The Nebraska action is to be followed up with the filing of applications for similar injunctions against officials of Florida and Tennessee, Schwartz and Frolich, ASCAP counsel, said in New York Monday.

The Florida application will be filed some time next week and the Tennessee action will be instituted later. These are the only two states in which anti-ASCAP legislation has been enacted and remains uncontested. Applications for injunctions have been made and argued before federal statutory courts in Montana and Washington, where long awaited decisions are expected to be speeded up as a result of the Nebraska ruling.

Circuit Court Refuses Review of Paramount Plea

Review of a decision of the ninth circuit court of appeals, awarding to Walton Hall Smith $7,500 as damages for breach of contract by Paramount Productions, Inc., was denied Monday by the United States supreme court. The case arose out of the alleged failure of the company to give credit for a picture based on Mr. Smith's story, "Cruise to Nowhere," which he sold to Paramount under a contract with the provision that he be given screen credit in any picture based thereon. The company subsequently produced "We're Not Dressing," in which Mr. Smith was not given the credit he demanded.

In seeking a review from the supreme court, counsel for Paramount contended that the lower court erred in holding that there was any substantial evidence to sustain the verdict as to damages. It was contended that while the story had originally been purchased for use as background for a musical picture, it had ultimately been discarded as too heavy and a new story substituted, and the author accordingly was not entitled to credit.

ERPI Gets Georgia Writ

Electrical Research Products, Inc., secured a temporary injunction last week from Judge V. B. Moore preventing Fulton County, Georgia, authorities from placing assessments for seven years on its property, valued at more than $400,000. The company contends that the property, consisting of sound reproduction and film projection equipment, is all leased to motion picture theatres and that, under the terms of the leases, the theatres are responsible for all tax assessments.

HINDUS BLAME BRITONS' NEWSREEL COLORATION

Two Returning to Bombay to Launch Independent Newsreel Charge "Vicious Propaganda"

Declaring that "India is a victim of vicious propaganda," and that England victimizes the country by influencing and controlling the contents of media of public expression and enlightenment, two native Hindus, A. Karuppan Chettiar and Ramprakash Kohli, are returning to their motherland to start an independent newsreel, "free and clear" of any British control. They have been visiting Hollywood and production centers of the world to study filming techniques.

Because the Indian National Congress got 73 per cent of the votes at the latest balloting, Mr. Chettiar and Kohli said in New York before sailing for London, thence to Bombay, that the British-controlled motion picture board of inspection now will be so reconstituted, with natives, that it finally will become possible to show the "true picture" of India in newsreels.

Contrary to outside belief, they said, there is no great language barrier in India to make difficult the widespread distribution of a domestic newsreel, what with some 65 per cent of the population speaking Hindu.

Few Theatres

Indicating the fertility of the field for the newsreel, Mr. Chettiar and Mr. Kohli explained that at present only 10 per cent, or 67 motion picture theatres, among the mere 675 houses in the country now show newsreels—only one theatre where newsreels may be seen for every 5,368,060 of the country's 360,000,000 inhabitants.

March of Time cannot be shown anywhere in India, because of British-inspired control, and only a few houses show Pathe or Paramount newsreels, whereas Hearst Metrotone (News of the Day) and Universal Newsreel have practically no market at all, according to Mr. Chettiar. British Movietone (Fox Movietone) is used more than any other reel, he explained.

Besides their plan to produce an Indian newsreel by and for Indians, the sponsors also aim to work to correct the impressions of India held by other peoples. The country's political problems, its natural beauties and principal places of interest hardly ever are seen in newsreels on the screens of other countries, said Mr. Chettiar. While visiting many theatres during their stay in this country alone, Mr. Chettiar and his colleague declared that the only newsreel pictures they saw of India were of elephants, monkeys and snake charmers. "There are other things in India besides these," they said.

Dozen Cameramen Lined Up

Already the pair have lined up a dozen motion picture cameramen, all natives, in India, for the new company, each of whom was trained in Hollywood.

Mr. Chettiar is a young East India photographer, and Mr. Kohli a photographer and sound engineer. This is Mr. Kohli's first visit to his own country in 15 years.

Both said that they had received extensive training in motion pictures. Mr. Chettiar is a former student of the Tokyo Imperial College of Arts and a graduate of the New York Institute of Photography. Mr. Kohli had a British motion picture background before coming to the United States and completing his work at the New York Institute of Photography.

"It is my belief that much of the vicious propaganda and misinformation about India can be cleared out most effectively by truthful and accurate newsreels from India," declared Mr. Kohli, who with his colleague will visit the studios of England and Germany before returning to Bombay.

Research Committee Meets

The Research Council Committee to investigate set equipment noise conditions met Friday to make final plans for a series of tests. The committee, appointed to investigate the possibility of reducing the amount of noise on sets by arc lights and other equipment for the purpose of improving sound quality, consists of Thomas Moulton, United Artists studio, chairman; Olin Dupy, George Groves, Ralph Townsend and Gordon S. Mitchell, manager of the Research Council.

GB Actress Writ Dissolved

Constance Bennett won a court action against Gaumont British in London Monday when the actress was granted dissolution of an injunction granted during the last court session and which restrained her action against GB in California. Miss Bennett, in her suit, claimed damages of £7,150, alleging breach of contract to star her in "Everything Is Thunder" and "The Hawk."

Denmark, Norway Offices for "U"

Universal plans to establish new distribution offices in Norway and Denmark. The offices will be at Oslo and Copenhagen and are to be opened on January 1st.

Gustave J. Schaefer, export manager of Universal, who is now in Europe, will remain abroad to establish the offices and select their staffs. The additions are Universal's 73rd and 74th offices in the foreign field.

The first pictures to be released under the new arrangement will be "Three Smart Girls," "When Love Is Young," "Top of the Town," "The Road Back," "As Good as Married," "Wings Over Honolulu," "The Man Who Cried Wolf" and "100 Men and a Girl." The same program will be released in that order in both countries.

Several hundred exhibitors and other motion picture men attended the opening of the new Universal exchange at 1301 South Wabash Avenue in Chicago, a week ago. United Artists and Columbia will open exchanges in the same building.

Blaufox Heads Advertising For Republic Pictures

H. J. Yates' Republic Pictures this week engaged Jay David Blaufox to head its advertising-publicity-exploitation division, succeeding Al Adams, who resigned last week.

Mr. Blaufox has written many plays for Broadway and for years has been engaged in New York theatrical and motion picture publicity, writing for the Fox Brooklyn theatre, Columbia Pictures, Moss Circuit and Stanley-Fabian Theatres. He wrote "The Story of Menlo (Edison) Park for Edison Pioneers.

He was born in London on July 6, 1896, and was educated in Brockton, Mass., Columbia University and University of Toronto, B.A.

Amendment for AMPA

The membership of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers in New York, was asked this week to vote on a constitutional amendment whereby persons identified with the industry, but residing outside the AMPA's New York jurisdiction, can be admitted to membership, but without any voting powers.

Guest of honor at this Thursday's weekly luncheon-meeting, at the International Casino, on Broadway, was to be Elmer Wheeler, president of Tested Selling Institute, whose business is to "pull selling sentences apart and testing them for appeal on customers."

Set Cagney's Next

Negotiations were completed November 16 for the production of James Cagney's next, "Angels with Dirty Faces," bought for $30,000 from Rowland Brown, director of MGM's "The Devil Is a Sissy." Brown has been engaged to direct the new vehicle.

Mr. Cagney has just been signed to a new contract as the result of a deal closed with the star's brother-manager, William Cagney, and calls for the Cagney pictures to be made under the Grand National banner at $150,000 per picture.

AFL CHARGES THAT COAST STUDIO UNION PROBERS ARE CIO MINDED

Legislative Committee of Federation May Investigate the Investigators, Retorts Chairman in California Inquiry

Charges and counter charges, threats and implications, and demands for investigation of investigators were generated this week in Hollywood as the California legislature's capital and labor investigating committee opened hearings in its inquiry into labor relations in the motion picture industry and in particular into the inner workings of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees.

The hearing adjourned in a furor at noon on Wednesday in the midst of bitter arguments over whether it was ethical to ask William Bioff if Chicago gangsters were imported to Hollywood by the union.

Before the testimony of the first few witnesses, members of the IATSE, was completed the Central Labor Council of the American Federation of Labor had demanded an investigation of asserted sympathies for the Committee for Industrial Organization on the part of legislative committee members; similar charges of leanings toward the CIO on the part of members of the IATSE Progressives, secret Alliance group supporting the inquiry, had been heard; and an attempt had been made to inject the name of Al Capone, imprisoned Chicago gangster, into the proceedings.

Paul Richie, chairman of the legislative committee, in a statement at the opening of the hearing said he would welcome such an investigation as that demanded by the AFL council but added that his committee might in turn investigate their investigators.

"Innuendo" Resented

Taking the stand on Wednesday morning after Robert Montgomery, Screen Actors' Guild president, had told of the relations of his organization to the IATSE, Mr. Bioff was asked by Assemblyman Jack B. Tenney if the union had imported hoodlums from the midwest. Mr. Tenney explained that he was requested by anonymous persons to ask the question. Isaac Pacht, attorney for the union, shouted it was unethical to subject the witness to such innuendo from an anonymous source. Carey McWilliams, attorney for Francis Black, Chester Cohen and Irwin P. Henschel, IATSE members who instigated the inquiry, demanded to be heard on the question. The committee adjourned and went into executive session with the attorneys.

First witness in the inquiry was Mr. Henschel, IATSE member and one of the spokesmen for the committee calling themselves "progressives" who had issued a statement praising the investigation by the state "so that gangsterism may be eliminated from Hollywood labor organizations." On the committee's witness stand he charged the IATSE officers with running a full fledged gambling place in union headquarters. He said no meetings of the membership had been held and that 1,200 workers forced into the IATSE had to pay initiation fees as well as two per cent assessments. No financial statement had ever been made, and the two per cent levy had been turned over to George Browne, IATSE president, to use for whatever purpose he saw fit, he added.

Malloy Killing Mentioned

Steve B. Newman, the first IATSE official called to the stand, testified that Mr. Browne drew an annual salary of $20,000 plus an unnamed amount as expenses. Mr. Newman said his own salary was $110 weekly plus $12 a day traveling expenses while on the road. Answering an inquiry by Assemblyman Jack B. Tenney, Mr. Newman said he did not know of any relationship between Mr. Browne and Tom Malloy, head of the Chicago projectionists' local who was assassinated six years ago.

Resuming the stand on Monday Mr. Newman was asked by Mr. Richie if he knew of any connection between Mr. Browne or William Bioff, the union president's representative, and Al Capone. He replied in the negative. Asked whether Mr. Bioff had ever been questioned in Chicago about the Malloy slaying Mr. Newman replied that Mr. Bioff came from Chicago but that he did not know of any questioning.

Preceding Mr. Newman on the stand on Friday were James E. Shaw and Francis Black, IATSE members, who said they had lost their studio jobs because of their dissatisfaction with the IATSE officers.

Interunion discord was disclosed when the studio carpenters' union went on record in favor of the investigation. Cliff Mace, business agent of the union, said no union organization operating fairly and above board should have anything to fear from the inquiry. The carpenters and the IATSE have been at odds for some time over a question of jurisdiction.

Clayton Adams and William Silliman, investigators for the committee, submitted a report over the weekend after looking at IATSE financial records and books in which they recommended the dropping of the inquiry. Mr. Richie, said on Monday they had exceeded their authority in making such a recommendation.

Frank Dawson, member of the legislative committee, on Monday recalled Irwin Henschel and confronted him with a copy of the letter he had written to Harry Bridges, CIO organizer on the west coast, asking his support in the overthrowing of the IATSE leaders. Also presented by Mr. Dawson was Mr. Bridges' reply indicating that the IATSE should be harassed by suits. In reply Mr. Henschel said he did not lean either toward the AFL or the CIO but was interested only in good unionism.

Harland Holmden, third vice-president of the International, took the stand late Monday to explain upon questioning that autonomy was taken away from the local unions because of dissension in their ranks and because too many factional leaders wanted to hold office. Autonomy would be restored when this trouble ended, he said.

Mr. Holmden also testified that the two per cent assessment levied by International officers was to finance organization work. While he testified the IATSE official was booed and jeered by the crowd.

Joe Gilpin, Warner studio manager, on Wednesday told the State Legislative committee investigating IATSE racketeering charges that he dismissed Francis H. Black, studio electrician, on orders from an unnamed IATSE official. This bears out previous testimony of Black, who now has a $90,000 damages suit filed against Alliance officials.

Other major developments in the probe were the testimony of Herbert Sorrell, business agent of the Studio Painters' Union, which was the main participant in the April studio strike, that William Bioff, coast IATSE head, had offered him a proposition to end the strike and get back lost pay for the strikers if the accepted only a 10 per cent wage increase instead of the 20 per cent they demanded, and the charge of J. W. Buzzell, secretary of the Central Labor Council of the AFL, which recently appointed a committee to investigate the purposes behind the inquiry that at least three of the members are influenced by the CIO.

Approaching Deadline

With major circuits and Local 306 of the motion picture projectionists' union deadlocked in the question of additional increases for operators in the New York territory, it was expected that the matter would go before an arbitration board after next Monday, the deadline set for a settlement by members of the local.

The circuits several weeks ago granted the union men ten per cent increases retroactive to September 1st but the projectionists are demanding an additional 38 per cent.

Higher wages and shorter hours were granted usherettes, cashiers and doormen in Seattle theatres under an agreement between Theatrical Employees Union, Local A22, AFL unit, and the Seattle downtown and suburban theatre owners. In Kansas City Felix Snow, district representative for the IATSE reported the Midland, Mainstreet and Newman theatres were agreeable to the proposal made by the Theatre Employees union providing a minimum wage of 35 cents an hour for ushers and adding a dollar a week to the wages of other employees.

Educational Signs with Guild

Educational Pictures this week signed a contract with the Screen Actors' Guild covering all of the company's production activities in the east. Educational had been complying with the Guild's contractual provisions since the guild shop was placed in effect in September, but had delayed signing a contract until arbitration provisions were clarified.

"Q" AND "A" PROGRAM LATEST GIVEAWAY

George Baker introduced "Quizzer Court", a new type of stage program, at his Electric theatre in Kansas City, Kan., October 26, and will continue with it for at least 13 weeks.

The program is broadcast from the Electric stage from 9:00 to 9:30 p.m. each Tuesday night by KCKN, radio station of the Kansas City Kansan, and the station has six Kansas City, Kan., merchants as sponsors.

"Quizzer Court" is a question-and-answer type of program. Fourteen persons are selected from the audience and appear on the stage to answer 28 questions, or two apiece, presented by Owen Balch of KCKN, who is "Professor Quizzer". Don Owens of KCKN is the judge.

Each participant draws a question; Balch reads them and they are then answered—or not. The $25 in prizes is divided into $18 and $7.

Protests Made On "Sex" Films

Reflections of official and social attitudes toward so-called "sex" films were seen this week in several formidable reports against them.

The New York State board of censorship said that in 1936-37 it had rejected 16 features entirely, not one of them bearing the industry's Production Code seal as indicating product from the organized industry, the 16 banned films presumably including for the most part both foreign and domestic "sex" films. The Board never discloses titles of prohibited pictures.

The Knights of Columbus were called upon by Archbishop Williams, in Springfield, Mass., to operate as "a solid phalanx" against lascivious books and films.

Los Angeles police arrested theatre attendants found selling "sex" pamphlets at Tally's Criterion theatre in connection with the showing of Samuel Cummins' "Children of Loneliness." Arrested were Robert Godwin, Lucy Bergen, Julia Martin ad Maxine Casella. Each were required to post $500 bail on charges of selling salacious literature. The theatre had been leased to Mr. Cummings' Jewel Products by the Talley interests, with William Kohler, local Los Angeles Jewel manager, in charge.

Meanwhile Mr. Cummins' other sex-film, "Ecstasy," continued to be the subject of legal arguments in New York. The case brought by Eureka Productions against Governor Lehman, John J. Bennett, Jr., Attorney General; Frank Graves, Commissioner of Education, and Irwin Esmond, director of the motion picture division of the Department of Education, was marked off the calendar when called before the United States district court in New York Wednesday by agreement of both sides. John C. Knox, judge, sent the case to statutory court, which usually handles only constitutional cases. The Eureka company contends the censorship regulations of New York State interfere with interstate commerce and are therefore unconstitutional. Eureka also claims that New York lost jurisdiction when custom authorities passed the film.

From the State Capitol at Albany came the New York board of censorship's report that it had banned 16 films during 1936-37, out of a total of 1,924 reviewed. The information was contained in the annual report of Irwin Esmond, division director, to Frank P. Graves, Commissioner of Education. Actually 24 pictures were initially rejected, but eight were revised and later approved. The 16 finally rejected compares with 19 initally rejected in the previous year, and 16 finally rejected.

Besides the fact that none of the 16 banned pictures bore the seal of Hollywood's Production Code Administration, none was made by a member company of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributor of America, said that organization in New York.

Eliminations were made in 162 films on statutory grounds, comparing with 180 films out of the 1,902 reviewed in the previous year. According to the report, in addition to the pictures rejected entirely, 1,291 eliminations of scenes, subtitles and dialogue were made as follows: Indecent, 546; immoral or tending to corrupt morals, 343; tending to incite to crime, 305; inhuman, 64; sacrilegious, 33.

A total of 9,784 reels were reviewed by the censor board, or more than 9,000,000 feet of film. Three appeals were taken to the commissioner of education. In two cases the censor was upheld; in one it was reversed.

The total receipts of the censor board were $292,435.62, compared to $269,931.20 for the preceding year, an increase of $22,504.42. Expenditures totaled $64,921.46, as compared with $65,728.99 for the preceding year. The net revenue to the state, after deducting the cost of operation, was $227,514.16, comparing to $204,-202.21 for the preceding year. Since the organization of the censor board in 1931 the total revenue to the state has amounted to $2,297,-896.80.

The report noted that the number of foreign pictures submitted for review has shown a marked increase. More than 400 foreign-made films from 20 countries were reviewed.

Producers Asked To File Indices

In preparation for the launching of its title "de-freezing" plan, the Motion Pirture Producers and Distributors of America has requested each producing company to submit its release index of 250 titles by December 1st, according to Albert W. Howson, chairman of the title registration committee.

The organization's new system, approved recently by the MPPDA board of directors, goes in effect January 1st. After that date the original titles of all pictures released more than four years ago and not included on the registrant's list of 250 titles will become available to other producers.

Titles of pictures made from plays or copyrighted material and bearing the same title as the plays or copyrighted property will not be included among the titles "de-frozen." Registrants may claim permanent protection on this type of title.

The "de-freezing" does not affect the 100 titles each company is permitted to keep on the registration index for one year, but, at the same time, the "de-freezing" resolution was approved, the board voted to automatically remove titles from the registration list immediately a picture bearing the registered title is released.

Carriers and Truckers Meet

The joint convention of the National Film Carriers, Inc., and the National Trucking Association got under way in Louisville, Ky., Sunday, with registration of visitors and social events.

James Clark, president of the NFC, and Arthur Dickinson of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, spoke on Monday. Mr. Clark discussed proposed safety regulations of the Interstate Commerce Commission regarding truck operation, and Mr. Dickinson spoke on transportation and film handling as well as the practicability of setting up film shipping and inspection bureaus on a national scale.

Other speakers included Harold Shertz, John L. Rogers, H. H. Kelly and Benjamin Banning.

Mr. Clark was reelected president and treasurer and Clint Weyer, of New York, was renamed to the post of secretary. W. W. Gilborg, San Francisco, was chosen vice-president. E. E. Jameson, Kansas City, was appointed to the executive board and A. C. Amsler was elected to the board of managers.

The NFC members passed a resolution asking separate recognition in the National Trucking Association which will automatically place one of their members on the National's executive board.

Universal Lists Business Gains

A marked upturn in income was reported this week by Universal Pictures, the while Eastman Kodak voted extra dividend payments and a bonus for workers.

The only other financial news of importance during the week was the report of the Securities and Exchange Commission on the assumption in September by Sidney R. Kent, president, of direct ownership of 3,355 shares of Twentieth Century-Fox common stock heretofore held by the Berkshire Finance Company. The report of the SEC on the transactions of officers and directors in the stocks of their corporations during September also showed that Pathe International Corporation held more than ten per cent in two classes of Monogram Pictures securities on September 10, when the latter company's registration became effective, holding beneficially 66,667 shares of common stock and options for 6,017 shares of common.

Eastman Kodak Company declared an extra dividend of 50 cents on common, payable December 10 to record of November 20, in addition to a regular dividend of $2.50, payable January 3 to record of December 5.

Directors also voted the 26th annual wage dividend of $3,555,000. The wage dividend, based on the common dividend payment, is payable March 1 and is the largest in the company's history.

Domestic billings of Universal Pictures Company, Inc., during the 13 weeks ended October 30, 1937, representing the fourth quarter of its fiscal year, showed an increase of approximately 17 per cent over the total for the corresponding quarter a year ago, J. Cheever Cowdin, chairman of the board, announced.

"The increase is a result principally of the development by Universal over the past year of a number of outstanding stars and to the improvement in quality of pictures as production difficulties have been ironed out," said Mr. Cowdin.

"Universal at the end of the quarter had completed 15 pictures as compared with 12 at this stage of last season. During the 60 days to January 1, 1937, the company will place in production 13 pictures, all but four of which are expected to be completed by that date."

Warners Opening Chicago House

Warner Brothers will open their new Rhodes theatre in Chicago, on Friday. One of the features of the theatre is the forecourt which will have 30 blocks of cement each with the hand and foot prints of a famous star embedded thereon. The house seats 1,500.

Producing Company Formed

Hollywood Productions, Inc., was formed in Hollywood last week with Oscar Horn, president of Hollywood Studios, Inc., Harry Schenck and S. Geneen, as officers. No production schedule or release plan has been announced.

Harry Schenck last week in Hollywood signed with Imperial Pictures to produce three features, each to cost about $75,000.

JAPANESE QUOTA SYSTEM MAY SUPPLANT BAN ON FOREIGN FILM

Prohibition of Foreign Product as Barrier Against Money Shipments May Be Extended Until Next Spring

by HIROMU TOMINAGA
in Tokyo

Lifting of the ban on motion picture imports, hoped for by the first of next year, now is expected to be delayed until spring, though the prohibition may be superseded by a quota system if Japanese trade may be kept in favorable balance.

No development ever has proved so serious to foreign film activity in Japan as has this blockade by the Finance Ministry. In fact, few of those concerned would have dreamed of encountering such unprecedented difficulties, though there were indications that some day our industry might be reined up by measures of national control.

There is no other reason for the non-permission than that our exchange control, tightened further through frequent reforms, happened to work more effectively in gear with the emergency legislation on import and export restriction which our government promulgated to meet the China Incident. In other words, the government has been endeavoring to hold in check a possible increase in the amount covering speculative purchase of foreign drafts and non-exchange import growing with the productive expansion and development of the munitions industry of late, forcing the government to emergency legislative action.

It is to be understood, however, that the exchange control law is one thing, and the emergency legislation for import and export restriction is another, although in practical application both forms of legislation now in force are intended, no doubt, for control of imports and exports.

In the case of foreign motion pictures, importation of which has been prohibited for the rest of this year, our foreign film importers and distributors have resigned themselves to passing the remaining two months without any more product from abroad than had reached Japan by the middle of September, this year. After all, foreign films had been destined to such lamentable treatment under application of the exchange control law.

Meeting Financial Situation

When importers were notified September 21st that the government had decided not to permit entry of any motion pictures except newsreels for the remainder of this year, they not only lost hope of receiving any new releases from abroad but some seemed to have gone so far as to despair of every possibility of business operation in Japan.

The revision of the exchange control law scarcely had been promulgated when the government began to take every available measure to tide over financial difficulty. As the second step, the government imposed a special consumption tax on film importations at 20 per cent ad valorem, with the idea that such commodities fall in the category of non-urgent goods or luxuries. Already at that time the government was planning to institute the emergency legislation restricting imports and exports based on its established principle that general importation of such staple commodities as cotton, wool and timber should be restricted or prohibited, not to mention the goods which the government considers luxuries.

The Finance Ministry, which originally was expected to institute exchange control only through checking oversea remittances, emphasized the government's judgment that the foreign motion picture was non-urgent goods, as evidenced in the imposition of the special consumption tax.

The film importers, ever since they were notified that no foreign films except newsreels would be admitted until the end of this year, have had no alternative left than to attempt to curtail operating expenses. They are actually disheartened, as they see no solution of their problem.

Exchange Restriction Only

There is, however, one fact which may soothe their anxiety to some extent. It is found in a paragraph of the announcement of our Commerce and Industry Department in which some 250 items for prohibition or restriction have been enumerated, as determined as of September 28th. The government has not placed the foreign picture in the Group B covering those 250 items.

However, it should be added that this listing of goods is not complete yet. The government has stated openly that in order to obtain further reduction in the gross amount of import, it will be necessary to add some 300 import items to those 250 within a month if possible.

Nevertheless, as matters now stand, importation of motion pictures has been so prohibited only under the Exchange Control Law.

Much, therefore, depends on the exchange situation, which is subject to fluctuation with developments in the Sino-Japanese dispute which has close bearings upon our national finance.

Press comment in the October 9th issue of Tokyo Asahi speaks volumes for the view entertained by our leading newspaper on this problem.

" . . . the cultural commodities, such as fine pictures . . . are not included for restriction or prohibition in the Group B commodities as covered by the import and export restriction legislation promulgated recently. For instance, in the case of importing a fine picture worth Y100,000 from France, the same legislation, apart from its being in conflict with the Exchange Control Law, will not work any competent power to restrict or prohibit, whereas practically the importation is prevented under the exchange control law restricting the amount of remittances.

Cites Tariff Prohibition

"We call to mind an instance wherein a fine picture worth Y100,000 made in France by a famous Japanese artist was taxed 100 per cent import tariff. This was a case from which everybody will learn how thoughtless the then government officials were in handling cultural commodities for import.

"Generally, however, motion picture films so far have had a close shave in the government's actual application of the recent emergency import and export restriction legislation, probably because the government has taken into consideration the low estate of domestic raw film in Japan, while in the case of developed motion picture films, importation has been restricted (prohibited, as a matter of fact) under the exchange control law."

In another article, in the October issue, the publication points out that the Commerce and Industry Department has specified that "Group B (restricted) does not include any developed photographic plate."

RKO Plan Seen Advanced By Alger Action

The completion of the RKO Radio reorganization may be advanced a month or more as a result of a shortening of the procedure for hearings on the plan invoked Monday by Special Master George W. Alger.

Hearings on Mr. Alger's tentative report, presented to reorganization principals on November 6th, which were scheduled to get under way Monday and may have continued indefinitely, are being dispensed with. Instead the special master informed attorneys that written objections to the report will be accepted and will be sent to Federal Judge William Bondy with the special master's final report on the plan.

The report as disclosed last week approved the RKO reorganization plan in principle but proposed a reduction in the $9,150,628 Rockefeller Center claim against RKO, which in Mr. Alger's opinion would give it a maximum value of $5,532,000. Rockefeller Center officials said the reduction would not be contested. If contested the claim could delay consummation of the reorganization plan for many months.

The allowance of $1,000 each to Morton Blumenthal, Witold Pavlowski and Jay Strong, who acted as appraisers for the Orpheum Circuit, Inc., were cut to $600 each by Federal Judge Henry W. Goddard in the United States district court in New York last week. Judge Goddard ordered Marcus Heiman, Orpheum trustee, to make payment. Bankruptcy Referee Oscar W. Ehrhorn had previously allowed the higher amount. Judge Goddard approved an allowance of $775 to John C. Pinto and Associates.

Radio-Keith Orpheum Corporation through Irving Trust Company, trustee, Monday was denied a petition by the United States supreme court, for review of a lower court decision upholding Hippodrome Building Corporation of Cleveland, Ohio, in a case involving leasing of a theatre in Cleveland to an RKO subsidiary. The Hippodrome company asked $700,000 from RKO which guaranteed the lease. The tenant, Cleveland Hippodrome Theatre Company, went into receivership on March 31, 1933, and the Hippodrome Building Company sued for the rent for the balance of the lease, as it was guaranteed by RKO.

Canada Openings Increase

Statistics compiled in trade circles in Toronto bring out the fact that no less than 86 new theatres have been opened across Canada during the eight months ending August 31st. Approximately two-thirds of these are in Ontario.

RADIO CHIEFS AGREE WITH AT&T ON TELEVISION TRANSMISSION BY WIRE

Zenith's President and Official of Don Lee System Say Bell Coaxial Cable Test Supports Latest Conclusion

Two of the numerous and varied predictions on television gained partial support this week through the Bell Telephone Laboratories' employment of a coaxial cable to broadcast motion pictures from New York to Philadelphia.

The demonstration bolstered the opinions of E. F. McDonald, president of the Zenith Radio Corporation, and Harry R. Lubcke, director of television for the Don Lee Broadcasting System. Mr. McDonald, speaking before a stockholders' meeting in Chicago, announced that in his opinion, contrary to the belief of others in the field, television may eventually come over telephone wires instead of through wireless transmitters.

Mr. Lubcke, discussing the subject in the magazine American Cinematographer, declared "motion picture film is an important program vehicle in television" and added: "Until suitable coaxial cables or television relay stations are networked across the country, film is the only means by which programs may be broadcast nationally, unless the cast and properties of the show themselves are transported from city to city."

Other Developments

Other recent developments in the field of television included the granting of authority by the Federal Communications Commission to the National Broadcasting Company to construct a portable station to operate in the vicinity of New York and Camden, New Jersey; the starting of construction on a modern 441-line definition cathode ray television transmitter at the Massachusetts Television Institute; the previewing by television of the National Business Show in New York City; reduction of prices for television sets in England; and the filing with the FCC by General Electric Company of applications for authority to construct four television stations.

Mr. McDonald envisaged the American Telephone and Telegraph Company handling the transmission of television programs with the public paying for the service as it does for telephone service. Programs probably will be produced by the motion picture industry, he added, and radio manufacturers will restrict their activities largely to the building of television receivers.

The Bell Laboratories' demonstration won expressions of satisfaction from executives of the A. T. & T. Dr. Herbert E. Ives, of the laboratories, declared there was "no limit to the application of this system," but first, he added, "we must wait for the development of television."

Seven Minute Newsreel

Included on the demonstration program was a newsreel, that lasted about seven minutes, and diagrams and an explanation of the functioning of the system. A cable which can accommodate 240 telephone conversations simultaneously was employed for the experiment. Although the latest television equipment produces images of 441 lines, the pictures in the demonstration reproduced on a screen seven by eight inches, were of only 240 lines and this resulted in a slight flicker.

Dr. Frank B. Jewett, president of the laboratories, explained that the inferiority in the grain was "not due to any limitation imposed by the scanning or reproducing apparatus, but to the limitations imposed by the experimental terminal and repeater equipment now on the New York-Philadelphia cable."

"This equipment," he continued, "limits the top frequency of the transmitted current to approximately 1,000,000 cycles, so that a 240-line picture is about the finest grain image that can be transmitted.

Single Side-Band Transmission

"What the demonstration did show for the first time is the unique and economical utilization for television currents of the frequency band of a long coaxial cable. Instead of transmitting the television currents by the double side-band method common to radio broadcasting, a method for single side-band transmission was developed, thus utilizing to the fullest extent the frequency range for which the cable system was equipped."

He continued by explaining: "A single side-band is obtained by double modulation and precise filtering; and this side-band is placed to avoid the first 100 kilocycles of the frequency range of the cable system where transmission is unsatisfactory and the various components cannot easily be amplified.

"There was also introduced compensation for the different velocities of transmission of different frequency components. The result is the delivery of an essentially perfect replica of the almost infinitely complex current produced at the sending end by the scanning equipment.

The Next Step

"These are results never before obtained. As soon as the present experiments are completed the experimental 1,000,000-cycle repeaters on a portion of the cables are to be replaced by experimental 2,000,000-cycle repeaters, as the next orderly step in the development of equipment which will give a coaxial cable capable of accommodating the maximum number of telephone channels which it is economical to handle on such a cable, or the widest band of frequencies which the best television scanning and reproducing apparatus may require."

Cites Film Advantages

In support of the contention that motion pictures are an important program vehicle in television, the Don Lee television director, Mr. Lubcke, pointed out that film "enjoys several advantages over other types of pickup."

"Motion picture productions," he wrote, "can be made in parts and the result edited. Motion picture programs can be released simultaneously in several remote cities, since any number of positive prints can be made from a master negative. . . .

Mr. Lubcke said he believed programs would be of 15 minutes duration because of the fact television requires the undivided attention of an audience.

"In the 15-minute interval," Mr. Lubcke said, "comedy, vaudeville, newsreel or serials can be presented. A well produced comedy with the technique of slapstick action and radio gag-telling artfully blended will be a new presentation to the American audience."

"The vaudeville programs can utilize acrobatic, singing, tap and ballroom dancing acts, certain magicians' acts and impersonation, monologue acts, all with some restrictions, but not modified sufficiently to lose the style of vaudeville should this be desired.

"The broadcasting of a nightly newsreel at a time when all the members of the family can be home is an instance where the use of film is essential.

Sees Low Budget Pictures

As for the cost of producing television programs, Mr. Lubcke expressed the opinion that it will be handled in much the same way as present-day radio programs.

"Compared to present motion picture budgets, the majority of television productions will be low budget pictures," he continued. "Consequently, large expenditures for stars' salaries, lavish sets, and perfect production will not be made.

Station Construction Authorized

The television station which the NBC was granted authority to construct will operate on frequencies of 92,000 and 175,000-180,000 kilocycles with a power of 400 watts for visual transmission and 100 watts for sound.

The Massachusetts Television Institute's transmitter is being constructed under the direction of Robert E. Rutherford, former director of television research for the Farnsworth Television, Inc., of Philadelphia. The equipment is of the type used in England and which was used in televising the Coronation parade.

England's Exhibition

In England, the recent London radio exhibition was identified in a dispatch to the Wall Street Journal as the "first real television show."

"Fourteen manufacturers displayed and demonstrated sets in 14 small theatres and prices ranged from around £35 to £170. Although the sharp reduction in prices is the biggest development in television, another important step forward is the wider choice in sets due to the entry of many more manufacturers in this field and to the fact that individual producers are extending their ranges. . . .

"Telephotograph" to Ship

Other developments in England included the transmission by the British Broadcasting Corporation of the first "telephotograph" to a ship at sea, and the announcement that Electrical Musical Indusries, Ltd., radio-gramophone combine controlling the television system used by the BBC, made £393,964 profit in 1937, more than £90,000 over the previous year.

General Electric Company is planning to engage in broad television experimental transmission, it was revealed when the company filed applications with the Federal Communications Commission in Washington for authority to construct four stations, two at Schenectady, one at Albany and the fourth at Easton, Conn.

TREND TOWARD CLASSROOM FILMS ALREADY RECOGNIZED BY 30 STATES

Leaders in Education Showing Mounting Interest, Says Dr. Hoban of American Council; 80 Colleges Have Courses

Encouraged by the cooperation offered by the motion picture industry and heartened by the success which has attended efforts to use films for educational purposes, school and college officials throughout the country are showing steadily increasing interest in educational motion pictures, according to Dr. Charles Hoban, in charge of the film project of the American Council on Education, in Washington. There are definite signs showing that a new and close relationship will develop shortly between motion pictures and the classrooms of America.

In fact, Dr. Hoban said, the use of pictures is spreading so rapidly that the council is finding it difficult to keep its records up to date.

Between 30 and 35 states are showing a definite interest in the use of pictures. In a few states, nothing has yet been done, but even in those areas there are indications that action will be taken in the near future toward establishing film libraries and installing projection equipment in schools and colleges. The most notable move in educational films, of course, is the industry's own plan to enter the field, as now sponsored by the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America.

In New England, Dr. Hoban pointed out, only Massachusetts has established a library, but the state is very liberal in extending courtesies to the other New England areas and loans its films upon request. In New York. while the state itself has taken no action, New York City has facilities, and the University of Syracuse is starting a cooperative film library.

Pennsylvania, while taking no action to establish facilities, is the only state in the Union to require its teachers to know visual education technique, and it is expected New Jersey soon will impose a similar requirement.

Delaware has no facilities, nor has Maryland or Virginia, but in the southeast, Georgia is taking the lead and already serves 12 states with film, its distribution now being thought to have reached a maximum. In Florida, climatic difficulties are making progress difficult, but the matter is one of interest and a cooperative library is being considered.

The middlewest, according to Dr. Hoban, is one of the major centers of activity, the states of Ohio, Indiana, Wisconsin, Minnesota and Missouri being, on the whole, well equipped. The southwest is less advanced, although Texas is taking a leading part in the movement. California, as might be expected, has already a well developed service.

For the most part, he explained, these facilities are for silent pictures and little progress has yet been made with sound equipment. "The present facilities must be expanded to take care of sound," he pointed out. "There is a vast amount of material in state distribution libraries, but it is practically all silent. Georgia, however, has already established sound facilities."

So far as the Council is concerned, Dr. Hoban explained, it is interested in "practical education," that is, in material which has a practical use and through which students can be aided to equip themselves for after-school life.

As an organization, the Council considers itself a clearing house for information on this and other educational subjects and, looking at the matter from a practical standpoint, believes that the burden of providing the necessary film material will rest most heavily upon the commercial film producers.

"Education cannot, however, depend upon commercial concerns to carry forward necessary experimentation," he continued. "On the contrary, such concerns have had to consider maximum utility of minimum material and, as a result, 'instructional' films are highly condensed, academic in approach, and geared into a static curriculum."

Problem of Production

Accordingly, he pointed out, educators are faced with a major problem—that of directing the activities of the producers into the most usable channels.

With this in mind, Dr. Hoban said, the council has determined to center its activities for the next three years largely in two fields, one of which will be to evaluate all educational material now available to determine not only what now exists for educational purposes but to ascertain also what is needed.

In educational circles, it is said, there is a belief that probably not more than 20 per cent of the "educational" material now available is suitable for use in the modern school and college, sufficiently up-to-date to be abreast of development in some of the sciences, or sufficiently interestingly presented to hold attention, particularly of the younger pupils.

Experimental Centers

The second phase of the council's effort will be to establish experimental centers to determine what can be done with films in education. Here, the educators believe, films can be used throughout the entire school life of the pupil, from kindergarten to university post-graduate work.

In the past, the educators have claimed that they could not use educational films because of the lack of equipment and libraries, the equipment manufacturers have pointed to the lack of pictures and the producers have countered with the charge that they could secure no distribution.

In the view of Dr. Hoban, the necessary films must first be made available, and their availability will lead to the acquision of equipment. In other words, the availability of equipment will not necessarily spur production of material, but availability of material will bring about a demand for equipment.

One of the most important problems to be solved is that of distribution, but educators are not especially concerned over this point, believing that it will settle itself as progress is made in other lines on the basis of experiments now under way.

It was emphasized by Dr. Hoban that the Council has no plans for immediate extension of activity, believing that the subject is too important to be forced and preferring to study present resources, point the way to future needs and make experiments in every possible direction before any hard and fast methods are developed. In this, the council acts merely as a trail blazer for education as a whole and not as an arbiter of what is to be used or how it is to be employed.

With the increasing use of motion pictures in teachers' colleges, he said, instructors will be trained in visual education. No list of schools giving such instruction is now available but data collected by the council indicate that it is being taught by probably 100 agencies. Instruction in the use of material, he pointed out, will be imperative, since there is a field for silent as well as sound films and, while the latter tell their own story, supplementary exposition orally will be required in the use of the former.

Sees General Use

The school of the future, said Dr. Hoban, will make use of motion pictures in the teaching of practically all subjects. The attendance of children at motion picture theatres is preparing them to learn from films even before they learn to read. He holds that the picture affords opportunity for instruction to be secured by both eye and ear in a manner far more interesting than any text book and in such a way that the lesson is more firmly imprinted upon the mind.

The problems that now confront the educator, in his belief, are not difficult of solution and, for the most part, will be disposed of almost automatically as the movement progresses. The industry's cooperation has been assured in the most important part of the work—that of producing the material—and the most important task confronting education is that of guiding the producers in their production efforts, according to Dr. Hoban.

80 Colleges Give Courses

In addition to actually adopting visual media for aiding in teaching and learning, some 80 American colleges and universities are giving regular courses on motion picture in order to instruct students in the art and instruction of the film.

Vernon Adams, public relations department of RKO, New York, told exhibitors attending the annual convention of the Oklahoma MPTO, at Oklahoma City's Biltmore Hotel, last week: "You would be amazed if you knew the interest of school children and their teachers in the theatre business."

He said that some exhibitors have even given lectures to school children explaining the opportunities in the theatre business for those young people so inclined.

He introduced Miss Florette McNeese, director of curriculum of the Oklahoma City public school system and director of English curriculum of the Oklahoma state department of public education, who told the exhibitors that "teachers are interested in classroom use of motion pictures, not for amusement, but for showing school children what they cannot visualize from school books, lectures or in any other manner.

"We are placing in every school in Oklahoma courses in motion picture appreciation, making available books on motion picture production, lighting, direction and other problems met in the making of moving pictures.

700 BRITISH SCHOOLS USE CLASSROOM FILMS

More than 700 schools in England and Wales now show educational films. This figure, while not official, was given by the Board of Education in answer to a Commons question recently.

It was also said that the Board, which is sympathetic to the idea, is soon to issue a pamphlet for the guidance of educational authorities.

CASH AND CHANCE GAME HIT IN EIGHT CITIES

Oklahoma City Circuit Drops Policy; Grand Jury Indicts Georgia Theatre Operator

Chance games at motion picture theatres lost more ground this week than in any similar period in months.

Standard Theatres in downtown Oklahoma City abandoned "Bank Night," on the ground it was waning in popularity.

A grand jury in Statesboro, Ga., indicted H. H. Macon, operating the State, for conducting the games.

The Fort Wayne, Ind., Ministerial Association voted approval of a city-wide ordinance prohibiting chance games.

Racine, Wis., decided on a similar city ordinance.

The court of appeals at Atlanta, Ga., ruled that Bank Night violates the state lottery law.

Montgomery, Illinois county, seeks to eliminate games by action of the state's attorney.

Bank Night operations caused the arrest of Frank King, manager, and Joseph Hockenberry, assistant, at the Midland, Newark, Ohio.

The Independent Theatre Owners Association in New York was reported still hopeful that chance games and giveaways will be discontinued in the Metropolitan area and the organization has decided to press its fight.

Harry Brandt, ITOA president, told members that negotiations were continuing with large circuits to drop the practice. RKO is said to be responsible for the failure of the move in Flatbush, it was said after an ITOA meeting. The circuit had agreed to abandon games in the Kenmore, but later changed its decision, contending that partners in the theatre refused to eliminate the policy unless it applied to the entire circuit.

A decision of illegality by the state court killed games in Nebraska.

Resuming in Minnesota

The only formidable ground gained in the week by chance games was the decision of Minnesota theatres to resume games following the state supreme court's decision holding that the state statutes are not violated when the chance game plan is so operated that patrons standing outside a theatre without tickets can win.

Newest of the games is "Sky-Hi," based on aviation practices and terms, which started last weekend at the Harbor theatre at Brooklyn, N. Y., under sponsorship of the Egli Company, manufacturer in New York.

Violation, Says Georgia Court

In Atlanta, the court of appeals of Georgia ruled that Bank Night at a motion picture theatre is in violation of the state lottery law, despite the fact that it is not necessary to purchase a ticket in order to participate in the drawing.

The highest tribunal in the state of Georgia thus upheld the decision of Judge Clayton Jones, of the Albany City court, who overruled a demurrer against an accusation charging Frank Barker, operating a theatre in Albany, with violation of the state lottery laws in the use of Bank Night at his theatre.

Mr. Barker contended that no money was involved in his operation of Bank Night, since everyone was allowed to register for the drawings, whether a patron purchased a ticket or not, and that the winner was admitted to the house, free of charge, if he was outside the theatre when his name was called.

The court of appeals held that the patrons of the theatre actually paid collectively or in a body for the lottery, which was necessarily intended as a business stimulator.

Standard Theatres, Inc., Oklahoma City, Okla., will drop Bank Night in all its downtown houses as soon as the present $1,000 award is given away. Neighborhood houses now running Bank Night once a week will continue with Bank Night features, according to George Henger, city manager.

Says Popularity Is Ebbing

Standard officials said, "The Bank Night fad is waning in popularity."

Members of the Fort Wayne Ministerial Association voted unanimous approval of a proposed city ordinance banning Bank Nights. City Attorney Walter E. Helmke said that he has not been able to find any precedent for a city outlawing Bank Nights.

Sherwood L. Reeder, executive director of the Institute of Municipal Law Officers, in answer to a query from Mr. Helmke advised:

"So far as I know, every effort to prohibit the socalled theatre Bank Night has been made under the provisions of state statutes prohibiting lotteries. In fact, every case with which I am familiar has been based on state statutes. There is a divided opinion of the courts of last resort as to whether or not theatre Bank Night constitutes a violation of such statutes. This division of the courts is, of course, due in part to two factors, first, the nature of the particular statute in question; second, the difference in the specific issues presented in each case."

The City of Chicago Department of Law informed Mr. Helmke that Bank Night, as such, is not specifically covered by ordinance and that the "recent cases involving the conducting of the drawings by the theatres were based on section 1901 of the revised Chicago code of 1931."

Cornelius Colbert, city attorney of Racine, Wis., has been instructed by the common council to draft an ordinance banning Bank Nights and have it ready by the council's next meeting. Alderman Kenneth Kersten declared that of several hundred Racine citizens with whom he has discussed the proposed ordinance, only three have signified opposition.

Theatre Operator Indicted

The Bullock County grand jury, Statesboro, Ga., indicted H. H. Macon, operator of the State theatre there, for conducting Bank Night.

The Montgomery, Ill., board of supervisors, called upon the sheriff and state attorney to eliminate all chance games.

Frank King, manager, and Joseph Hockenberry, assistant, of the Midland, a Shea unit, at Newark, Ohio, were arrested late last week and held under $100 bond each to appear in municipal court for operation of Bank Night. They were charged with violating an anti-gambling order issued last July by Judge Slabaugh in common pleas court.

Judge Alfred E. Baldwin, Middletown, Conn., took no action on the Bank Night "test" case of State versus Ernest Dorau, manager of the Capitol in Middletown, before retiring from his current term in the superior court for Middlesex County. Bank Night interests are said to be eager to have Judge Edward J. Quinlan, Judge Baldwin's successor, reserve decision in order that the case may be taken to the supreme court of Connecticut and have status as a test case for the state.

Supply Dealers Consider Forming New Association

Little or no progress has been made known in two developments which would considerably affect the construction and operations of independent theatre supply dealers in this country, and which appear to have been born at the business convention called a few weeks ago in Chicago by Motiograph, Inc., licensee and manufacturer of the new Western Electric Mirrophonic-Motiograph combination projector and theatre sound reproducer.

Although theatre supply dealers and equipment manufacturers in New York receive both reports with a pronounced silence, it appears that Motiograph's president, J. B. Kleckner, has been nurturing hopes for the formation of a Motiograph-controlled system of theatre supply dealers in the key cities, the while other interests, at the same time, are seeking the resurrection of an organization similar to the defunct Independent Theatre Supply Dealers' Association, and which the report has C. W. Bunn, Electrical Research Products, Inc., sales manager, at the helm.

Although the meeting of independent dealers, called by Mr. Kleckner, is now history, it was at the session, it is reported in Chicago, that the ground work was laid for a plan under which the business of each independent dealer would be bought, if possible, by a corporation. In return for selling their businesses, the dealers would be offered seven-year contracts to continue in the capacity of branch managers.

Joe Hornstein, New York dealer, is being groomed to head the new group, the report had it, but Mr. Hornstein declared in New York that he knew nothing about the plan.

Mr. Hornstein also said he knew nothing definite about the possible formation of a new independent dealers' association.

"While I was in Chicago," he said, "there was some discussion about it, but I was too busy with other matters."

He referred all inquiries to Mr. Bunn, who declined to discuss the matter with a Motion Picture Herald representative. Mr. Bunn referred the HERALD reporter to C. L. Stong, Erpi promotion manager, who said formation of an association was under consideration among dealers and that Mr. Bunn had been approached, but that no definite decision had been reached.

Mr. Kleckner visited New York this week and conferred with Mr. Hornstein, who pointed to this fact to prove his point that if Mr. Kleckner were planning to organize a system of supply dealers he (Mr. Hornstein) would know about it.

Lester Abbott, vice-president of Motiograph, accompanied Mr. Kleckner to New York but did not return with him on Monday to Chicago. He remained to arrange circuit deals.

Tom Drew, formerly general manager of General Register, was named district representative for Motiograph, and William Murphy joined Mr. Hornstein's company to handle Motiograph-Mirrophonic sales.

Ralph Staub this week in Hollywood signed a term contract with Republic as producer-director.

EXHIBITORS STILL HAVE HOPES OF FORCING TRADE PRACTICE CHANGES

Joint Meeting of Leaders of Independent Association, Allied and MPTOA Is Set for New York, December 14th

Despite the complete lack of progress in the two-year-old campaign, motion picture theatre owners evidently will persist in their effort to win trade practice adjustments from upon the large distributors.

December 14th was set this week as the date for a New York meeting of big-chiefs of the Independent Theatre Owners Association, Allied States Association and its competitive Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, in an attempt to create concerted exhibitor pressure for a trade practice program. All are already in agreement that some such move should be made, regardless of any previous sentiment of one group against the other, and this for the general welfare of exhibition as a whole.

Meanwhile the MPTOA stands ready to make still further moves in bringing about a voluntary code of trade practices, with the idea that outsiders may be expected to ask Congress again for regulatory control over the industry.

Other Developments

Other developments of the week involving trade practices as they govern film buying and playing relations between exhibitors and distributors included the following:

MPTO of Connecticut voted in favor of the MPTOA's ten-point trade practice program, with a compulsory form of conciliation.

Allied States' complaint against Paramount for allegedly illegally withholding six features from last year's contracts and placing them on this year's list is still under study in Washington by the Federal Trade Practice Commission.

Recent settlement of the "boycott" and "strike" of Philadelphia exhibitors against Paramount for withholding the six features is clearing numerous "holdout" contracts for 1937-38 product between Paramount and the "holdout" exhibitors, likewise the armistice declared in Minneapolis.

The actual results of the exhibitors' fight against Paramount was said by Allied this week to depend on the good faith of the company, Allied claiming that so far the fight was a "draw." Allied conceded that the "technique" of the exhibitors' boycott could stand corrections in order to make it more workable in any future disputes with distributors.

Paramount, in Indianapolis, filed briefs denying the charges of exhibitors in a Gary, Indiana, suit against the company over the six pictures withheld from 1936-37.

Brandt Invites Leaders

Harry Brandt, president of the ITOA, in recommending December 14th for a joint conference on trade practices, sent letters to Ed Kuykendall, president of the MPTOA, and Nathan Yamins, president of Allied States. The letter follows: "In view of the fact that you join with me in my sentiments for a joint conference I would suggest a luncheon conclave to be held among us on Tuesday, December 14th, at the Astor at 1 p.m."

Mr. Kuykendall recently telegraphed Mr. Brandt that he was amenable to such a get-together, but that he would not be back in New York until early December. Mr. Yamins expressed himself as willing to attend with the condition that anything agreed upon at the session would be subject to approval of the Allied board.

Mr. Kuykendall has just completed a six-weeks' tour, in which he conferred with or received reports from 17 regional exhibitor organizations on their views with respect to trade practice regulation and the means of obtaining it. MPTOA officials have been informed that there was no unanimity of exhibitor views on the desirability of adoption of the MPTOA's 10-point program in its present form given to Mr. Kuykendall in the course of his trip.

Exhibitor Opinion Divided

Many organizations influential in MPTOA affairs are known to be lukewarm on parts of the 10-point program and outspokenly opposed to other parts of it.

It is considered likely that this situation may have induced Mr. Kuykendall to accept the ITOA bid to meet with a still greater exhibitor representation which would command more solid exhibitor support, predicated on the conviction that without a voluntary trade practice code in being or in prospect by mid-winter, Congressional efforts to obtain legislation for the regulation of the industry will stand their best chance of success.

Moreover, revision of the 10-point program now appears to be inevitable. It is felt in many exhibitor quarters that much of it may be salvaged but vital changes may be incorporated in it either with or without a joint national exhibitor conference. It has been pointed out that Mr. Kuykendall could not commit the organization to a revised trade practice plan without the approval of the MPTOA board of directors.

Mr. Kuykendall planned to call a meeting of the board in December but that appears unlikely now in lieu of the conference to be held in New York on December 14th. The board meeting probably will be held sometime in January.

The MPTOA president plans to be in Washington much of the time while Congress is in special session, and is scheduled to address the semi-annual convention of the MPTO of North and South Carolina at Pinehurst, December 6-7.

Want Teeth in Conciliation

While approval of the 10-point program was voted by the MPTO of Connecticut at a meeting held in New Haven last week, the exhibitor unit made the reservation that an effort be made by the sponsors of the plan to devise a type of conciliation board which would have power to enforce its findings. If this prove impossible, it was the sense of the meeting that the plan be affirmed in its present form.

Edward G. Levy, executive secretary, presented a report of the Philadelphia Paramount strike from information received directly from the Philadelphia committee. In view of the national basis for settlement terms arrived at there the members agreed to endeavor to secure the same terms for themselves on existing and contemplated contracts.

Allied Theatres of Connecticut, which met in New Haven the same day as the MPTO group, reported a routine discussion of business.

In "Confidential Stage"

The investigation by the Federal Trade Commission of complaints filed by Allied States against Paramount is still in the "confidential stage," it was said this week at the commission's office in Washington. It was learned, however, that an examiner's report has been prepared for study by the commission.

The commission will not make a formal announcement of its decision until it determines to issue a formal complaint in the matter. There were indications that the commission, in studying the subject, would give consideration to the settlement of the eastern Pennsylvania exhibitors' controversy with Paramount.

Referring to the settlement of the Paramount strike, Allied states in a bulletin issued from the Washington headquarters, said:

"Assuming that Paramount will carry out its pledges in good faith, and limiting this observation to tangible results, the settlement represents neither victory nor defeat. It was a 'draw.' Paramount, by refusing to deliver the controverted pictures under available allocations on last year's deals, gathered the cards into its hands. By

THREE TYPES OF FILMS BANNED IN FRANCE

France has placed ban on three types of motion pictures, according to censorship regulations recently issued by Edmund See, who has charge of the control of films. Pictures for which licenses will not be granted are those "tending to ridicule the army or likely to belittle its prestige"; those "likely to offend the national sentiments of foreign people and thereby provoke diplomatic incidents," and those "showing armed violence, burglaries and all similar criminal activities that might have a pernicious influence on young people."

In addition, the new regulations stated, only in particular cases will permits be issued for films dealing with spies or pictures of a military or detective nature.

COMPULSORY CONCILIATION ASKED

this adroit maneuver the strike was broken and exhibitors were relegated to separate negotiations to reap the benefits of the settlement. Therefore, whether the deal remains a draw or becomes a Paramount victory depends on the good faith shown by the company in subsequent negotiations."

New "Technique"

In commenting on the future employment of a "buyers' strike," national Allied declared:

"Exhibitors have evolved a new and effective technique which should be perfected and held ready for future emergency use. The obvious defects in the recent campaign should be corrected so that if such procedure is again made necessary it will function more smoothly and to greater advantage. Leaders of unaffiliated organizations should take seats at the Allied council table so that all leaders of truly independent groups can become better acquainted, acquire greater respect for each others' point of view and methods, and thus generate confidence, solidarity and strength. Future campaigns should be the products of careful planning, not of hastily conceived ideas; and methods should be devised with due regard for their feasibility, effectiveness and legality and which will be uniform throughout the territories affected.

"Exhibitors having property are not always willing to join in movements which are not clearly defined and which may result in their being mulcted in damages for the illegal acts of those with whom they are associated. But with campaigns carefully planned so that all may unhesitatingly subscribe thereto, team work will assert itself, competition for publicity and glory will subside, and free interchange of views and information will follow. Real cooperation is impossible when the exhibitors in one territory do not know what those in another are thinking or doing."

Northwest "Strike" Ends

Convinced that settlement of grievances complained of can be made by individual negotiations, Allied Theatres of the Northwest in Minneapolis announced termination of its "buy strike" against Paramount. This move followed telephonic communication between Charles Reagan, Paramount's western division sales manager, and members of the exhibitor unit's conciliation committee composed of W. A. Steffes, president of the exhibitor group; Ben Friedman and Abe Kaplan.

Suits instituted by Paramount, to halt prosecution of the strike, will be dropped by the company, it was said.

Mr. Steffes denied rumors that the organization had dropped its support of North Dakota's divorcement law as "the price" of peace in the Paramount strike. A suit to test the constitutionality of the law, which was sponsored by Allied States, is pending in federal court at Fargo.

Wisconsin Says "No"

However, Wisconsin and Upper Michigan independents have decided to continue their "strike" against Paramount in the belief that socalled concessions made by the company "are not concessions at all."

Asserting that in the Philadelphia settlement Paramount "has made no substantial or material concessions to the exhibitors" the committee of the Independent Theatres Protective Association of Wisconsin and Upper Michigan named to confer with the distributor on a suggested strike settlement has called off a proposed meeting with W. P. Weins, Paramount's Milwaukee manager, and is urging members to continue the strike "unless and until Paramount grants to 1936-37 contract holders the privilege of playing 'Souls at Sea' and 'High, Wide and Handsome' currently according to the terms of the 'B' classification group in the 1936-37 contract."

The committee, in a bulletin to association members, also advocated continuation of the strike unless Paramount "agrees to forget about the unplayed news and unplayed short subjects resulting from the strike."

The Gary Case

The validity of the evidence offered by the Gary Theatre Company in its action for a mandatory injunction in Indianapolis compelling Paramount to deliver 10 additional feature pictures was attacked by the company in its briefs filed Monday in United States district court there. The plaintiffs maintained that some of the pictures in question were "admittedly completed within the contract period," and quoted statements of Adolph Zukor and William LeBaron in the trade press to that end.

Paramount, however, declared the evidence incompetent and refers in the brief to an affidavit filed earlier by Russell Holman, Paramount eastern production head, describing production delays that made delivery impossible in the year ending Aug. 1, 1937. The Gray company described Mr. Holman's explanation as "not adequate" and asserted the alleged failure to deliver was not for causes beyond Paramount's control.

Contract's Meaning Argued

What was meant in the contract's wording of "not to exceed 65 pictures" was another point at issue. The plaintiffs assumed this to mean that "Paramount is under an affirmative duty to produce, release and deliver to the plaintiffs 65 feature length motion pictures with the titles and stars set forth in its catalogue."

Paramount said that "under the contract there is no expressed or implied duty for the defendant to produce or release any particular picture or any particular number of pictures."

Fifty-three pictures were delivered, according to briefs on both sides.

The plaintiff's brief said that "actual damages plaintiffs will sustain if they do not exhibit these pictures are necessarily extremely difficult of ascertainment and to some extent at least they probably can never be fully ascertained. These facts not only justify but impel injunctive relief."

Holding that the Gary company's remedy at law was adequate, Paramount saw this statement as an admission that "no irreparable injury was caused by the lack of pictures expected and that the plaintiffs' brief bears this out."

The plaintiffs asserted that Paramount had refused to enter into a new contract for the Gary theatres and had proposed to exhibit the pictures in question in a new theatre recently opened in Gary which is affiliated with Paramount.

Paramount's answer was that "plaintiffs seek a decree which will prevent the performance of definite contractual obligations to furnish pictures to the two corporations operating the State and Grand in Gary and these corporations are not parties to this action."

The plaintiffs operate the Gary and Palace.

Call Action "Not Equitable"

Declaring that the plaintiffs sought from Jules J. Rubens, head of Great States Theatres, release of rights in RKO pictures in exchange for Paramount rights, the defendant viewed this action as not equitable and said the plaintiffs did not "come into the case with clean hands." Paramount's brief also said that "no preliminary injunction should issue where the facts are disputed or in any doubtful case," and that "plaintiffs may not rely on alleged representatives to change the terms of the contract which they are attempting to have specifically enforced."

The plaintiffs have until Saturday to file in rebuttal. Judge Robert C. Baltzell is expected to rule on the case within a few weeks. Appearing as plaintiffs on the brief filed for them are Gary Theatre Company, Young Amusement Company and Theatrical Managers, Inc. Their affidavits were filed by V. U. Young and Cyde Winans.

Complaint Dismissal Asked

A hearing will be held Monday in United States district court, Indianapolis, on a motion for dismissal of a bill of complaint filed by the Gary Theatres Company, which seeks to enjoin clearances imposed by producers on behalf of Balaban & Katz, of Chicago.

The dismissal was asked in a brief filed by the defendants, Columbia, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Paramount, RKO Radio, Twentieth Century-Fox, and United Artists. They contended in the brief that Balaban & Katz, although a defendant, was not served with a process and that the action should be dismissed "for want of jurisdiction over an indispensable party."

Robert C. Baltzell, judge, approved elimination of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Universal and Warner Brothers as defendants.

Moskowitz Signed

Joseph Moscowitz, New York representative of Twentieth Century-Fox studios, has signed a new long term contract and will remain in charge of stories, talent and studio matters in the East.

William Hughart, manager of the Salt Lake City Republic exchange, left the company this week to take a post with a theatre in Anaconda, Mont.

BRITISH BRANCHES BUSY TRADING SUPPORT TO WIN POINTS IN QUOTA

Both Producers and Exhibitors Support Labor Proposals to Get Its Backing for Changes in Government Film Measure

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

Determined to get a Films Act which will protect it against foreign domination, the Birtish film industry is finding odd bedfellows.

Producers, in the hope of lending strength to their arguments, have been making concessions to their employees' organizations. In return, the labor interests have agreed to give their backing to points in the program of the Film Group of the Federation of British Industries.

Exhibitors in turn are supporting the fair wages clause and other planks in the labor platform, the unions from their side backing up viewpoints of the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association.

How much all this is tied up with the fact that the Bill is a government measure, and that the support for amendments to it is likely to come most readily from the labour opposition, is a matter for speculation, but the considerations are by no means absent.

Maxwell Gives Support

So too have we had John Maxwell giving his valuable support to Isidor Ostrer's reciprocity proposals which, while not supported officially or in detail by the FBI, are known nevertheless to be regarded with sympathetic interest.

The fact is that there is such a new spirit of give and take on all sides, and as a result a superficial appearance of unity, that at the time of writing there is every indication that when the Bill reaches the Committee stages certain alterations will be made.

New Commission Proposed

Oliver Stanley, president of the Board of Trade, on Tuesday offered an amendment to the film bill, proposing that a film commission to be known as the Cinematograph Films Council be formed. It would consist of 21 members to be appointed by the Board of Trade. Of the members 11 would have no financial interest in the industry.

The council's function would be to review progress of the industry, with particular reference to production; to be available for furnishing advice to the Board of Trade, and to make an annual report to the Board of Trade.

The powers and functions of an advisory committee were defined in another proposal. The committee would include representative members of the council and five other persons, including one woman.

Producers and exhibitors indicated they were satisfied with the amendments but distributors felt grave concern, believing the action would set a precedent.

Mr. Stanley also proposed to empower the government to reject a quota film passing the cost test after appeal by a trade body. Observers see such a clause as tantamount to introduction of a quality test which was sought by the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association.

668 EXHIBITOR DEFAULT CASES ON THE QUOTA

In the last three years available for calculation, distributing organizations in Britain have been guilty of thirty cases of default over quota, while exhibitors have been responsible for 668 cases.

These figures were given recently in Commons by Captain Euen Wallace, spokesman for the Board of Trade.

Captain Wallace said foreign film interests paid the standard income tax rate paid by all business organizations.

Other proposed changes, though more spectacular, are less likely. Among these, it would appear, are the reciprocity proposals, already referred to, of Isidor Ostrer, backed by John Maxwell. The feeling is that the proposals have come just a little too late, that the various sections are already deep in a study of more readily practicable suggestions, such as a separate quota plan for renters and exhibitors, the pressing of a Films Commission, the setting up of a viewing panel, the establishment of fair wages clause, all backed by two or more of the various groups.

The Reciprocity Clause

It is none the less apropos to record what these reciprocity proposals are.

First laid by Isidor Ostrer before the British Films Advancement Council, which unofficially is believed to represent the Ostrer point of view, they call for adjustment of the reciprocity clause so that the cost to U. S. A. companies will not exceed 40 per cent of the minimum amount they ordinarily would spend on quota.

In his memorandum he said:

"There is only one thing that can make it commercial or sensible for Gaumont British or other high grade producers of British pictures to produce pictures, and that is a clause which will guarantee that U. S. A. companies will purchase good British pictures for U. S. A. distribution.

"If the minimum cost of a picture for quota were fixed at £15,000 ($75,000), and an American company's quota amounted to 12 pictures, that company should have the alternative of purchasing genuine British pictures for U. S. A. distribution for not more than 40 per cent of 12 times £15,000—40 per cent of £180,000—£72,000. If the cost of a quota picture were fixed at £30,000, instead of £15,000, that company must have the right to purchase genuine British films for U. S. exploitation for twice £72,000—£144,000, which is 40 per cent of £360,000. . .

"The U. S. A. companies do not wish to produce in Britain. They do not wish to monopolize film production, but the Act prescribes that they shall."

The day after the Ostrer memorandum was presented John Maxwell, in a letter circulated to the trade press, lent the proposals his wholehearted support. Shelving for the time all his differences with the Gaumont British chief, Mr. Maxwell said:

"The reciprocity clause in the present Bill has been spoiled by the Board of Trade increasing the prescribed figure (as suggested by the FBI) from £15,000 to £20,000 and allowing a restriction that an American renter may only meet one-half of his quota needs in that way. At that high price they frankly say it is not attractive to them."

And that is as much as has been done about the matter.

Exhibitors are concentrating on their own problem, the supply of an adequate number of entertainment films and at such competitive figures as to be economic. Reciprocity means little or nothing to them in this regard. Independent producers are backing Norman Loudon's proposal for separate quotas for exhibitors and renters, a proposal likely to be supported by the FBI. The labour interests are inimical to any reciprocity save for the Empire.

The labor unions, which include practically every phase of activity in the industry, are strong for the exclusion of foreign technicians and will press through their Parliamentary representation for a clause under which only one major technician per film would be permitted.

Meanwhile, the exhibitors, who are lobbying Members of Parliament furiously, are joining with the labor groups in a demand for Films Commission as outlined by Lord Moyne's committee but entirely ignored in the proposed Act.

American readers should note that the Bill is a Government Bill and as such, for party loyalty in the British Parliament is immensely strong, is likely to have the support of the majority members. Any amendments are most likely to come from Opposition, that is, labor, members.

Amendments to the bill are being tabled every day. Nearly thirty have been officially printed.

Dropping Publicity Unit

Gaumont British has decided to disband its theatre publicity section and is to pass the job on to Charles Frederick Higham, independent publicity and advertising organization. This means that from January 1st or thereabouts Francis Meynell, who for sixteen months has been in charge of public relations for the company, will return and the Palmer Newbould company, with which the advertising and publicity affairs of the corporation have been associated, will virtually cease to function.

Newsreels and Censorships

An issue of some concern to newsreel interests has been raised in London by the action of the chairman of the London County Council Licensing Committee in objecting to the showing, at a West End newsreel house, of a sequence of semi-political tinge.

Though his objection was personal and informal, there is some concern lest it prelude a censorship of newsreels. The sequence, dealing with housing, was voluntarily removed by the theatre, the Eros Piccadilly Circus, unit in the Capital and Provincial circuit, but the views of the LCC official, Mr. Reginald Stamp, later given to the press, have attracted considerable attention. Mr. Stamp said the case raised the whole question of censorship.

Mr. Stamp is a leading figure in the London Labor Party, majority body in London municipal administration, and builder of many workers' and artisans' houses and apartments.

A diverting sequel for British political eyes was supplied a few days later in Commons.

Mr. Roland Robinson (Government member for Blackpool) asked the Minister of Health whether his attention had been drawn to a British Paramount News reel containing an attack upon the Goverments' slum-clearing policy.

Mr. Bernays, Paliamentary Secretary, replied,

Capital and Provincial News Theatres, owning newsreel houses in central railroad termini and elsewhere, in its annual report, records that efforts to launch successful newsreel houses in the provinces have failed. Houses in Portsmouth and Tooting have been sublet.

None the less Capital and Provincial declares a profit of $24,535 on the year's trading, but $40,450 loss on the unsuccessful ventures.

Protest Sunday Tax

Brighton circuit and independent exhibitors may present a united front to the town's corporation in the near future and, refusing to turn over any more money out of their takings, close their cinemas on Sundays. A spirit of unrest has swayed local theatre owners for some time over this compulsory charity tax.

Brighton exhibitors are threatened with an increase on the £1,050 which they pay at present.

A. E. de B. Jennings, presiding at the annual meeting of United Picture Theatres, smaller circuit associated with Gaumont British-PCT, suggested that the net loss of £11,674 ($58,370) was due to increased competition. Mr. Jennings said the trading profit at £30,221 showed an improvement of £2,392.

Favor Longer Reel

A heavy vote in favor of the longer reel has been recorded by the Portsmouth branch of the CEA, one of the more virile and active of the exhibitor groups. Voting was 568 to 37.

NPFD Finances

That a debenture of $100,000 constituted a charge on the property of National Provincial Film Distributors, to which a receiver was recently appointed, was the judgment in High Court of Mr. Justice Simmonds.

C. T. Bowring and Co. (Insurance), Limited, on behalf of a group of insurers, were the plaintiffs in a debenture-holders' action. They claimed a declaration that the debenture was a charge on the whole of the property and that the services of a receiver and manager should be continued.

The defence was that the receiver was a trespasser and that the action was premature, as no moneys were due until after October 31, 1937.

Dismisses Select Suit

Federal Judge John C. Knox last week dismissed the complaint of Select Theatres Corporation in a $10,000 copyright infringement suit against Warner Brothers on the ground that the complaint failed to set forth a cause of action. Select charged that the Warner picture "Ready, Willing and Able" was "pirated" from "The Audition," a play which the plaintiff allegedly owns. Judge Knox allowed Select 15 days to file an amended complaint.

Defer Educational Meeting

The Educational Pictures Corporation's stockholders meeting, scheduled for last Friday, was postponed to November 19th, due to a lack of a quorum.

National Decency Legion Classifies 12 Productions

Of 12 new pictures reviewed and classified by the National Legion of Decency in its listing of new pictures for the current week seven were approved for general patronage, three were listed as unobjectionable for adults and two were cited as objectionable in part. The pictures and their classification follow:

Class A-1, Unobjectionable for General Patronage: "Bulldog Drummond's Revenge," "Chico de la Prenza," "Courage of the West," "Love on Toast," "Old Wyoming Trail," "El Pobres Perez," "She Loved a Fireman." Class A-2, Unobjectionable for Adults: "Expensive Husbands," "The Hurricane," "Paid to Dance." Class B, Objectionable in Part: "Madame Bovary," "Second Honeymoon."

The contract of Jean Paul King as commentator for News of the Day, the newsreel released by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, has been renewed for one year.

Final Paramount Report Due Soon

Charles D. Hilles, Paramount trustee, will make his final report and accounting to Federal Judge Alfred C. Coxe, New York, within the next few weeks, following the formal termination of the company's reorganization administration, ended last Wednesday. With the approval of the accounting by the court, Mr. Hilles will be legally discharged as trustee.

The reorganization administration ended with Judge Coxe's approval of the settlement terms of the two recovery suits brought by the trustees in 1934. These were the last matters remaining from the Paramount reorganization under court jurisdiction.

The $2,150,000 in cash and notes which Paramount will receive as a result of the settlement of the recovery suits will be reflected to a large extent in the company's year end financial report and may raise the company's 1937 net to approximately $11,000,000, inclusive of dividends from partially owned subsidiaries.

The estimate is based upon normal earnings expectancy for the fourth quarter, plus the amount of the settlement, which is payable in cash immediately. Paramount recently reported combined earnings and equities amounting to $6,696,000 for the first nine months of 1937.

Johnston to Coast for Conferences With Dunlap

W. Ray Johnston, president of Monogram, left Pittsburgh Saturday bound for Hollywood to confer with Scott R. Dunlap, production vice-president, concerning exploitation of "Boy of the Streets," starring Jackie Cooper. Mr. Johnston, who planned to visit several Monogram midwestern exchanges en route to the coast, attended a luncheon in his and Edward A. Golden's honor in Pittsburgh Saturday. Mr. Golden is in charge of sales for the company.

About 250 exhibitors attended the luncheon which was tendered by D. J. Selznick. Among those present were William Jaffee, Ben Welansky and Steve Broidy, Boston; Joe Felder and George West, New York; William Hurlbut and Sam Decker, Detroit; Nate Schultz and Bill Onie, Cleveland, and Henri Elman and M. M. Birnbaum, Chicago.

Henry Novitsky of Republic's Omaha exchange said this week that he has no intention of selling his interest in the exchange, as had been rumored.

Frank Stuart was reappointed general manager of American Theatre Science, Inc., following the first annual election at the company's headquarters in Detroit last Friday. Also elected were J. C. Peck, vice-president; W. E. Lyons, secretary, and Charles Stern and J. C. Gibson, directors.

G-B Active

Lest it should be assumed that the production activities of Gaumont British have ceased, here is a schedule of films either in production or awaiting trade show.

In Production

At Pinewood

"Sailing Along." Director: Sonnie Hale. Star: Jessie Matthews. Cast: Roland Young, Noel Madison, Athene Seyler, etc. Camera: Mutz Greenbaum. Music: Arthur Johnson and Maurice Siegler.

At Islington (Gainsborough)

"Bank Holiday." Director: Carol Reed. Stars: John Lodge and Margaret Lockwood. Cast: Wally Patch, Rene Ray, etc. Cameraman: Arthur Crabtree. Story and script: Rodney Ackland and Hans Wilhelm.

In the Cutting Room

At Pinewood

"Young and Innocent." Director: Alfred Hitchcock. Cast: Nova Pilbeam, Percy Marmont, Derrick De Marney, etc. Cameraman: Bernard Knowles.

At Islington (Gainsborough)

"Owd Bob." Director: Robert Stevenson. Cast: Will Fyffe, Margaret Lockwood, John Loder, etc. Cameraman: Jack Cox and Jack Perry.

Awaiting Presentation

"Non Stop New York." Director: Robert Stevenson. Cast: Anna Lee, Francis, L. Sullivan, John Loder, Athene Seyler, Ellen Pollock, etc. Cameraman: Mutz Greenbaum. "Doctor Syn." Director: Roy Neill. Co-director: Maude Howell. Stars: George Arliss, Margaret Lockwood and John Loder. Cast: Muriel George, Wally Patch, etc.

Laughton and Pommer

Within a week of writing Charles Laughton's first production, jointly with Erich Pommer, should have reached the cutting rooms.

For 11 weeks, four of them on location in the South of France, Laughton has been enacting the role of a beachcomber adopted by a woman missionary, played by his wife, Elsa Lanchester.

Pommer has been directing the film as well as taking full production responsibility, with Jules Kruger as his cameraman. Roland Gillett is production manager.

It is hoped to have "Vessel of Wrath" ready for trade show within five or six weeks, when it will be presented by Associated British.

The name under which Pommer has made the film is Mayflower Productions.

Fields Films

Sam Engel, in charge of the Twentieth Century-Fox picture in which Gracie Fields is starring "He Was Her Man," already has set his mind on the next subject for the English star.

This is likely to be "Beloved Enemy," a story of war and postwar days, concerning the rivalry between a music hall star and a dramatic actress. It is very probable that Monty Banks will direct it. It is more than likely that it will be made in England.

Three weeks of work has been put in on "He was Her Man" and at the moment of writing the unit has forsaken the mud of the Johannesberg goldfields for the comparatively rustic peace of Kimberley. Brian Donlevy and Victor McLaglen are now well into their roles.

When the film is finished, and it is on a seven weeks schedule, it will have touched the $1,000,000 mark.

Buchanan's Latest

Awaiting final touches prior to its trade show is Jack Buchanan's "Break the News," in which the English star is teamed with Maurice Chevalier. June Knight is the feminine lead.

Geoffrey Kerr adapted a story of Loic de Gouriadec for the film, which has a further asset in music by Cole Porter. Van Phillips, one of the brighter young men of English dance music, has arranged the score.

Lazare Meerson tended the art direction and the film was shot by Phil Tannura. Rene Hubert's dresses will be not the least of the film's attractive qualities.

New Musical

Into production this week went a picture budgeted at £400,000, which Howard Welsh, American producer resident here, says is to be made into a musical to the standard of the best American productions, and to be finished in four weeks.

He chose a story by Tom Geraghty, "Kicking the Gong Around," and the cameras already have started to turn, on the largest stage at Pinewood, under direction of Walter Forde.

The star is Harry Richman, with Florence Desmond, leading British mimic and musical comedy princess, opposite him. Hal Thompson, a British youngster fresh from Hollywood, gets his first important role. Bert Ambrose, leader of Britain's premiere dance combination, will have an individual role and his band will play the music written especially by Jimmy Kennedy and Michael Carr.

A large chain store scene has been set up on Pinewood's largest stage and a typical English baronial hall on another.

Francis Carver is in charge of the camera and Herbert Wynne has been appointed production manager.

"Kicking the Gong Around" is set for release this side by General Film Distributors.

Warner Pictures

Claude Hulbert, British screen radio and stage comedian, is due to make his bow before American audiences when "You Live and Learn" is screened on the Warner circuit. He co-stars with Glenda Farrell in the film.

A complete pictorial record of the development of the Highland costume, tartan and kilts, sporran and dirk and all, is to be shown in the Teddington-Warner-First National picture, "Thistledown."

Wilcox's First

First of two pictures to be made by Herbert Wilcox Productions for British Lion release (the second will be "Nippy," with Jean Gillie in the part originally scheduled for Anna Neagle, "Blondes for Danger" has gone on the Beaconsfield floor.

Jack Raymond, who directed the successful "The Frog," is in charge of a company in which Gordon Harker stars, assisted by Enid Stamp-Taylor, Janet Johnson, Doris Hare, Ivan Brandt, Edgar Driver and Harry Hutchinson.

Completes Schedule

The Jack Buchanan Productions unit at Pinewood has completed its schedule and will suspend activities until the Spring.

Final scenes for "Break the News" put the finishing touch to the four-picture program and its stars already are widely scattered. Buchanan is in New York, Maurice Chevalier has returned to Paris and June Knight is in Budapest on holiday. Rene Clair, who directed, is cutting the picture for a New Year premiere.

Massacre at Denham

Rough stuff is the order of the day on the Denham stage, on which Zoltan Korda is directing "The Drum" for London Films. The set reproduces the exterior of the palace of a Khan, or chieftain, on the Northwest Frontier of India and the scene pictured is the entertainment of officers and men of the Gordon Highlanders at a native feast and display of snake-charming, interrupted by an attack by the treacherous natives.

Biggest Pinewood Set

For Jessie Matthews' "Sailing Along," Pinewood has its biggest set on record. It is a theatre interior with 1,500 seats and a well-equipped stage. The seats have a story; they belonged to the old Alhambra, now demolished for Oscar Deutsch's key Odeon, in Leicester Square.

"Over the Moon"

Merle Oberon's first scenes for her second all-color picture, "Over the Moon," introduce her as the mistress of a Yorkshire country musician, whose attempts to keep abreast of current fashion have curious, and colorful, results. In the first shots she wears a very "loud" plaid coat and skirt and her coiffure is very obviously home made. Also seen in these scenes will be Rex Harrison, her lover, a local doctor.

THOSE "OLD" IDEAS SHOW LOTS OF LIFE

It was in your Chairman's early theatre days down in Tennessee (the good ole days, eh?), and that's a long stretch of years, my children. The picture for next week was a Paramount, "Free, White and 21." Casting about for a hefty exploitation slant to put it over, we fell upon the even then venerable device of a teaser ad campaign, the copy to the effect that any reader, free, white and 21 was invited to phone a certain number (the theatre's, of course) to receive further information.

There was doubt in our young mind that the gag would go over, for it was old and grey a long time before Admiral Dewey ever heard of Manila, no less take it. But what the hell, they can't shoot a man for trying. And if nothing else, at least the Big Boss would know we were in there bucking that line.

Well, the afternoon papers came out and the phone started to ring. It rang, and rang, and rang, and rang. Seemed like every one in town was free, white and 21 and what about it. When the operators tipped off the stunt, the news spread all over the countryside, the title became a sort of community by-word and you'd be surprised how much extra business the stunt brought in. We were, and to tell the truth, so was the bossman.

Skimming the New York papers a few weeks back, lo and behold, up popped the oldtimer again, for big as life there it was in a two-column box: "If it's love you're after, phone CIrcle 7-5900." So for oldtime sake, we dialed the number. The busy signal sounded and kept on sounding for hours, it seemed, until there was a moment's clearance, and sure enough a voice announced that if that's what we were after, to come to the "Strand Theatre to see 'It's Love I'm After,' starting Wednesday, etc., etc., and etc."

For the rest of the yarn, we inquired politely among the Warner boys and discovered that the gag was suggested casually by Mort Blumenstock, who has been around long enough to know that lightning will keep on striking in the same spot if it has something to strike upon. The number of calls evoked by the ad ran up in the tens of thousands and more to the extent that leading columnists and other word-spreaders went hungrily for the story.

And if everyone who fell for the gag told someone else about it (and wager plenty of them did), you can just imagine the job the police had to do in front of the Strand on the opening day.

Wasn't so long ago that Bill Hendricks down in Memphis was arrested for blocking traffic with the street corner brick stunt used by P. T. Barnum some 75 years ago. And it's six, two and even that Barnum was tipped off to the gag by some wagon-show medicine man who used it years before that.

A good idea never dies. When it grows old, it becomes new all over again.

A NEW AWARDS "HIGH"

With the presentation of the Quigley October Silver Plaque to Philadelphia Warner-man Jules Seltzer during the activities of the Variety Club annual banquet in Pittsburgh last Sunday, the total of Awards credits touches a new "high". For Seltzer was signally honored not only by the participation of United States Senator from Pennsylvania James J. Davis, but also by the presence of Governors Hoffman of New Jersey, Nice of Maryland and former Governor Conley of West Virginia at the ceremonies, pictured in the news section of this issue.

Run through the list of States in our Union and it will be found that a majority have been concerned, through their Governors, in the formal presentations of Award Plaques. Thus hardly to be listed among the lesser accomplishments of the Quigley Competitions is the fine cooperation extended by State heads and other internationally known dignitaries in recognition of the theatreman's ever-important civic standing.

Harry Botwick, up in Portland, Me., invited the staff of the local Press-Herald over to the State to see just-arrived newsreel shots of the nearby Bangor encounter between G-men and the Brady gang. Newsmen could not make it in a body, so Harry toted over equipment and operator, ran the shots in the city room.

Result: Four-column cut of the special screening, topped by a three-line head in which subject and theatre were mentioned plus a half-column story that included further credits.

QUICK REPORTS FROM THE FIELD

Radio

Smart showmanship was staged by Dave Idzal, manager of the Fox, Detroit, Mich., and publicists George Mitchell and H. Remington. Jimmy Fidler's Friday night broadcast, coinciding with their opening of "100 Men and a Girl," was devoted to a personality review of Deanna Durbin. Idzal arranged for a spot plug on the local station immediately following the Fidler broadcast, announcing the opening at the Fox.

Among other stunts was playing of overture by the theatre's orchestra week in advance, composed solely of numbers from the film, with a screen announcement to that effect.

Special letters were sent out to the mailing list of the Detroit Symphony Orchestra, plugging the music angle and fashion displays on Durbin clothes were landed in prominent Detroit department stores.

Excuse It, Please

In a previous issue the wrong man was credited with a stunt originated by George McComber, New Lyceum Theatre, Port Arthur, Ontario. For "Mr. Dodds Takes the Air" George distributed small paper bags from which protruded bright yellow paper lettered "It's in the bag." Colored paper when drawn from bag proved to be herald which when unfolded measured some 23 inches in length.

"Vogue" Week

To exploit "Vogue of 1938" David Dallas, Grand Theatre, Holdenville, Oklahoma, through cooperation of local merchants and the Holdenville Daily News, inaugurated a "Vogue Week." Through this community-wide event, entire vicinity was made style conscious by show windows depicting styles seen in the picture.

As a tribute of appreciation, the theatre played host to the personnel of store whose window was adjudged the best among those that tied up with the stunt. Largest department store ran a half-page ad heralding their display of Fieldcrest Fabrics, as featured in the film.

High school class injected further interest into the program by raffling off a Joan Bennett table cloth, the same type as shown in scene from the film. Cloth was on display for several days, and presented to the winner from the stage by the local high school football queen.

PRINT OF "ZENDA" IS PEACE TOKEN

When peace was declared out on the coast on the question as to which community would retain the name "Hollywood," Russell Birdwell wangled "Prisoner of Zenda" into the argument by having print of the picture produced in Selznick International Studios in Culver City presented to the Hollywood contingent.

Presentation was made in the presence of Governor Merriam in the foreground of the Chinese Theatre, where the picture was playing.

Jail Replica

Two weeks ahead of "They Won't Forget" at the Savoy, Jamaica, L. I., Irving Dashkin issued invitations to a preview where comment cards were distributed to audience of judges, lawyers, clergymen, school officials and newspapermen and opinions later used for publication.

Shown in the Round Table picture section is lobby display created by Irv, who used two 24-sheets, mounted on linen and hung them on either side of entrance. In the center of lobby was an exact replica of a jail cell in which was cot and stool and chap resembling Robert Hale, character in picture. Copy on cell read "Is he innocent or guilty?"

Treasure Ship

In addition to the lobby display reproduced in the Round Table section to publicize his coming attractions, Johnny Baker, Skouras Fox Theatre, Hackensack, N. J., used other angles of the Treasure Ship idea to put it over. Entire staff was dressed in sailor uniforms, idea conveyed from the front to screen. All displays were tied into the Treasure Ship thought, gang planks planted in lobby, ticket box had large steering wheel attached, anchors and pennants further carrying out sea-going effect.

Charmed, to Be Sure

What with the feminine rage for charms, Eddie McBride, Loew's State, Syracuse, for "The Bride Wore Red," distributed Leo the Lion charms in imprinted envelopes. Each carried a lucky number and to those whose number appeared on the bulletin board in front of theatre guest tickets were awarded.

Fire Drill

What is reported to be a first time in that vicinity, was Ted De Grazia's recent fire drill for kids at the Lyric Theatre, Bisbee, Ariz., tied up with local fire department. With members of the fire department on stage, anouncements were made on the stunt, siren blown and theatre was emptied of all children in record time. Schoolboy patrolmen coached in their duties aided others in filing out in orderly fashion. Papers ran stories together with photos of the stunt.

Institutional Gag

To achieve a closer relationship with his patrons, Pat McGee, General Manager, Standard Theatres, Oklahoma City, Okla., has made available in lobbies of all their houses stationery on which is printed his name, theatre address and salutation. Attached to each sheet and envelope is card reading "As your host, I am anxious to please you and to make your visit to our theatres most pleasant. However, some faults may occur to detract from your enjoyment. Won't you please use this stationery to tell me of anything which displeases you? I'll greatly appreciate the favor."

Insurance

Through cooperation of local insurance company, Dick Moss, Fox Boulevard, Los Angeles distributed heralds tying in with "Make Way For Tomorrow" and stressing necessity of saving for old age by endowment policies. Contest run in local daily asked, "should parents live with their married children," and picture plugged as a surprise hit of 1937 in all advertising matter and radio announcements.

Getting away from the war angle of "Road Back," Moss planted full-width photo art on feminine members of cast in papers and libraries carried bulletin about the picture and book from which it was adapted.

Toppers

Scouting around Baltimore, Bill Saxton at Loew's Century for "Topper" unearthed old-fashioned headgear including stovepipe toppers reported to have been worn by Henry Clay in 1850, Andrew Jackson in 1866 and Stephen Douglas in 1860. These were on display in the lobby in advance and in leading department store window, which also carried scene stills and playdates on the picture.

Seltzer, Limerick Voted Plaques for October

The effectiveness of the earliest reported popular price engagements on "Life of Emile Zola" is indicated in the results of the Quigley October Awards judging which finds the Silver Plaque going to Jules Seltzer, Warner Theatres publicist for the date at the Boyd Theatre, Philadelphia. Sharing the first prize honors, Manager Maurice K. Gable is awarded a Silver Citation certificate. The October Bronze Plaque goes to George Limerick, in recognition of his entry on Paramount's "Artists and Models" at the Yale Theatre, Cleburne, Texas. Seltzer and Gable are first-time Silver winners, but Limerick repeats his success of 1936, when he was voted the September Bronze on "Texas Rangers."

Three First Mentions and 22 "Honorables" were voted in October, the Awards being taken down both by newcomers as well as repeaters, with the latter in the majority. Various producers are represented in the listings above, and it is interesting to note that entrants in the United Artists "Stella Dallas" contest are still running strongly, represented by two of the First Mentions and quite a few "Honorables." Deadline for the November Quigley Awards has been set for midnight of December 7th, and thus two months still remain before the end of the 1937 Competitions.

Full Ad Coverage Sells "Hurricane"

Full newspaper coverage was accorded the New York opening of "Hurricane" at the Astor Theatre with stories in Sunday book sections to appeal to readers of the book on which the picture was based. Ads run on women's, financial and sports pages started with two-column teasers and expanded to display copy and full pages in the tabloids.

Another effective stunt was use of coupons with admission prices run in suburban papers to stimulate advance sales of reservations. Window displays were planted throughout the city, outstanding being approximately 1,000 windows of chain drug stores which used blowups of Dorothy Lamour in each of their stores throughout Greater New York. National tieups were effected including doll copied from one used by the star in the picture, insurance companies and Chevrolet tied in through the use of their cars by the technical crew that made location shots in Samoa. Weather instrument company also cooperated.

Gilbert Enters Float In Festival Parade

Highlight of Malcolm Golbert's "Lost Horizon" campaign at the Rialto Theatre, Morrilton, Ark., was a float which he entered in the local Junior Chamber of Commerce fall festival parade. Malcolm says he used a sedan which he covered with cloth soaked in kalsomine and wheat paste which was then sprinkled with artificial snow and atop this a huge model of the airliner used in the picture. Car was properly bannered with playdates, cast, etc. and since the parade was held three consecutive days, the theatreman reports getting his message before thousands of people whom he might not otherwise have reached. After the parade the ship was planted atop marquee where it remained during entire run.

Ralston Gives Patrons Air at the Ritz

Out in San Bernardino, Cal., Howard Ralston at the Warner Ritz Theatre for "Mr. Dodds Takes the Air" placed cards on all air pumps at local filling stations reading "Take the air; it's free," followed by title, playdates, etc.

For "Varsity Show," four cheer leaders with sweaters, freshman caps and megaphones led group of boys in yells on busiest street corners. Staff was dressed similarly with pennants across chests. Opening day boys carrying banners and pennants marched through streets and bally car with cheer leaders announced opening through megaphones. At theatre usher played collegiate and fight music over p.a. system and promoted doughnuts were distributed.

Theatremen Greet Hallowe'en with Ace Exploitations

The colorful entertainment values and the celebration of Hallowe'en were as to be expected capitalized on by Round Tablers, and since the celebration this year came on Saturday, allowed them to present late shows with all the trimmings. Among the earliest reports are detailed accounts from Les Pollock up in Rochester and Stanley Gartside down in Burkburnett, Tex. What they did and how are explained herewith:

Pollock started his drive two weeks ahead with atmospheric trailers containing copy about the black cats, witches, owls, skeletons, ghosts, goblins, etc., all of which he promised at the big show. Les stressed the date in advising patrons that they could sleep late on Sunday, etc. On this page are found two of the stunts found highly enjoyable among the raft of others at Pollock's show. Directly below is what Les terms a spook or dancing doll act. The faces were cut out of cardboard and painted, bodies consisting of two thicknesses of cheese cloth covering boys who supported the faces. Boys flittered, swayed and staggered to accompaniment of organ music. To right, below, is shown a string of cutout cats slowly drawn across stage on a pulley in a green spot. Loose, dangling skeleton at the end of a 26-foot pole was swung back and forth in the direction of the audience to make it appear as though skeleton were coming right at them.

Musical accompaniment was supplied by Maurice, house organist who presented his holiday solo addressed in devil costume. The organ was decorated with Hallowe'en atmosphere such as corn stalks, pumpkins, cutout cats, etc. The entire set being enclosed in a flame effect to make it more authentic.

Stage schedule and cues are supplied by Pollock as follows:

Spook trailer at end of feature followed by organ solo with slides. Flame effect on organ all through program, close in and open on finish on cue from organist to take horns away. This is followed by parade of cats across stage left to right in green strip. Blackout when cats are off stage. Skeleton air dance, next number, skeleton in green spot, which in turn is followed by spook dance for which traveler opens on cue from organ. Green flood used on spooks until closing to blackout at finale.

One of Pollock's Hallowe'en Acts

Last act on program was a devil magician who came on stage jumping through paper hoop center at the direct cue "the devil himself" accompanied by flare. Stage is lighted up as devil does his act in white spot.

Ties Show to "Topper"

At the Dallas in Burkburnett, Tex., Manager Stanley Gartside had booked in "Topper" and started it off with a special showing at his Hallowe'en Jamboree, tying in the picture to the party. Since the picture was adapted to the occasion Gartside combined selling copy on both.

To publicize the novelties and gifts to be distributed at the jamboree, Stanley filled barrels with hats, horns novelties, etc., placing these out front and using "barrel of fun" copy. He distributed heralds in towns, school and through the trade area and five days ahead mailed letters to a select group attaching heralds on the picture in each. To further convey an idea of the entertainment, Gartside posted regulation three sheets on the picture with the center sheet upside down and as he expected was informed of the "error" from different quarters.

Boxoffice and foyer were hung with serpentine, horns, novelties, illuminated lanterns and all the other appropriate decorations. House staff wore Hallowe'en hats a week ahead. Life-size skeleton was mounted on 40 by 60 on black background, panel placed in shadow box, copy tying in both spook show and picture. Announcements were made over loudspeaker, and leading windows secured for display of novelties at store which cooperated with the manager.

Exton Stages Usher Contest

It was Bill Exton's unique idea to celebrate Hallowe'en by having the ushers at the Kenosha, Kenosha, Wis., stage a contest among themselves for a cash prize offered by Bill for the best costume. Exton turned the gang loose on the stage and allowed the audience an opportunity to decide for themselves. Photo to be run in next week's issue, showed an amusing array of holiday attire.

This cartoon was created by club cartoonist Milt Rosenfeld

Double Weddings Held in Cleveland

As part of the advance publicity on "Double Wedding" at Loew's State, Cleveland, Division Manager Harry Long and Publicist Milt Harris arranged with manager of the Cleveland Auto Show to marry two couples in a "double wedding" on the revolving stage of the Auto Show in the presence of all visitors. The two couples emerged from a trailer while the orchestra played the wedding march, and two ministers conducted the ceremony.

Couples were presented with gifts presented from the various auto dealers in the show and all-expense trip to Washington. Harris reports this the first time two couples have ever been married from an auto trailer.

Atmosphere

When the Little Theatre, Baltimore, played "Borneo," publicity director Maxwell Weinberg arranged a special display of native implements, secured through local Academy of Sciences, together with a group of books on the subject of Borneo in library window. Card announced playdates and stills completed the display, and letters were sent to schools, clubs, organizations, etc., offering special rates for groups.

YOU ARE INVITED TO JOIN UP

G. GRIFFITH, SR.

and GEORGE GRIFFITH, JR., both join the club, the former as circuit director of Hoyts Theatres, Ltd., Melbourne, Australia, and George, Jr., as manager for the theatres in Victoria. We wish that we could welcome all our overseas members as we did George, Jr., who is now visiting America and felt that his visit would not be complete without speaking with us. Come again and often and please keep in touch on your return.

is out in Kenosha, Wis., managing the Gateway Theatre for Standard Theatres, Inc., and says he started in 1929 as usher for the Fox Gateway and gradually worked into chief of service position, after which he left showbusiness for a time. Later we find Kulik again contacting the theatres and again joined Standard Theatres, since which time he has been working with our good member Bill Exton on promotions, many reports on which have been duly recorded in our section.

is the assistant manager of the Tivoli Theatre in Brooklyn, N. Y., and is another of the Randforce Circuit to join us. Since so many of you boys are active members of the Club, Morris, and you doubtless have read of their activities reproduced in our pages, how about helping to swell the number and also drop in to see us on your next day off?

WILLIAM A. CHERRY

manages the Elton Theatre in Norfolk, Va., and started at the Colony in Portsmouth, Va., as extra usher, then head usher and relief doorman. After two months on the door Bill was promoted to assistant and then to his present job and location from where we look forward to reports on how he exploits his pictures.

VERN TREMBLEY

resident manager at the Rialto Theatre, Three Rivers, Mich., says he has known us since early childhood, being the son of a former showman. Trembley's dad was with Famous Players Canadian twenty years ago and Vern has grown up in the business. From what he tells us, we anticipate that he shall become an active Round Tabler and look forward to his frequent contributions to our pages.

STANLEY GARTSIDE

in Burkburnett, Texas, manages the Palace Theatre for the R. E. Griffith circuit; obtained his first job in 1926 in Tipton, Okla., and worked as projectionist; continued his work in the booth until joining Griffith in Oklahoma City. Then worked as doorman, operator and artist and was transferred and promoted as artist and assistant in Hobart, Okla., then to Cleburne, Tex., as assistant; to Spur, Tex., as manager, then Clovis, N. M., and on to his present spot.

MEYER PHILLIPS

works for Skouras, managing the Englewood Theatre, Englewood, N. J. Meyer began his career as usher at the Fabian Regent Theatre, Paterson, N. J., then Warner took over the house and he was promoted to assistant. Phillips remained there until the house closed and joined Skouras in Hackensack at the Fox as assistant, later was transferred to the Plaza in Englewood as assistant and from that point was promoted to his present job.

PETER N. CHAGARIS

is the assistant manager of Warner's Stanley Theatre in Utica, N. Y., and also assists W. Haynes with publicity and ballyhoo stunts. Peter started working as part time usher at the Modern in Boston and then to the Fenway on full time. From there he left Boston to go to the RKO Plaza in Schenectady as chief of service. Shortly after the Plaza was opened RKO was taken over by Fabian and Chagaris went to Albany at the Fabian Grand to organize the service staff. A year later we find him at the Fabian Palace, also in Albany, to assist Harry Black, and from there he went to his present assignment.

ERNEST G. PASCHOAL

down in Hawaii manages the Iao Theatre in Kahului Maui for the Maui Amusement Co. Ernest says his father, too, has always been in showbusiness and when his dad's health precluded his carrying on, Ernie jumped in and took over. We are always interested in what brother showmen are doing outside the States.

HARALD GUSTAFSON

is the booker for the Svensk Talfilm in Stockholm, Sweden, and we welcome him into the Club. Remember, Harald, signing on the dotted line doesn't fulfill your obligation to the Club; we expect that we shall be hearing from you as to how showmen put over their pictures in Sweden.

STANLEY C. ZERBEY

is the manager-projectionist at the Ritz Theatre, Benton, Pa., owned by P. A. Magazzu. Stan started as apprentice projectionist in Port Carbon, Pa., and when he got his license was sent up to Benton, which, he says, is a farming community. Zerbey reports that when he first got there they only showed pictures once a week, then twice and now six times, and business is good.

JACK K. RANDALL

manages the College Theatre, Winnipeg, Man., Can., for the Western Theatres, Ltd., and has been in the game for five years. Jack started as assistant manager of the Lyceum in Winnipeg where he spent two years and was then promoted to manager of his present house. His first two years were spent under the banner of the Canadian Universal Film Company.

THEATRE RECEIPTS

The total of theatre receipts for the calendar week ended November 13, 1937, from 63 theatres in 13 major cities of the country was $887,035, a decrease of $10,576 from the total for the preceding week ended November 6, 1937, when 63 theatres in 13 large cities aggregated $897,611.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Columbia

AWFUL TRUTH, THE: Irene Dunne, Cary Grant—A very pleasing comedy. Dunne and Grant do grand work.—Leo C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

IT'S ALL YOURS: Francis Lederer, Madeleine Carroll—A light, pleasing little story. Madeleine Carroll was beautiful, but seemed out of place. Lederer was likeable. Mischa Auer, as a popeyed ninnyish Count, was amusing. The business was average to good. One could sleep well after seeing it; and even sleep through it, content that what one saw of it was fair. Played Oct. 24.—C. T. Cooney, Waldo Theatre, Waldoboro, Maine. General patronage.

LOST HORIZON: Ronald Colman, Jane Wyatt—A splendid production. Will please the people who are fussy about their movie fare.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

OUTLAWS OF THE ORIENT: Jack Holt, Mae Clarke—Just a fair programer. Not up to the other Jack Holt pictures. Columbia will have to give Jack better stories if they want him to do business. Running time, 61 minutes. Played October 20.—Fischer & Bichler, Mattray Theatre, Strasburg, N. D. Small town patronage.

First National

ALCATRAZ ISLAND: John Litel, Ann Sheridan—Here is a program picture that I played as to top half of a double bill which gave good satisfaction. Just goes to show again that crime does not pay. Running time, 64 minutes. Played November 6.—C. R. Gregg, Liberty Theatre, Caney, Kansas. Small town patronage.

MR. DODD TAKES THE AIR: Kenny Baker, Jane Wyman—Just a programer that pleased. Running time, 80 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

OVER THE GOAL: June Travis, William Hopper—It is not even double-bill rating, just about as bad as they come. It is the kind that they laugh in the wrong places. The false heroics are laughable, if it was not so tragic that an exhibitor has to run pictures such as this one.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind.

OVER THE GOAL: June Travis, William Hopper—A very clever little football story that will go well on a double bill. Johnny Davis, of the Waring Band, steals the show. The football scenes seem to be authentic and the show pleased all. Running time, 56 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

PERFECT SPECIMEN, THE: Errol Flynn, Joan Blondell—Advance reports of people who had seen "The Perfect Specimen" gave this picture a good buildup, and my audience was thoroughly pleased when we played it. It seemed that everything clicked. The cast was perfect, the story fine, the dialogue very well done, and the direction okay. Errol Flynn in this role has made many new friends at the box-office, and I hope that succeeding efforts from Warner Bros. will be as clever and well done as "The Perfect Specimen."—John A. Milligan, Broadway Theatre, Schuylerville, N. Y. Small town patronage.

PRAIRIE THUNDER: Dick Foran, Ellen Clancy—Just a western programer. Did not please many.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

SAN QUENTIN: Pat O'Brien, Humphrey Bogart—Good action picture. Good cast, good acting.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

SAN QUENTIN: Pat O'Brien, Humphrey Bogart—Very good prison story with a spectacular prison break that furnished plenty of excitement. Humphrey Bogart is very good. Running time, 70 minutes. Played Oct. 20-21.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

THAT CERTAIN WOMAN: Bette Davis, Henry Fonda—Was very much surprised at the business this did. Did not give it average advertising and broke all Sunday, Monday records since "Little Women." Many patrons told me how good it was. Even the men liked it and came back to see it second time. Running time, 93 minutes.—L. R. Creason, Palace Theatre, Eufaula, Okla. Small town patronage.

IN this, the exhibitors' own department, the theatremen of the nation serve one another with information on the box office performance of product for their mutual benefit. It is a service of the exhibitor for the exhibitor. Address all communications to—

What the Picture Did for Me
MOTION PICTURE HERALD
Rockefeller Center, New York

THEY WON'T FORGET: Claude Rains, Gloria Dickson—This is the picture that, according to the trade papers, Vitagraph dare not release in the South. Built around a lynching, and if that is entertainment, I ask you. Their program pictures have been way below par. Six or seven poor pictures and you know where your audience is: they are by the radio. Business is below 1936 the last 90 days.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia, Ind.

Gaumont-British

DR. SYN: George Arliss, Margaret Lockwood—Business above average. Arliss draws well here. Older people, especially ladies, attend from a radius of 75 miles, as a sort of ritual when he is on the screen. The fact that Mr. Arliss might be a finished actor in more ways than one would never enter their minds (if it were so). Arliss is Arliss in any picture whether he be a hobo or a king, and as Arliss he is still loved, apparently. "Dr. Syn" was well attended and well received. A good supporting cast moved with Arliss through an old-fashioned story-book tale of pirates, priests, smugglers and general swashbuckling in a quaint little make-believe town by the sea. Played Oct. 17-18.—C. T. Cooney, Waldo Theatre, Waldoboro, Maine. General patronage.

Grand National

GIRL SAID NO, THE: Robert Armstrong, Irene Hervey—Very good little picture.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

SMALL TOWN BOY, THE: Stuart Erwin, Joyce Compton—Although I have read some favorable reports on this one, it didn't go over for us. If you play double bills use this on one of them. Erwin does pretty well, but didn't have much of a story to work with. Hope these Stuart Erwins turn out better than this one.—Bill Simon, Rialto Theatre, Saguache, Col. Rural and small town patronage.

SOMETHING TO SING ABOUT: James Cagney, Evelyn Daw—An excellent picture that pleased all.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BAD GUY: Bruce Cabot, Virginia Grey—A rather somber story that went over with a bang here. Our audiences like these kind once in a while, but with "San Quentin," "Bad Guy" and then "Alcatraz" we are getting too many prison stories all in such a short space of time. This Virginia Grey is destined to go places after appearing before the public a little more. Running time, 70 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

BIG CITY: Spencer Tracy, Luise Rainer—Fine picture, good story, two good stars and well produced. The climax is a bang-up good fight both funny and actionful that left them satisfied.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind.

BIG CITY: Spencer Tracy, Luise Rainer—A swell picture which we played on Saturday for various reasons but which is best for Sunday. Tracy is one grand guy and Rainer is fast acquiring a dandy following. Running time, 80 minutes. Played Oct. 22-23.—Horn & Morgan, Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

BROADWAY MELODY OF 1938: Eleanor Powell, Robert Taylor—Just as good as any of the previous Melodies so far as we could see. It drew extra business, but really it should, considering the cost. It has a swell cast of dancers and singers. Running time, 110 minutes. Played Oct. 31-Nov. 1-2.—Horn & Morgan, Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

CAPTAINS COURAGEOUS: Freddie Bartholomew, Spencer Tracy—Here is another excellent picture which flopped at the box office. I don't know why. Too many of Metro's good pictures don't mean a thing in our town. Entire cast do fine work and those who came to see went away satisfied—but not enough came to see.—Bill Simon, Rialto Theatre, Saguache, Col. Rural and small town patronage.

DANGEROUS NUMBER: Robert Young, Ann Sothern—Just a program picture that needed another picture to save it. Buck Jones was the answer in this case.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ont., Can.

DOUBLE WEDDING: William Powell, Myrna Loy—Metro will spoil the drawing power of this team, if they persist in putting them in comedies, which would only be good as slapstick comedies. "Double Wedding" is altogether too silly for entertainment.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

GOOD EARTH, THE: Paul Muni, Luise Rainer—From the critics' standpoint here is a perfect picture. But from the small town box-office standpoint, mediocre. Business was below the average. Our people don't go for this type of picture, although those who said they did not like it were more than willing to give just due to the marvelous acting of Muni and Rainer.—Bill Simon, Rialto Theatre, Saguache, Col. Rural and small town patronage.

LONDON BY NIGHT: George Murphy, Rita Johnson—Quite interesting murder mystery.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

MADAME X: Gladys George, Warren William—Very well received, and splendidly acted.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

MARRIED BEFORE BREAKFAST: Robert Young, Florence Rice—Light little comedy.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

MY DEAR MISS ALDRICH: Edna May Oliver, Maureen O'Sullivan—Very good comedy. Edna May steals the honors in the picture.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

NIGHT MUST FALL: Robert Montgomery, Rosalind Russell—Here is the worst picture I have seen this year. A tiresome and gloomy story that is far from entertainment. Robert Montgomery very badly miscast, although he tries hard to put over the part. Business far below average.—Bill Simon, Rialto Theatre, Saguache, Col. Rural and small town patronage.

PARNELL: Clark Gable, Myrna Loy—This one is so good I would like to say it pleased 100 per cent, but after seven years I will have to admit I cannot make 80 per cent of my patrons like this type of picture. It is too good for a small town. Those who came were enthusiastic in their praise, but not enough came. However, it is a great show. Running time, 119 minutes. Played Oct. 23-24-25.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

ROMEO AND JULIET: Leslie Howard, Norma Shearer—We played this one night only. It would have been a flop in our small town except for a tieup with the Junior Women's Club. They really put it over for us. We did nice business. A very good picture. If you can get them in to see it, they will go away pleased. There isn't an actress in the business who could play Juliet as Norma Shearer did. Howard very good also.—Bill Simon, Rialto Theatre, Saguache, Col. Rural and small town patronage.

THEY GAVE HIM A GUN: Spencer Tracy, Gladys George, Franchot Tone—A down-to-the-minute story and a sermon against war in one. Fine cast, with thrills, tears and comedy enough to make a very satisfactory evening's entertainment. Running time, 94 minutes. Played Oct. 13-14.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

TOPPER: Constance Bennett—There's plenty of fun in this one, but does not hold up very good on the 25-cent night. Running time, 90 minutes. Played October 17-18.—C. R. Gregg, Liberty Theatre, Caney, Kan. Small town patronage.

WOMEN MEN MARRY: George Murphy, Josephine Hutchinson—Just a picture.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

Paramount

ANGEL: Marlene Dietrich, Herbert Marshall—Very entertaining. Should satisfy anywhere.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

ARTISTS AND MODELS: Jack Benny, Gail Patrick, Martha Raye, Ida Lupino—It has its clever spots and is a timothy mixture of acts and skits that seemed to go over, with the high spot, outside of Benny and Lupino, being Judy Canova. The lady captured the audience in her one skit in the bathtub. But Martha Raye's "Public Melody No. 1" was not cared for and seemed superfluous to the picture.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind.

BLONDE TROUBLE: Johnny Downs, Eleanore Whitney—Not so hot, only a fair program picture that fell flat at the box-office. Running time, 67 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

BULLDOG DRUMMOND ESCAPES: Ray Milland, Heather Angel—A fair little program picture.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

DOUBLE OR NOTHING: Bing Crosby, Martha Raye—This one is very good, the kind that will get them in and please about as near 100 per cent as possible. Better than average business. Running time, 91 minutes.—L. R. Creason, Palace Theatre, Eufaula, Okla. Small town patronage.

DOUBLE OR NOTHING: Bing Crosby, Martha Raye—It has some good numbers, but it starts so deadly slow, it dragged so much that we had a number of walkouts half way through the picture. Paramount drags in superfluous numbers for some reason. The Calgary Bros. could have been left out, for it did not have a thing to do with the picture. The final three reels had all the pep that was in the picture.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

HIGH, WIDE AND HANDSOME: Irene Dunne, Randolph Scott—Very good, and interesting right through. Fine performance by every one in the cast.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

HIGH, WIDE AND HANDSOME: Irene Dunne, Randolph Scott—Just got by on extended run. Barely pleased. Running time, 114 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

HOPALONG CASSIDY RIDES AGAIN: William Boyd, George Hayes—The Hopalongs please the western fans.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

HOPALONG RIDES AGAIN: William Boyd, George Hayes—I never knew he stopped riding, but apparently as long as "Hoppy" can negotiate a horse, they'll ride to see him to do it. Played Oct. 27.—C. T. Cooney, Waldo Theatre, Waldoboro, Maine.

HOTEL HAYWIRE: Leo Carrillo, Mary Carlisle—Nothing to this one. Silly from start to finish. Just so much wasted film. Why do they do it?—L. E. Creason, Palace Theatre, Eufaula, Okla. Small town patronage.

PARTNERS IN CRIME: Lynne Overman, Roscoe Karns—No drawing power. Picture just fair.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

PARTNERS IN CRIME: Lynne Overman, Roscoe Karns—Just a programer that pleased all.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

SHE ASKED FOR IT: William Gargan, Orien Hayward—Words fail me. Why producers can put out such pictures is beyond my comment. No star, no plot and no acting. My advice is to shelve it. Running time, 60 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

SHE'S NO LADY: Ann Dvorak, John Trent—Will get by on bargain night.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

SOPHIE LANG GOES WEST: Gertrude Michael, Larry Crabbe—It goes west at the box office. No draw names in the picture and one of those that if double-billed would undoubtedly be put on the weak end of the bill.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind.

SOULS AT SEA: Gary Cooper, George Raft—This is a well produced picture, wonderful acting, but too much blood and thunder to suit the ladies. No good at the box office. Why do the producers make these rough sea pictures? I have yet to play one that was a drawing card. Running time, 92 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

THIS WAY, PLEASE: C. Buddy Rogers, Betty Grable—Just a fair little musical.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

TURN OFF THE MOON: Charles Ruggles, Eleanore Whitney, Johnny Downs—Dandy program musical comedy which we used immediately following "Broadway Melody" and, while we didn't do the business on it that "Melody" did, it was liked equally as well. Running time, 80 minutes. Played Nov. 3-4.—Horn & Morgan, Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

TURN OFF THE MOON: Charles Ruggles, Eleanore Whitney—Very good to rather ordinary business on account of rainy weather. Played Oct. 27-28.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

WILD MONEY: Edward Everett Horton—A typical Horton vehicle which was good as usual and satisfied on Pal Nights. Running time, 69 minutes. Played Oct. 27-28.—Horn & Morgan, Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

FOUR CONTRIBUTORS JOIN REPORTERS

From four states have come new contributors to "What the Picture Did for Me" in the past week.

Reporting for the first time are these:

Bill Simon, Rialto Theatre, Saguache, Colo.

R. Schaber, Senator Theatre, Ashley, N. D.

Returning to the reportorial forces after a year of absence are the following:

H. R. Cromwell, Bedford Theatre, Bedford, Pa.

C. R. Gregg, Liberty Theatre, Caney, Kan.

First reports from Mr. Schaber appeared in last week's issue.

Republic

MICHAEL O'HALLORAN: Wynne Gibson, Warren Hull—Good for family trade.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

ROOTIN' TOOTIN' RHYTHM: Gene Autry, Armida—Another Autry that did exceptional business. Largest Saturday matinee in 20 years. The only trouble with these Autry pictures is that you can't get the kids out as long as you run the show. Some stayed from 10:30 A. M. to 5 P. M. Many of my patrons know Autry personally, as he was raised near here. However, his pictures are not as good as some other westerns we play.—L. R. Creason, Palace Theatre, Eufaula, Okla. Small town patronage.

THREE MESQUITEERS, THE: Bob Livingston, Ray Corrigan—We took a vote on serials and had this picked by popular vote. Looks okay so far. Our public seems to like them.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ont., Can.

RKO-Radio

ANNAPOLIS SALUTE: James Ellison, Marsha Hunt—A good picture with no names to draw them in. Running time, 65 minutes.—H. R. Cromwell, Bedford Theatre, Bedford, Pa.

ANNAPOLIS SALUTE: James Ellison, Marsha Hunt—Nice little programer that pleased all. Running time, 65 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

BORDER CAFE: John Beal, Armida—Nice programer. Will go over nicely where westerns are liked. Very good sound. Played to a nice house. Running time, 67 minutes. Played October 27.—Fischer & Bichler, Mattray Theatre, Strasburg, N. D. Small town patronage.

BORDER CAFE: John Beal, Armida—Here is a good western. A little different and no impossible scenes. Your western fans will enjoy it.—Bill Simon, Rialto Theatre, Saguache, Col. Rural and small town patronage.

FLIGHT FROM GLORY: Chester Morris, Whitney Bourne—Fairly good program picture, but a little too slow. Only good for the middle of the week. Running time, 60 minutes. Played October 30-31.—Fischer & Bichler, Mattray Theatre, Strasburg, N. D. Small town patronage.

FORTY NAUGHTY GIRLS: Zasu Pitts, James Gleason—This production was liked, but it did not do business. Running time, 63 minutes.—H. R. Cromwell, Bedford Theatre, Bedford, Pa.

HIDEAWAY: Fred Stone, Marjorie Lord—A Saturday night audience was agreeably surprised by "Hideaway." While not a pretentious picture, the comedy was so good in it that it was fine for the small town audience.—John A. Milligan, Broadway Theatre, Schuylerville, N. Y. Small town patronage.

HOLLYWOOD COWBOY: George O'Brien, Cecilia Parker—A fair western. Pleased the western fans.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

LIFE OF THE PARTY: Gene Raymond, Harriet Hilliard—Good program comedy.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

LIFE OF THE PARTY, THE: Gene Raymond, Harriet Hilliard—Here is a nice little picture with lots of money names and will stand right up and please in any spot. Running time, 77 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

MAKE A WISH: Bobby Breen—Good family picture.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

MUSIC FOR MADAME: Nino Martini, Joan Fontaine—Business was way below average on this one, but we had more enthusiastic comment on it than on any film we have shown in a long while. Nino Martini has a beautiful voice in comparison to which other Hollywood singing is simple, expressionless, warbling. Played Oct. 31.—C. T. Cooney, Waldo Theatre, Waldoboro, Maine. General patronage.

ON AGAIN, OFF AGAIN: Wheeler and Woolsey—Very good. This pair always makes a little money for us. Running time, 68 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

ON AGAIN, OFF AGAIN: Wheeler and Woolsey—Comedy to please young people. Too silly for adult fare.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

RIDING ON AIR: Joe E. Brown, Florence Rice—Personally think this the best Joe E. Brown under RKO banner. Joe always pulls them in for us. Business good.—Bill Simon, Rialto Theatre, Saguache, Col. Rural and small town patronage.

SUPER SLEUTH: Jack Oakie, Ann Sothern—Nothing to brag about. Just a fair comedy.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

TOAST OF NEW YORK: Edward Arnold, Frances Farmer—Fair. Not as big as RKO led you to believe. Stars not drawing cards.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

BORNEO: Mr. and Mrs. Martin Johnson—Good only for a double bill.—H. R. Cromwell, Bedford Theatre, Bedford, Pa.

BORNEO: Mr. and Mrs. Martin Johnson—It is just a travelogue with some few shots of other animals, but mostly monkeys and they had one monkey that Johnson did not capture, that was Lew Lehr that was supposed to furnish the comedy in the narration. If Johnson had heard him, he would have shot him on sight and I wouldn't have blamed the audience if they had reached for their guns. He is so unfunny.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

BORNEO: Mr. and Mrs. Martin Johnson—Gave a sack of pecans to each adult customer and did a nice business on this African jungle picture. A good many were disappointed because there weren't many animals in it. It was just a scenic trip. Running time, 75 minutes. Played November 2-3.—C. R. Gregg, Liberty Theatre, Caney, Kan. Small town patronage.

CHARLIE CHAN ON BROADWAY: Warner Oland, Joan Marsh—Not as good as some of the other Chan pictures, but no kicks. These are just pictures, not much drawing power. Good only on Bargain Nights or with plenty of good shorts. Running time, 68 minutes.—L. R. Creason, Palace Theatre, Eufaula, Okla. Small town patronage.

FIFTY ROADS TO TOWN: Don Ameche, Ann Sothern—A very clever comedy drama which was enjoyed by an audience of good size. Played Oct. 23.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

HANDY ANDY: Will Rogers—This Will Rogers reissue did a nice weekend business. In the small town I believe it will get most exhibitors more money than the majority of the program pictures released today. Running time, 81 minutes. Played October 16.—C. R. Gregg, Liberty Theatre, Caney, Kan. Small town patronage.

LANCER SPY: Dolores Del Rio, George Sanders—We planned on a good house, but box office receipts took an unprecedented drop. The picture was well liked by those who did come. Sanders drew much favorable comment. Played Oct. 30.—C. T. Cooney, Waldo Theatre, Waldoboro, Maine. General patronage.

LANCER SPY: Dolores Del Rio, George Sanders—An excellent production that is gripping and well made. Running time, 80 minutes.—H. R. Cromwell, Bedford Theatre, Bedford, Pa.

OFF TO THE RACES: Shirley Deane, Jed Prouty—We had a very enthusiastic audience of 610 children for this performance. It was a Hallowe'en party given by the Community Chest sponsors. This is one of the best of the Jones Family series. Played Oct. 29.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

ONE IN A MILLION: Sonja Henie, Adolphe Menjou—We went back and picked this up out of last year's group and, believe me, we are glad that we did. It's a honey and surely established that little Henie gal for "Thin Ice," which we play at the close of this month. She is just as cute as a bug's ear and, if you have not played it but can do so, it would be smart. Running time, 94 minutes. Played Oct. 24-25.—Horn & Morgan, Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

PIGSKIN PARADE: Stuart Erwin, Patsy Kelly—Another Fox musical which is "tops" in entertainment. Good songs, uproarious comedy, and a cast that "goes to town." Patsy Kelly, Stuart Erwin, Jack Haley all combine their talents to make this college football comedy the hit of the year. Then there is little Judy Garland, a comer if there ever was one. She sings two songs with "gusto" and "verve" and Fox should yield to public opinion and bring her back more often. Just one little fault to find. The Yacht Club Boys of course are good, but there is too much of them in this picture. Running time, 95 minutes. Played Nov. 6.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

WEE WILLIE WINKIE: Shirley Temple, Victor McLaglan—Shirley is always well received here, but is showing a gradual box office decline, but enjoyed good business.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ont., Can.

WIFE, DOCTOR AND NURSE: Warner Baxter, Loretta Young, Virginia Bruce—Swell picture due to the work of the stars. All three sink their teeth into their roles and make a picture of the eternal triangle that is used so often. Baxter, Young and Bruce have never been to better advantage than in this picture. They fitted and put it over. Teamwork made a good picture of an old theme.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

WIFE, DOCTOR AND NURSE: Warner Baxter, Loretta Young, Virginia Bruce—An excellent picture that pleased and drew above normal business. Running time, 85 minutes.—H. R. Cromwell, Bedford Theatre, Bedford, Pa.

WILD AND WOOLLY: Jane Withers—Jane Withers, who admits only one peer as a child drawing card (Shirley Temple), is in a fast moving, amusing and pleasing little film. Her side kick "Zero" (Carl "Alfalfa" Switzer) steals the show. Played Nov. 1-2.—C. T. Cooney, Waldo Theatre, Waldoboro, Maine. General patronage.

YOU CAN'T HAVE EVERYTHING: Alice Faye, Don Ameche, Ritz Brothers—This had a little of everything and the audience seemed to enjoy the show very much. Some thought the Ritz Brothers just overdid their part a little, but you know how hard it is to please an audience nowadays. Running time, 99 minutes. Played October 24-25.—C. R. Gregg, Liberty Theatre, Caney, Kan. Small town patronage.

United Artists

DARK JOURNEY: Conrad Veidt, Vivien Leigh—The acting of the entire cast was superb and the detail in and realism of every scene noteworthy. We did way below average business and expected to. But we hope that by playing such films and not shying clear of them, we will eventually (as we already have) find more and more people attending because the picture is English, will be free from all Barnum and Baileyishness and hot air ballyhoo, and will offer meat for the mind. The camera flatted from scene to scene somewhat bewilderingly at times and the English do not seem to know how to create real suspense, but the incidental street sounds, noises at railroad stations, all sound effects in general could well be imitated by Hollywood. "Dark Journey" is strange and exciting, approaching "The Thirty-Nine Steps." Running time, 80 minutes. Played October 25.—C. T. Cooney, Jr., Waldo Theatre, Waldoboro, Me. General patronage.

HISTORY IS MADE AT NIGHT: Charles Boyer, Jean Arthur—This picture failed to click in our situation. Boyer is no draw with our patrons. The iceberg catastrophe was exceptionally good.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ont., Can.

KNIGHT WITHOUT ARMOR: Marlene Dietrich, Robert Donat—If I had it to do over I would pay for this one and let United Artists keep it. Too many kicks from the few that saw it the first night and I was really lonesome on the second night. Running time, 107 minutes. Played October 26-27.—C. R. Gregg, Liberty Theatre, Caney, Kansas. Small town patronage.

PRISONER OF ZENDA, THE: Ronald Colman, Madelein Carroll—A fine picture that failed to click for me. Running time, 88 minutes. Played October 21-22.—C. R. Gregg, Liberty Theatre, Caney, Kansas. Small town patronage.

PRISONER OF ZENDA: Ronald Colman, Madeleine Carroll, Raymond Massey, C. Aubrey Smith, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr.—Ronald Colman smoothly engineers a dual role and is assisted by Madeleine Carroll, plus polished and accomplished actors such as C. Aubrey Smith, Raymond Massey and Douglas Fairbanks, Jr. (at last in a suitable role). Mr. Colman does more than justice to Anthony Hope's yarn. The settings are lavish, the humor subtle. It is definitely a high class expensive production as smooth-running as a drop of blue blood on a blade of shining steel. We played it too late. Our summer patronage would have been highly amused and well entertained. Played Oct. 28-29.—C. T. Cooney, Waldo Theatre, Waldoboro, Maine. General patronage.

STAR IS BORN, A: Fredric March, Janet Gaynor—Although we played this one plenty late it really made the box office soar. We gave this plenty of push and did far above average business. An excellent picture; color is good and so was the sound. Back this one to the limit and you won't be wrong. It will please 99% and you'll make some money. Especially good for the small town.—Bill Simon, Rialto Theatre, Saguache, Col. Rural and small town patronage.

STELLA DALLAS: Barbara Stanwyck, John Boles, Anne Shirley—Here is one grand show and the whole cast does fine work. I had to furnish a few extra handkerchiefs for the ladies as the majority of them shed a few tears. But they liked it very much. Running time, 104 minutes. Played November 4-5.—C. R. Gregg, Liberty Theatre, Caney, Kansas. Small town patronage.

WOMAN CHASES MAN: Joel McCrea, Mirian Hopkins—A very good comedy picture, but somehow didn't do so good at the box office. Will go over good where these stars are liked. Running time, 70 minutes. Played October 23-24.—Fischer & Bichler, Mattray Theatre, Strasburg, N. D. Small town patronage.

Universal

BLACK ACES: Buck Jones, Kay Linaker—Not as good as many of his previous ones. Too many dark scenes. Running time, 60 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

BOSS RIDER OF GUN CREEK: Buck Jones—You can have your Garbos, Robert Taylors, Deanna Durbins, Clark Gables or Crawfords, but give me Buck Jones for a weekend and we're always happy. This picture was no exception.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tillbury, Ont., Can.

IDOLS OF THE CROWD: John Wayne, Sheila Bromley—An excellent action picture. Will pleas and is different.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa.

LEFT HANDED LAW: Buck Jones—A fair western to a little less than normal business. Played Oct. 30.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

Warner Brothers

DEVIL'S SADDLE LEGION, THE: Dick Foran, Anne Nagel. These Foran pictures are very good. His voice, the direction and photography are all that could be expected from any producer. Too bad Warners saw fit to stop making these. Running time, 60 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

GO GETTER, THE: George Brent, Anita Louise—An outstanding picture. George Brent very popular with my patrons. Pleased 100 per cent. Made a mistake in not playing it on a Sunday date. Business above average for Friday-Saturday. A pleasure to run such a production. The part of Cappy Ricks, played by Charles Winninger, steals the show. Running time, 92 minutes. Played Oct. 15-16.—Frank Ross, Majestic Theatre, Joliet, Ill. General patronage.

KID GALAHAD: Edward G. Robinson, Bette Davis—A swell picture but how could it help be with Edward G. Robinson and Bette Davis, plus an excellent story. Robinson is becoming popular here. The fight picture pleased the men. Struck a very rainy night Saturday so that cut the box office in two, but it pleased those who came. Running time, 101 minutes. Played Oct. 16-17.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

LIFE OF EMILE ZOLA, THE: Paul Muni, Gale Sondergaard—An excellent production that brings out people who ordinarily do not come, but certainly not a commercial success. Running time, 116 minutes.—H. R. Cromwell, Bedford Theatre, Bedford, Pa.

LIFE OF EMILE ZOLA, THE: Paul Muni, Gale Sondergaard—Well, boys, here is a grand show that failed to get me any business but no fault of the picture. It's just that they won't go for this type of show. Running time, 116 minutes. Played October 31-November 1.—C. R. Gregg, Liberty Theatre, Caney, Kansas. Small town patronage.

SINGING MARINE, THE: Dick Powell—Much improvement over Powell pictures. Pleased.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

SLIM: Pat O'Brien, Henry Fonda—This is one of the best family pictures I have ever run. Well acted and story value above average. Just the type for the working class. Don't fail to run it and give it plenty advertising. It will please all who see it. Running time, 80 minutesc.—L. R. Creason, Palace Theatre, Eufaula, Okla. Small town patronage.

VARSITY SHOW: Dick Powell, Fred Waring and orchestra, Ted Healy, Lane Sisters—Too long drawn out. It has its moments alright and a couple of catchy tunes but they have a bird in there, Johnny Davis, with his "Old King Cole," that they dragged in three times. If he is supposed to be good I'd hate to see something really bad. It builds up, then sags, and the final is okay with Waring and his college songs sequences.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind.

VARSITY SHOW: Priscilla Lane, Ted Healy—You will notice the two we named as stars. They are, as they took the entire show. This is the best musical we have run in two seasons. Young, fresh, good-looking girls; good songs; clever settings; and the lines are fast and furious. Warners have come into their place in the sun again with this show. Pleased all who saw it but they were not many. Running time, 120 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

WINE, WOMEN AND HORSES: Barton MacLane, Ann Sheridan—A dandy race horse picture that pleased and did good business. Only fault it's too short. Like most of the pictures this year you have to buy so many short subjects that you have nothing left even when you do good business. Running time, 64 minutes.—L. R. Creason, Palace Theatre, Eufaula, Okla. Small town patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

CLOCK GOES ROUND AND ROUND, THE: Scrappy Cartoon—Okay; a good black and white cartoon.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa.

Educational

BIG APPLE, THE: Song and Comedy Hits—A very pleasing reel and well liked by our audience.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa.

OFF THE HORSES: Two-reel Comedies—A pretty good two-reeler featuring the radio comedian, Bert Lahr. Has several shots of horse races and some good comedy. Good program filler. Running time, 19 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, State Prison, Trenton, N. J.

POTLUCK: Song and Comedy Hits—A good single-reel musical. Lacks something that keeps it out of the top class.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa.

TIN CAN TOURIST, THE: Terry-toon—All of these Terrytoons are good. This one features a trailer with innumerable comical gadgets. Worth a spot on any program. Running time, six minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, State Prison, Trenton, N. J.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

FRAMING YOUTH: Our Gang Comedies—Another knockout gang comedy. Good in any man's theatre any time.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa.

GLIMPSES OF JAVA AND CEYLON—FitzPatrick's Travel Talks—FitzPatrick seems to have travel talks in class by itself. These should be played in every theatre.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ont., Can.

GLOVE TAPS: Our Gang Comedies—Another screamingly funny comedy from the Our Gang kiddies. These comedies please the grownups almost as much as the children. Running time, one reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

JUNGLE JUVENILES: Pete Smith Specialties—A pleasing novelty reel with two monkeys and a little boy.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa.

LITTLE CHEESER: Harman-Ising—Second run and our audience enjoyed it as much as the first time. —C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa.

PENNY WISDOM: Pete Smith Specialties—Good. Housewives will find in it many useful hints.—C. T. Cooney, Jr., Waldo Theatre, Waldoboro, Me. General patronage.

RAINBOW PASS: MGM Miniatures—A story of the Chinese theatre. Excellent and educational. Will please all.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa.

ROCKY MOUNTAIN GRANDEUR: FitzPatrick Travel Talks—Magnificent shots of the Rockies in beautiful natural color, causing murmurs of appreciation again and again throughout the audience. Why did Metro score it with such poorly recorded and stupid music? Running time, 10 minutes.—C. T. Cooney, Jr., Waldo Theatre, Waldoboro, Me. General patronage.

ROMANCE OF RADIUM: Pete Smith Specialty—One of the finest single reels of the year; educational, interesting and fascinating. Many good comments from patrons.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa.

TENNIS TACTICS: Pete Smith Specialty—Good visual and vocal description of tennis skill.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H.

THREE SMART BOYS: Our Gang Comedies—Very good, always well received.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ont., Can.

TORTURE MONEY: Crime Doesn't Pay Series—These "Crime Doesn't Pay" series are always interesting and help along an otherwise poor feature. Gruesome in spots, but they liked it.—R. Schaber, Jr., Senator Theatre, Ashley, N. D. Small town patronage.

WAYWARD PUPS: Happy Harmonies—This series of cartoons are growing more in the public favor with each showing and this one is no exception. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

Paramount

EDUCATED FISH: Color Classics—Excellent cartoon. When a sawfish at an undersea school sneezed and cut his desk right in half, a patron here claimed he burst a blood vessel. Running time, 10 minutes.—C. T. Cooney, Jr., Waldo Theatre, Waldoboro, Me. General patronage.

FOOTBALL TOUCHER DOWNER: Popeye the Sailor—We see Popeye playing football as a boy while Olive Oyl cheers from the stands, with bloomers on, and Wimpy keeps score by means of chalk and a brush tied to his little hind quarters. Popeye shorts are on the upswing again. This one is good plus.—C. T. Cooney, Jr., Waldo Theatre, Waldoboro, Me. General patronage.

INVENTOR, THE: Paragraphics—Flat, dull and definitely one of Paramount's poorest shorts.—C. T. Cooney, Jr., Waldo Theatre, Waldoboro, Me. General patronage.

ORGAN GRINDERS SWING: Popeye Cartoon—Popeye makes another hit and usually brings a good hand.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ont., Can.

PICK YOUR FAVORITE: Grantland Rice Sportlights—Poor. Ted Husing reads a terrible poem by Grantland Rice as though he realizes the poem and the jerky photography make up the most amateurish short Paramount has made in many a moon.—C. T. Cooney, Jr., Waldo Theatre, Waldoboro, Me. General patronage.

POPULAR SCIENCE: Very good, always instructive and well received.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ont., Can.

RKO-Radio

CLOCK CLEANERS, THE: Mickey Mouse—Another fine Mickey Mouse.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa.

HAWAIIAN HOLIDAY: Mickey Mouse—One of the finest of the Mickeys. Give it preferred time.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa.

MORNING JUDGE: Edgar Kennedy—One of the outstanding two-reel comedies of the year. Give it your preferred time.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa.

Twentieth Century-Fox

FILMING MODERN YOUTH: Adventures of the Newsreel Cameraman Series—A pleasing interlude in any program I think these "Adventures of the Newsreel Cameraman" singles are the best short Fox releases. Running time, 10 minutes.—C. T. Cooney, Jr., Waldo Theatre, Waldoboro, Me. General patronage.

United Artists

THROUGH THE MIRROR: Mickey Mouse—A very good Mickey Mouse comedy. Running time, seven minutes.—Fischer & Bichler, Mattray Theatre, Strasburg, S. D. Small town patronage.

Universal

KEEPER OF THE LIONS: Oswald Cartoon—Good cartoon comedy.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa.

Vitaphone

CRADLE OF CIVILIZATION: Colortour Adventure—These travel talks, for some reason, lack color and seem pale and washed out. They in no way compare to MGM's. The subject matter is interesting, but the color is bad and the sound only fair. The audience seems glad when it is over. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind.

DOCTOR CUPID: Ken Murray, Oswald—This series of shorts always made a hit on our weekend bill and this one is no exception. Running time, 18 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind.

JOE PALOOKA IN "THIRST AID": Robert Norton, Beverly Phalen—Everyone likes Joe Palooka and this is no exception. A good short with plenty of action. Running time, 20 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

NUT GUILTY: Edgar Bergen—Much enjoyed by my patrons. Play it. Running time, one reel.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural patronage.

PLAY STREET: Broadway Brevities—Very good entertainment. Running time, two reels.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural patronage.

PORKY'S BUILDING: Looney Tunes—A great cartoon for the kids. These cartoons are getting better and better. Running time seven minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

PORKY'S BAD TIME STORY: Looney Tunes—This series are not good. There seems to be something lacking in the fat porker to capture the audience as other cartoons do.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind.

RUSS MORGAN AND ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—This is a very good band short. The little girl singer is good in her two numbers and the dance team is excellent. Good for any day of the week. Running time, nine minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

PORKY'S DUCK HUNT: Looney Tune—These Looney Tunes are getting better and better. The grownups as well as the kids go for them. Running time, seven minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind.

SPEAKING OF THE WEATHER: Merry Melody —Very good. Running time, eight minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa.

SWEET SIOUX: Merrie Melodies—Not quite so good as most of this series. Running time, one reel. Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

VAUDEVILLE HITS: Big Time Vaudeville Reel—Very good. Running time, nine minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa.

THE RELEASE CHART

NOTE: The totals for running time are the official figures announced by the home offices of the distributing companies.

When a production is reviewed in Hollywood, the running time is as officially given by the West Coast studio of the company at the time of the review, and this fact is denoted by an asterisk() immediately preceding the number. As soon as the home office has established the running time for national release, any change from the studio figure is made and the asterisk is removed.*

Running times are subject to change according to local conditions. State or city censorship deletions may cause variations from the announced and published figures; repairs to the film may be another reason.

J C JENKINS—HIS COLYUM

Lost in South Dakota. HELP, HELP
Dear Herald:

Listen, everybody. We have just received a letter from our very good friend, Mr. H. H. Walker of the Strand theatre at Minot, North Dakota, and, among other things, he says he presumes that April Shower is kept busy rounding up dogs for that "Shelterbelt."

Mr. Walker says he hopes we will not overlook North Dakota in our vagabond wanderings. We hope we won't either. We think a lot of North Dakota and the boys who are furnishing the state with amusement. We were up there some time back and got as far as Fargo when it was 114 in the shade. Then we went hunting for some shade.

As we remember it, Fargo and Minot are the two principal cities in the state, and as we remember it, cities that the state can boast of. And while the state is boasting about her cities she might also do a little shouting about the Strand theatre at Minot and the very genial manager, Mr. Walker.

What we'd like to know for sure is whether H. H. is a relative of our esteemed friend, the late Harry Walker of Aberdeen, South Dakota. Our guess is that he is a son of that gentleman.

In reporting meeting a number of our exhibitor friends in Minnesota and Iowa last week we failed to mention Mr. and Mrs. Johanson of Paulina, Iowa, and there was no sense in failing to mention these two lovely people either. They have redecorated their theatre and equipped it with upholstered seats of the first class and made their theatre a principal show place of the territory.

Mr. Johanson is a professional woodworker and makes all kinds of bric-a-brac (or something like that), for Mrs. Johanson to decorate her home. We sent them some mahogany and mesquite wood to be carved into little doodads for their home when we were in the Rio Grande valley of Texas some time ago.

We presume the most of you don't know Andy and Herb Anderson of the Detroit Lakes Amusement Company of Detroit Lakes, Minn. If you don't you have missed something. The boys have the same name but we understand that they had different fathers and mothers.

The way we feel about it right now, we'd like to kick Andy in the seat of government. When we were in Texas last winter we went down to Brownsville and called on Andy and his wife at their hotel and they promised to come up to McAllen and call on us. We had a lot of sowbelly and beans cooked up but the next thing we heard of them they were in Los Angeles, and there was no darn sense in their acting like that. Andy says that Herb has gone to California for the winter and our guess is that he will be around those stars in Hollywood. We are going to forgive Andy this time because he sent us a check and asked us to have his subscription for the HERALD renewed. When they do that there is no further evidence of their good judgment necessary.

New York Mills is where M. A. Miller operates his Liberty theatre that has become so famous throughout the state. M. A. says he wants the HERALD also. New York Mills was the former home of our old friend Bill Bender, who used to lead the orchestra in our theatre some little time back, and how that boy could scrape a fiddle. Thanks, M. A., for your renewal.

Royal L. Larson of the Kennedy theatre, at Kennedy, Minn., sends us his check and says, "Colonel, you know I am depending upon you to take care of my subscription for the HERALD." Royal has placed his dependence in the right guy. Thanks, Royal, we hope to see you some time.

Next spring we are going to plant only about half of our garden. We are going to fool those—grasshoppers some way. They can go hungry and see if we care. Maybe the Government will pay us for leaving part of it idle; who knows?

The Manager of the Monty theatre at Montgomery, Minn., writes and says he thinks he should have the HERALD. Of course he should. Every theatreman should, for, It Covers The Field Like An April Shower. From now on the Monty theatre will be a member of the HERALD family.

Some time the League of Nations might coax the Dove of Peace to get back on her nest and get busy—that is some time.

The other day we were telling a fellow about some of the fish we caught down in the Gulf last winter with J. C. Fanning of Brownsville, Texas. The fellow bit off a chew of plug and cocked one eye at us and said, "Say, Colonel, where did you come from anyway?" and we replied, "Well, our ancestors came from old Thermopylae and settled among the vine-clad rocks and citrus groves of Cyracilla, and our early life ran as quiet as the brook by which we sported." The fellow pulled his handkerchief out and blew his nose and said, "Well, whatja know about that."

Since our Cornhusker football team has cleaned up the most of the college elevens in this territory, the theatre boys of the state have woke up and want to get into the front ranks of the procession. J. L. Harmon of the Rex theatre at Orchard thinks he needs the HERALD to keep him well informed. He does.

Mr. Burrus of the Isis theatre at Crete feels the same way about it and so does John Noffsinger of the Capitol at Madison.

These boys want to keep step with the march of progress and they feel that the HERALD will help them do it.

O. O. McIntyre was telling in his column recently about a fellow telling of a sailor who was always broke, and he asked him why this was and the sailor replied, "Well, I spend part of my money for liquor, part on women and the rest of it I just fritter away."

And now, for fear you might "fritter away" your time reading this, we are going to stop and let you go and get a drink, if you want to, but we hope you don't want to.

These reviews written before release predicted success!

M. P. HERALD—"The last word in gangster pictures, by any and all standards...The production is without question the best of the gangster library."

SHOWMEN'S TRADE REVIEW—"Smashing story that provides an ideal role for Edward G. Robinson, the kind that established him as the screen's No. One Gangster . . . Rare good entertainment."

HOLLYWOOD REPORTER—"Powerful...excellent production... Owes much of its compelling power to the direction of Edward Ludwig . . . Pictorially striking . . . admirably photographed."

MOTION PICTURE DAILY—"Melodramatic and thrilling...will register effectively at the box-office . . . A timely yarn . . . realistic and as uncompromising in action as many of its characters...Edward G. Robinson gives a memorable portrait."

VARIETY—"Carefully produced . . . fine performances . . . Metro has a box-office profits prospect . . . Will bring the b. o. returns . . ."

DAILY VARIETY—"Strong, impressive drama Stands on a par with the memorable prior performances of gangster big shots by Edward G. Robinson. Robinson name and significant title, will do the b. o. trick again. Impressive also is Rose Stradner . . . The play is kept tense, vivid, significant every foot of the way. Exciting entertainment, elaborately produced, and will stand up anywhere as a top show."

BOXOFFICE—"Contains a wallop to register in the higher gross brackets."

PIPEFUL

IF you are one of those who cares about "whither are we drifting?" here are some indicative bits that can be rubbed in the hand and put in your pipe for inspiration. Analysis recently made available on income tax returns for '35 shows that .0081 of the persons filing income tax returns, which, put another way, is .0003 of the population, paid 70.31 per cent of the total tax, and paid it out of only 13.39 per cent of the total net incomes reported. These figures pertain to those in the "over $25,000" bracket.

If we step down to the "over $10,000" bracket, which will take in a preponderance of Motion Picture Herald's subscribers, we find them paying 85.94 per cent of the total income tax—out of 3.53 per cent of the returns filed. The other 15 per cent was divided among about 4,300,000 tax payers.

We have obviously reached a point where it is hardly profitable to make money. This seems, too, to have a bearing on certain aspects of the so-called security market. It further has a direct bearing on our motion picture industry at many points, among them the fact that the more highly paid and therefore presumably most valuable players tend to deprive the box office of more than a minimum of their performances on the ground that surtaxes make further appearances unprofitable.

THE income taxation policies work an especial hardship on screen players, in that their high salary rewards come commonly after a long, costly and arduous period of training and experience and continue ordinarily for but few years. The tax is a tithing of a crop without consideration of the planting and cultivation, and without consideration that there is typically only one such crop in a lifetime.

One is moved to much sympathy with that bitter old back country English squire of fictional fame. He received his first set of forms for tax reports. He regarded them long and thoughtfully, then turned a form over and wrote across the back: "Gentlemen: After due consideration I have decided not to join the income tax."

DAMNED WITH SUCCESS

NO WEEK passes without some toplofty condemnation of the motion picture for attending to its own business. The best specimen afforded recently has come from the erudite lips of Miss Elizabeth Drew, lecturer in English at Cambridge University, speaking at the National Book Fair in New York.

"Media of escape from reality," she hissed at both the stage and screen.

"The movies are the very incarnation of the day-dreams of love, adventure, wealth, luxury and happiness of several millions of emotionally starved and financially pinched persons. For those people the temple of art is represented by Shirley Temple. The movies give them a world in which the high are pulled down and the low raised up, in which the women sparkle with jewels and crackle with sex appeal."

Doubtless Miss Drew thought she was being caustic. Doubtless she tried to be. In all effect and substance, however, she achieved tribute.

ANY good producer will be delighted if he can continue to deliver "the very incarnation of the day-dreams of love, adventure, wealth, luxury and happiness of several millions of emotionally starved persons." That is what is also known, probably not to Miss Drew, as "boxoffice." The motion picture industry is dedicated to the platform that no one shall starve emotionally in America. If it comforts the lowly and gives them a good time, it is a social success.

But about this matter of the women who "crackle with sex appeal." The screen provides that, too, but Miss Drew, as an authority in English, bungles either her rhetoric or her biology or something. Crackling is a manifestation of bonfires, frying eggs and old-type spark-gap radio telegraph transmitters. Sex appeal on the screen, and elsewhere, may scintillate, vibrate, permeate, ooze, waft or flow, depending on intensity, mood and technique — but crackle, never. If it gets that brittle it does not work.

Otherwise Miss Drew has written a good advertisement.

NAPOLEON'S BABY

HERE and there about the land there have arisen questionings, mainly in the columns of motion picture commentators who make a business of issues, about how "Conquest" was approved by the Hays office, meaning the Production Code Administration. It is pointed out that "in the picture Marie Walewska has a baby by Napoleon, although they are not married, and never get married."

As has been often remarked before on this page, there is nothing in the Production Code which contemplates that human misconduct is not a part of the drama, and inevitably a part of it.

A re-reading of the Code will discover that it raises objection not to the representation of but to the glorification of wrongdoing, and to the exploitation of the manifestations of sex, for instance, for exploitation's sake. For the purposes of quibble the line can be very thin, but among persons of decent intent it is wide enough. It seems more than likely that the Code Administration held that "Conquest" would not be encouraging girls to have babies by Napoleon, or the likes of him.

OF a late Sunday night and wearied of much reading, this editor is minded to demand suppression of those militants who "leave no stone unturned," and those extravagants for whom everything progresses "by leaps and bounds." The one applies only to a fisherman looking for helgamites, the other to the flight of the kangaroo—and, just possibly, production costs.

Monopoly Fought

For the first time since Kinemas, Ltd., consolidated with Schlesinger interests a few years ago, an organization has been formed admittedly to break down the monopoly held in the South African amusement world by the Schlesinger group. The activities of the new organization, Associated Films Company (Pty), Ltd., were kept secret up until this week, when its representative, Phillip S. Pohl, commenced to line up product, completing a deal for the distribution of Grand National's product in the Union of South Africa.

The South African situation is discussed in an article on page 13.

Country and City

Exhibitors in small towns of Illinois and Iowa surrounding Chicago are reporting steady improvement in gross receipts, with the bumper crops almost harvested and Government loans assured the farmers, but the upswing in the country territory is not paralleled in the city, writes William F. Crouch. This condition in the cities is caused largely by the double feature policy of Balaban and Katz circuit, independents and other circuit men say.

The study of the Chicago situation is on page 46.

Constitutional Doubt

Temporarily a victor in Nebraska in its fight to invalidate on grounds of unconstitutionality state legislation designed to outlaw its activities the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers opened court battles in Washington and Montana. The Nebraska court, granting it a temporary injunction, held that "there is grave doubt of the constitutionality of the act and plaintiffs have shown that it would inflict serious injury."

The ASCAP litigation is described on page 46.

Court Battle

In a brief filed in United States district court, Indianapolis, Gary Theatre Company this week contended that producers' "catalogues" should be considered as identifying the subject matter of exhibitor contracts. The brief was the final document in the Gary Company's court action for a mandatory injunction to force Paramount to deliver 10 features which, it is charged, were contracted for but not delivered during the 1936-37 season. The contention was made in answer to Paramount's claim that it should not be bound by its "catalogue" or by representations made by its salesmen.

Admission Tax

On the theory that the government is primarily interested in increasing its revenue from theatres, Paramount has gathered statistics to be submitted to government officials in an attempt to prove that elimination of the 10 per cent tax on admissions over 40 cents would increase collections from taxes on capital stock, incomes, excess and undistributed profits and dividends. From these sources, a Paramount official said, the government would obtain 2 1/6 cents of an increase in admission prices from 40 to 45 cents.

Paramount's contentions on the tax question are discussed in an article on page 12.

Stereophonic Sound

A feature of the fall convention of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers in New York last month, third dimensional or stereophonic sound, was again demonstrated for engineers and the press by Electrical Research Products, Inc., last week. The new development claims to localize the sound on the screen and to obtain a "cleaner" tone.

Box Office Dollars

Motion picture income was reflected this week as follows: (1) United Artists concluded 11 weeks with a 131 per cent increase in played and earned film sales; (2) Columbia Pictures had a $147,000 net for the first 1937-38 quarter; (3) U. S. Revenue Department admission tax collections hit $1,966,617 in October, highest in ten months; (4) Warner Brothers net income for the year ended September 1st totaled $5,876,182, up some $2,700,000 over last year.

The Wall Street Journal, too, delved into motion picture finances, discovering that "costs are up some 30 per cent," as reported on page 17.

"Gossiper" Dropped

Lloyd Pantages, film "gossiper," on the Columbia Broadcasting System, was dropped from the network this week, after being on the air under the sponsorship of Raymonds, Inc., since October 17th. W. C. Gittenger, CBS sales manager, announced that the program was cancelled because of differences between the client and the agency, Weinberg Advertising Company of California. Meanwhile, the motion picture industry in Hollywood continues in protestation against the film "gossipings" of a score of other socalled film news commentators.

Inquiry Adjourned

California legislators investigating labor relations in the motion picture industry adjourned for an indefinite period having first heard William Bioff, personal representative of George Browne, testify that any dissension in the IATSE is caused by "communists in the ranks," and Pat Casey, labor representative for the producers, testify that he received $87,000 a year in salaries and fees and that "no part of that sum was given to any labor union leader."

Labor developments are on page 30.

Television by Cable

Although officials of the Bell Laboratories declined to make any predictions as to the future of television, they conducted another demonstration in New York Tuesday, showing the possibilities of television transmission by the use of a coaxial cable. The pictures, a newsreel and a short subject, were transmitted from Philadelphia and reproduced in the experimental room of the Laboratories on a screen approximately seven by eight inches. Bell is not interested in television, as such, officials asserted, but has devised a method of transmitting television images over long distances, by wire, for use of television broadcasters.

British Interests

Under the terms of the agreement by which Alexander Korda and Samuel Goldwyn will borrow $4,500,000 to purchase the United Artists stock held by Mary Pickford, Charles Chaplin and Douglas Fairbanks, the directorial control of the corporation will be in the hands of British interests. A nine-man board of directors is to be formed and the two English firms that will supply the $4,500,000, Mr. Korda and Mr. Goldwyn will each be represented by three members, giving British interests a two-thirds control.

Further details on the pending transaction are included in an article on page 16.

Roxy Fees

With hearings on 33 applications for fees in connection with the reorganization plan for the Roxy theatre in New York set by federal court for December 3rd, Joseph M. Harefield, attorney for the bondholders' protective committee, advised the court that the total applications, $612,000, aggregated more than twice the amount available for such payments. He objected to any allowance being made to counsel for the stockholders' committee on the ground that that committee was excluded from participation in the plan.

Lottery

Following the recent lead of Nebraska and Georgia, the supreme court of Alabama this week ruled that Bank Night is a violation of the state lottery laws. Virgil Bouldin, justice, announced the decision which upheld a recent ruling of the court of appeals. Mr. Bouldin declared: "The lust for profit by catering to and commercializing the gambling spirit has given rise to many ingenious devices resulting in very many decisions by the courts dealing with the application of lottery statutes similar to ours. The hazarding of money with the hope of obtaining by chance a larger sum is the essence of the scheme." Bank Night was ruled a lottery in Georgia November 11th and in Nebraska, October 22nd.

Four for World

Four of the pictures to be made during the year at the Warner First National Studios at Teddington, England, will be released internationally, Irving Asher, production chief of the studio told the press on his arrival in New York en route to confer with Warner executives on plans for production in England. Tentative plans call for a program of 16. Schedules for both the Hollywood and Teddington studios will be arranged to facilitate the exchange of talent.

The interview is reported on page 44.

Sympathy

John D. Clark, speaking for Twentieth Century-Fox of which he is general sales manager, said he and his company were "entirely in sympathy with the efforts of exhibitors to eliminate some of the matters that have been the cause of disputes between exhibitors and distributors" and "perfectly willing to cooperate as far as we possibly can." The statement, and other comments on the industry at large with particular reference to exhibition, were made on Mr. Clark's return from a swing around the principal exchange centers of the country.

His statements are reported on page 43.

Quota Protests

American producer distributor interests, alarmed at the strong possibility of the passage by Parliament of onerous British quota provisions embodied in the proposed new Films Act, are following developments in London closely and are placing their chief hope for relief either in modification of the present bill before it finally is passed or in the United States department of state which last week announced its intention of negotiating for a reciprocal trade treaty with Great Britain. If concessions for the motion picture industry are made a point of negotiation in the new treaty the advantages gained would supersede the British national quota law.

The possibilities are discussed on page 27.

French Control

The French Parliament when it next meets will consider a bill establishing governmental control of the motion picture industry, provisions of which were discussed in a Cabinet meeting last week. Chief features of the bill, revealed by "indiscretions," are a state board to decide producers' and distributors' percentages; a board to establish standards for the industry which shall include representatives of the Government, the trade unions and the employers, and the elimination of double bills.

Pierre Autre reports on the bill in a dispatch from Paris on page 68.

Poland's Favorites

Poland's exhibitors and public still look to America for a large majority of the features shown in a year, and while there is a quota and there are taxes to assist domestic production, American distributors find the field less restricted than elsewhere in Central Europe. A bill that would have changed all this was shelved, and renewed agitation for it has not developed into action.

The article is on page 38.

RKO in France

From Paris comes the announcement that RKO Radio will produce its own motion pictures in France for the French market, the change to have no effect on the RKO Paris office for distribution of American films. First feature scheduled under the new program is "Le Prisonnier du Ciel" (Prisoner of the Sky), to be directed by Rene Sti. The French industry is indignant over the banning by Italy of "Le Grande Illusion" which was awarded one of the leading prizes at the International Exposition at Venice.

BENEFIT TO U.S. AND EXHIBITOR SEEN IF ADMISSION TAX IS EASED

Returns to Government Would More Than Offset Loss If the Exemptions Were Broadened, Say Paramount Statisticians

An appeal to the Federal Government to abolish the admission tax or at least to increase the exemptions, so that the burden of the assessment would be lifted from tickets costing 50 or 60 cents, is to follow a study which has been made by Paramount's statistical department. The federal tax at present starts at admission prices of 41 cents.

Paramount's figures show that the tax virtually has checkmated increases in prices charged by theatres and has established a general top price at the tax avoidance level of 40 cents, supporting the results of an inquiry made by MOTION PICTURE HERALD and recorded in the issue of November 13th. Reports from all parts of the United States revealed that such increases of charges as had been made were largely in the neighborhood and small town theatres and that theatres already charging 40 cents found their prices "frozen" at that level because a five-cent increase would go practically in full to the Government while a 10-cent increase was considered impracticable.

The contention of Paramount's statisticians is that the Treasury department at Washington would benefit with the exhibitors by raising the exemption line because the increased revenue of the theatres would bring increased collections from other taxes, more than offsetting the loss to the Government in the admission tax returns themselves.

Paramount's statistical department believes that it could prove to the Government, if given the opportunity, that repeal or revision of the present tax measure would be beneficial to the Federal Treasury from a dollars and cents standpoint.

A Paramount executive, who preferred anonymity for the present, while reluctant to explain how the argument would be presented to Government officials, indicated that Paramount had a definite plan.

"If the statistics are not presented to the Government, some one's slipping up on his job," he declared.

Effect on Other Taxes

Elimination of the admission tax, he said, would result in an increase of admission prices in many theatres, and the increased revenue to exhibitors and corporations would bring proportionate additions to the Government from taxes on capital stock, income, excess and undistributed profits, and dividends.

Under the present system of taxation, theatre owners avoid the admission tax by keeping their prices under 41 cents and therefore the Government derives no income from these houses, he explained. Also, he added, exhibitors are unable to raise admissions over the 40-cent level unless they go above 50 cents, and public reaction to such large increases would defeat the purpose of the move.

In this connection, the HERALD'S study concluded:

"The greatest deterrent to adoption of advanced scales, exhibitors report, has been the Federal Government's levy of 10 per cent on all admissions of 41 cents and over. Theatremen, according to the survey, do not believe conditions warrant jumps from 40 to 50, 55 or 60 cents, and an increase to 45 cents, they point out, would be futile, as the added revenue would be taken by the Government."

The Government's Share

Repeal or a change in the tax legislation would open the way, the Paramount executive said, to increasing admissions from 40 to 45 cents. From this added revenue, of 5 cents, the company estimated, the government would realize a total of 2 1/6 cents from increased taxes from other sources. The company's figure, the spokesman explained, was arrived at on the basis that the Government would get 17 to 18 per cent of the increase in capital stock and income taxes and this, added to a levy on excess profits and undistributed profits, would net the Treasury in excess of 1 cent of the 5 cent advance.

Of the remaining 4 cents, the company's statisticians figured, the Government would receive 1 1/6 cents in taxes on dividends, making the total 2 1/6 cents.

Only for Peak Hours

Tax experts from the United States Treasury Department have studied the figures and support the theory, he said, and then added:

"But they're not the ones that have to be convinced in order to get the legislation changed."

Politicians are the ones the company will have difficulty convincing, he said, pointing out that their immediate reaction would be that patrons with small incomes would be the ones affected by increased admissions.

The statisticians' answer to that is that increased admissions would affect only those persons willing and able to pay higher prices to attend performances at the peak attendance hours.

"Theatremen realize," the executive explained, "that every house has too many seats except at the peak hours and that the chief problem in operating a theatre is to fill the seats in off hours. That's why we have 'early bird' and 'bargain matinee' prices. Anyone who is willing to attend a theatre during the off hours can see the same show at a much lower price than if he attends during the peak hours."

Also, he continued, those of low incomes are required to pay more under the present system of increasing admissions than they would if peak hour prices could be raised to 45 cents without tax. His conclusion on this phase was the same as that brought out by the HERALD study:

"Except in the larger cities the price level has remained at 40 cents for first-run houses although many exhibitors in effect have adopted increases by eliminating socalled 'early bird' and bargain matinee rates and by abolishing lower prices for balcony seats."

The company concedes, the executive said, that it is not being altruistic in urging elimination of the admission levy, what with its own circuit of theatres.

"It is for a purpose, naturally," he continued, "but, at the same time, it would be beneficial to the entire motion picture industry and to the Government. Someone has to start the ball rolling and we've decided to do it."

Additional Reports Uphold Results of Admission Study

Evidence supporting the MOTION PICTURE HERALD'S recent inquiry that showed the early Fall trend toward higher admission prices failed to materialize on a nationwide scale was contained this week in additional reports from scattered areas.

In a few sections prices were advanced, in many others there was no change, and in still others reductions were placed into effect.

On the increasing side were the Indiana and Illinois Theatres in Elkhart, Ind.; the Lincoln and Jefferson in Goshen, Ind.; the major houses in Detroit; and five houses in Buffalo. At Cleveland, Dave Schumann announced he would advance prices five cents for the showing of "Broadway Melody" and that if there was no unfavorable reaction the higher scale would be maintained.

After several months of a 60 cent top at Fox's Wisconsin and Palace in Milwaukee, admissions were dropped to 50 cents; a check with Cincinnati exhibitors showed they believe any increases would slow up business; in Ontario, the trend was reported as being toward lower prices, and in the Birmingham territory there was no indication of any changes.

Higher admissions were planned in Connecticut but no agreement was reached by theatres on the elimination of bargain nights and the matter was delayed until the present business slump set in and caused complete abandonment of the plan.

At Oklahoma City, exhibitors reported drops in grosses and revealed that they do not look forward to an upturn until after January 1st.

NEW SOUTH AFRICAN COMBINATION TO FIGHT SCHLESINGER CONTROL

Agent of Exhibitors and Financiers Seeks Product and Equipment in America to Oppose Monopoly; First Contract Signed

Cloaked in secrecy, the activities of a new South African project, ostensibly started to break down the monopoly held by the Schlesinger interests, came into the public eye for the first time this week when a representative of the new company, Phillip S. Pohl, concluded the first contract, with Grand National, for product, in an attempt to buy large blocks of American films away from the Schlesingers.

Mr. Pohl has been in conversation with practically all the large companies but the results have not been made known. He has been arranging for the purchase of theatre equipment, on which the Schlesingers also hold a monopoly in South Africa, and added that he has been gathering general information on circuit operation with a view to competing with the Schlesingers.

The new combination is reported to have the backing of South African exhibition, financial and other interests.

Mr. Pohl was reluctant about discussing details of the plans of his organization, Associated Films Company (Pty), Ltd., but he did declare: "It's hailed as the most constructive move in South African motion picture theatre history in view of the tight situation as regards distribution which has heretofore prevailed." Both American distributors and equipment manufacturers have been aware of the extent of the monopoly for years.

Within a year, he predicted, the new company will be in full operation with a circuit of first-run houses. Of course, he added, the group is now operating—he declined to disclose the number of theatres now supporting the movement. The organization was described as "a combined group of independent theatre owners with strong financial backing." He explained that he preferred not to mention the source of the "strong financial backing."

Should Associated Films succeed in garnering a share of Africa's amusement trade it will be the first organization on record to be considered a serious competitor of the Schlesinger combine.

Earlier Attempts Failed

The situation in the Schlesinger dominated amusement field was detailed in an article in MOTION PICTURE HERALD as far back as December 22, 1934, and up until recent weeks there had been no changes, with the exception that Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer constructed a theatre in Durban and acquired one at Johannesburg.

The HERALD article thus summarized earlier attempts to invade the field:

"Strong protests have been made by various groups against a single combine ruling show business in South Africa, and several theatrical enterprises have made bids to obtain a share of the country's amusement trade in an effort to break down the African Theatres trust—controlled, as is practically everything in the territory's entertainment world, by the Schlesinger interests. These efforts were doomed to failure, however, due to lack of sufficient capital, to poor organization and because, in most instances, the would-be oppositionists, owning few if any theatres, were unable to get adequate product."

Mr. Pohl said organizations similar to his had met with no degree of success, but he attributed their failure to the fact that "they never got started in their operations." His group already is functioning, he added.

Cites Case of Kinemas, Ltd.

The HERALD's article, written by H. Hanson, a special correspondent, explained that the only concern that seriously threatened the Schlesinger combine was Kinemas, Ltd.

"This company," Mr. Hanson wrote, "built several cinemas of a modern type. Theatres run by African (Schlesinger) Theatres are of mediocre construction and poorly operated. Kinemas, Ltd., negotiated contracts with several overseas producers and their prospects looked good.

"Faced with a dangerous opposition, the Schlesinger Trust began to act in an attempt to outwit a concern which not only was giving the public good value for its money, but was gaining the confidence of every patron as well.

"What was done is well known to those in the business. The news spread quickly that arrangements had been completed for a merger of the two concerns, under the title of African Consolidated Theatres, Ltd. Astute business men had their opinions regarding this amalgamation, but it was an established fact, and Kinemas, Ltd., became only a name, although its eight per cent preference shares are still quoted on the Cape Town Stock Exchange at a low figure.

"Then Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer came into the market with a film renting business under C. J. Sonin as managing director. Steady progress has been made since its entrance into the picture and the class of pictures imported to the country has shown an improvement all around. A contract was signed between MGM and I. W. Schlesinger—as Union Theatres (Rty), Ltd,. to screen MGM product at certain cinemas 'taken over' by Union Theatres. That Union Theatres was owned by Schlesinger was a known fact."

The article also told how MGM built the Metro theatre in Johannesburg and how the African Consolidated Theatres retaliated by erecting the Coliseum in the same city.

"Fine," Says MGM Executive

David Blum, foreign distribution executive for MGM, described the present South African situation as "fine for us." He explained that in addition to the Johannesburg house, MGM now has one in Durban and is contemplating construction of others.

Under MGM's present operating plan, films are sold through its own office in Johannesburg "just as we sell them to exhibitors in the United States," Mr. Blum said. He said that the company's product is shown in Schlesinger houses. He added: "And we really sell them."

Twentieth Century-Fox has adopted a similar policy, although, at present, it has no plans for construction of houses. It plans to open offices in Johannesburg and sell its product through its own office directly to exhibitors.

With the exception of Universal, other companies' foreign department executives were reticent about discussing conditions in South Africa. Thomas Mulrooney, of United Artists' foreign department, said the company had not sold any product to Mr. Pohl's organization, adding: "Our position hasn't changed any since Mr. Kelly (Arthur Kelly, vice-president) gave out a statement."

The statement made by Mr. Kelly early in November was to the effect that negotiations were under way with Stuart Doyle, Australian film executive, for operation by Mr. Doyle of a group of United Artists theatres in Africa.

Sam Morris, of Warner Brothers' foreign department, said: "We have been distributing through Schlesinger," but was noncommittal regarding the 1937-38 product.

John Hicks, Jr., of Paramount, said his company is selling to Schlesinger and that the contract does not expire until "about the middle of next year."

Universal, RKO and Columbia all have distributed their product in Africa in former years through the Schlesinger organization, but none has completed a deal for the current season's product.

At Universal, it was announced that the company is waiting to see how its product shapes up before starting negotiations. At Columbia no one in the foreign department would discuss the question, and at RKO all queries were referred to Phil Reisman, foreign manager, now on the coast.

Mr. Pohl, after he completes his stay in United States, plans to visit England where, he said, he will contact all producers.

United States Government statistics place the number of theatres in South Africa at about 300, of which the Schlesinger interests control a large majority.

THIRD STUDIO GIVES TELEVISION BROADCAST

Third of the British studios to be televized, elder brother of Denham and Pinewood, the Associated British lot went on the air Tuesday for a five-day television broadcast.

The broadcast is very much to pattern, taking the viewers onto the stages, into the dressing rooms, and to the casting department. Elsa Lanchester, Sally Gray, Diana Churchill, Otto Kruger, Paul Stein and Herbert Brenon will be "starred."

Australian Union Threatens Boycott

Threats to boycott theatres which employ non-union labor have been made in Adelaide, Australia, by the Theatrical Employees Association, according to a dispatch from Sydney. The union declares it will seek a public boycott unless an amicable settlement is reached. It claims some suburban theatres are using non-union men at wages far below the standard.

"Tobacco Road" Ban Upheld

Federal Judge Wayne G. Borah ruled last week that the city of New Orleans was within its rights in refusing a permit for the play "Tobacco Road." Judge Borah denied an injunction sought by the producers to restrain the city from interfering with the presentation at the St. Charles theatre there. The permit was refused on the ground that the play was "obscene."

DUTCH PLAN A FAIR TO IMPROVE RECEIPTS

Attendance Holds Up but 20 Per Cent Admission Tax Tends to Prevent Exhibition Profit

by PHILIP de SCHAAP
in Amsterdam

The success of the international film exhibitions at the Venice Biennial Exposition has prompted Dutch personalities to work out plans for a yearly international show in Scheveningen, well known seaside place in Holland, primarily to increase Scheveningen's popularity.

In Venice the films are shown under the patronage of the Internationale Filmkammer, the semi-fascistic European institution of which Holland is not a member. Besires, the Italian ministry of propaganda has a great interest in the yearly Venice exhibition.

However, in spite of existing difficulties, film exhibitions in Scheveningen also would draw visitors. It would not be possible to screen pictures in the open air, as in Venice, but the biggest difficulties concern the Dutch governmental censors. The popularity of the Biennial rests in the fact that the audiences get pictures screened in the original version without deletions or superimposed titles. The Dutch film law specifically prohibits the screening in public of pictures which have not been approved with Dutch titles.

RKO Radio was the only American company that won three awards in this year's Venice Biennial. The first was given to the Herbert Wilcox production, "Victoria the Great," starring Anna Neagle and Anton Walbrook. Another award was given to "Winterset" for best photography, and Walt Disney's short subjects won a prize as the best colored animated cartoons.

Taxes to Reduce Thalberg Estate

More complete details of the will of Irving G. Thalberg indicate that while the total value of the estate was set at $4,469,013 in an inventory filed in probate court in Los Angeles last week, the distributable total would shrink to $2,244,000 when inheritance, income and estate taxes and probate costs are deducted.

Assets were shown to consist largely of stocks and bonds, and some real estate. Stocks were valued at about $2,300,000, half of which was represented in shares in a partnership formed between Mr. Thalberg, Louis B. Mayer and J. R. Rubin for production of motion pictures. Bonds totaled $150,000, the largest item being $10,000 in securities of Loew's, Inc. The family home and other real estate interests were valued at $300,000.

Of the tax deductions, state and federal estate and inheritance taxes will take about $1,100,000, Income taxes $650,000, and about $475,000 for probate and miscellaneous costs.

FitzPatrick To Confer with MGM on Future Quota Films

James A. FitzPatrick this week returned from a four-month trip to England and the Continent where he completed eight quota pictures for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and will leave for Hollywood by boat next week to negotiate a contract with MGM for the production of 10 more quota films in England. He will contact Louis B. Mayer, vice-president in charge of production.

The eight films finished are "David Livingstone," "The Captain's Table," "Auld Lang Syne," "Last Rose of Summer," "Bells of St. Mary's," "Dream of Love," "Life of Chopin" and "Bizet, the Composer of Carmen."

Mr. FitzPatrick also completed four color short subjects with the British Grenadier Band. He said that he had spent 18 months all told in the making of these pictures. Since the first of the year he covered 60,000 miles. Mr. FitzPatrick said that he had completed arrangements with the French and Egyptian Governments to make an expedition through Morocco, Tunis, Algiers and Egypt for a series of six short subjects. He will make three to four in Britain.

CLAIMS DISALLOWED IN FINAL RKO REPORT

Special Master Holds That Three Petitions Attacking Plan Are Without Merit

In a final report on the RKO reorganization plan, George W. Alger, special master, this week held that three petitions attacking the plan are without legal merit. The report was filed with William Bondy, judge of the United States district court in New York.

The three petitions opposed the plan on the ground that it fails to make proper provision for holders of the old RKO class A stock. They were filed by Ernest W. Stirn of Milwaukee, holder of 1,234 shares of Class A; E. J. Hickey of Washington, D. C., and Iva MacPherson and an associated group of Boston shareholders.

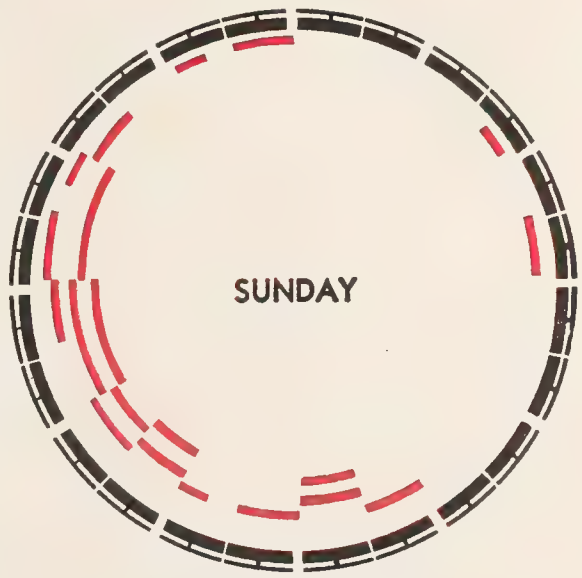
The petitioners did not surrender their A stock in exchange for common stock following the financial reorganization of RKO in 1931 and, now they contend that the Class A has a preferential position over the present RKO common. They claim special provision should be made for the Class A shares in the reorganization.

Mr. Alger held that Mr. Stirn advanced "purely technical and insubstantial" considerations and was not entitled to relief. The Hickey claim was dismissed by the special master as "not deserving of discussion." As to the MacPherson contention that the 1931 reorganization constituted an illegal transfer of stock, Mr. Alger ruled the charges were without merit and that no proof was advanced.

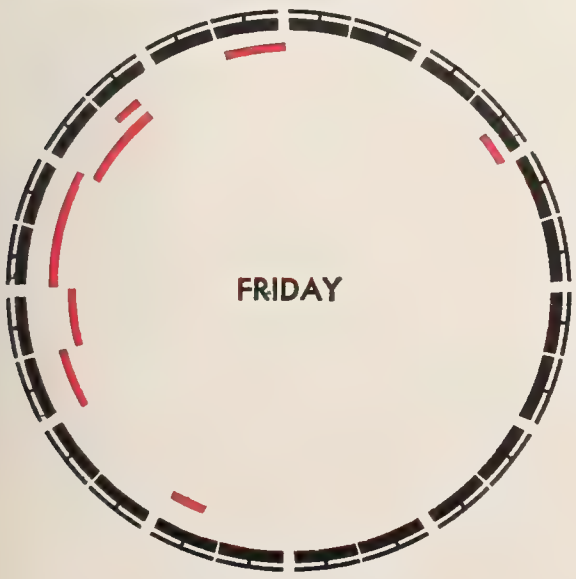
One of the major changes from Mr. Alger's tentative report, was a recommendation that RKO, at its option, be permitted to relax the plan's provisions for a three-year sinking fund for retirement of debentures and apply the funds to other purposes.

The final report approves the plan in all its basic principles.

Judge Bondy on Wednesday set December 21st for hearing on an order submitted by Atlas Corporation calling for confirmation of the Alger report.



Meanwhile discussions on a deal under which Atlas Corporation would purchase M. J. Meehan's 42 per cent of the outstanding preferred stock of Keith-Albee-Orpheum Corporation have been started and apparently will continue, according to word heard this week in Wall Street and Broadway.



To date the discussions have not reached a point where a prediction could be made, it was said. There is a wide difference, at present, it was indicated, between the bid and asked prices.

BRITISH INTERESTS WILL CONTROL U.A.

Financing Companies, Korda and Goldwyn Will Each Have Three of the Nine-Man Board

Directorial control of United Artists will be in the hands of British interests until after Samuel Goldwyn and Alexander Korda repay the $4,500,000 which they will borrow from two English companies to finance the purchase of the UA stock held by their present partners, Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks and Charles Chaplin, it was learned in London this week.

British interests will have a two-thirds control as the financing companies, Mr. Korda, who is head of London Films, and Mr. Goldwyn will each have three representatives on a nine-man board of directors.

The final details on the American side were to be settled at a stockholders meeting in Hollywood Wednesday but for the second consecutive week the session was postponed, this time indefinitely.

Although Mr. Korda, before leaving New York for Hollywood, denied a voting trusteeship would be set up, the plan, as disclosed in London, calls for one with Mr. Korda and Mr. Goldwyn as the sole trustees. However, the board of directors is to be empowered to veto or override financial and other specifically defined actions of the voting trustees.

Loan for Three Years

The $4,500,000 loan, which is to be made by Casenove, Akroyds & Company, and Greenwood & Company, will be made for a three-year period but the agreement will provide for a ten-year refunding plan in the event payment is not made by the end of the initial period.

In this respect the transaction is equivalent to a long term extension of the Goldwyn-Korda options on the stock, the only difference being that full control will be acquired by payment of the loan to the British interests rather than by direct purchase of the stock.

The stock acquired from Miss Pickford, Mr. Chaplin and Mr. Fairbanks will be pledged as collateral for the loan along with Mr. Goldwyn's and Mr. Korda's two-fifths interest and the free assets of the United Artists British and American corporations.

Mr. Chaplin is to receive $2,000,000 in cash but Miss Pickford and Mr. Fairbanks have consented to accept part payment in cash, $1,250,000 each, and the remainder in preferred stock, which is to be guaranteed first call for redemption. Then the British loan is to be repaid before any dividends are declared on the common stock.

After payment of the loan, Mr. Goldwyn and Mr. Korda will have full control over the corporation.

Selznick, Wanger and Laemmle

While attention centered on the directors meeting, the status of David O. Selznick, Walter Wanger, and Carl Laemmle, Jr., remained in doubt.

Interviewed in New York, Chicago and Hollywood, Mr. Selznick refused to confirm reports that negotiations were completed for his return to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer after production of two features for release through United Artists. He indicated in Chicago that the MGM report was correct but when he arrived in Hollywood he said: "Most of the deals we have been considering have appeared in print. While it is true that we have tentatively decided upon one of these deals, it is entirely possible that any one of the others may eventuate. Until contracts are signed, it would obviously be ridiculous to talk about any one deal that at the moment is a stronger likelihood than others."

Later Mr. Selznick issued a statement saying an announcement on his future plans would not be made for at least two weeks.

Although Mr. Korda announced before leaving New York for Hollywod that arrangements were made for the financing of Mr. Wanger's productions, Mr. Wanger later announced he knew nothing about the plans. Mr. Wanger left New York for Hollywood last Friday and was expected to go into conference with Mr. Korda and Mr. Goldwyn. Under his 10-year contract, Mr. Wanger is financed 50 per cent by the distributing company.

Mr. Laemmle, since he resigned from MGM without making a picture, has been reported as considering a deal with United Artists as an independent producer.

In New York, George J. Schaefer, United Artists vice-president and general manager of distribution, announced that the company's sales for the first 11 weeks of the 1937-38 season are 115 per cent over the previous season.

"Our played and earned business," he said, "shows an increase of 131 per cent over the first 11 weeks of 1936-37."

At Baltimore, the stockholders of United Artists Theatres Circuit, Inc., held their annual meeting and reelected the board of directors. Dennis F. O'Brien, vice-president, announced that earnings on the 600,000 shares of outstanding stock will approximate 35 cents a share. On the board are Mr. O'Brien, Bertram S. Nayfack, A. H. Frisch, Harry D. Buckley, Joseph H. Moskowitz, Willard V. King, William P. Philips, Joseph M. Schenck and Lee Shubert.

Dissolution of United Artists Continental Corporation has been effected in a certificate of dissolution issued by the secretary of state at Dover, Delaware. The company was dissolved by consent of all stockholders.

Monogram To Increase Output to 48 Pictures

Monogram's product for the 1938-39 season will be increased, probably by six features, W. Ray Johnston, president, announced when he arrived in Hollywood to confer on production. Most of the additional features, Mr. Johnston said, will be exploitation specials.

The company's total output, under the plan, will be 48 pictures, he continued, as this season's output numbers 42 of which 21 already have been completed.

Toye Studying Film Technic

Geoffrey Toye, managing director of the Royal Opera House, Covent Garden, London, arrived in Hollywood this week to study the latest technical developments of motion pictures. Mr. Toye, who expects to be in Hollywood for about three weeks, will make his headquarters at Universal City.

William C. Chambliss, Twentieth Century-Fox publicity writer, was admitted to the bar last week in the second judicial department of the state supreme court of New York.

Cinema Year Book Of Japan Published

Copies of the "Cinema Year Book of Japan" for 1936-37, published by the International Cinema Association of Japan to introduce to other countries "the prevailing situation in the cinema world" of Japan, reached New York recently. The book was edited by Tadasi Iizima, Akira Iwasaki and Kisao Uchida, described in a prefatory note as film critics.

The contents include 62 pages of illustrations from films produced in Japan, followed by an outline of the history of the Japanese cinema since 1896, reviews of the best pictures produced in the country, chapters on documentary films and "news pictures," and discussions on exportation of Japanese films, on Japanese theatres, on the outlook of the industry in Japan, and on motion picture enterprises, both government and private.

Also included in the 199-page volume are lists of the "best 10 imported pictures" released in 1936, actors and actresses, publications related to the industry, associations, and Japanese pictures listed in alphabetic order. Statistics on the number of theatres in Japan and explanations of regulations dealing with the industry complete the contents.

The year book was printed in Japan. Sanseido Company, Ltd., Tokyo, was the publisher.

Stan Laurel Forms Own Producing Unit

Stan Laurel has formed the Stan Laurel Corporation in Hollywood to produce pictures. Revising somewhat the four picture deal with Hal Roach signed recently, Mr. Laurel will now make two Laurel and Hardy features for Mr. Roach and two directly for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

In addition Mr. Laurel will produce a series of westerns starring Fred Scott, signed to a five-year contract to take effect upon the completion of his contract with Spectrum Pictures. Jed Buell, Spectrum producer, has been signed by the Laurel firm to produce the entire series of westerns starring Scott.

DeMille Will Preview "Buccaneer" in Cities

Cecil B. DeMille will preview his new Paramount production, "The Buccaneer," in large cities in various parts of the country before the film is nationally released January 26th, it was announced this week.

Mr. DeMille will leave Hollywood after his radio broadcast on January 3rd for Dallas, Texas, where the picture will be accorded its first public screening. The world premiere will be staged in New Orleans, January 7th. Following the premiere Mr. DeMille will attend one night screenings in Atlanta, Washington, New York, Boston, Chicago and Kansas City.

Critics Elect Nugent

Frank Nugent, film critic on the New York Times, was elected president of the New York Film Critics at a meeting Monday. He succeeds William Boehnel, of the World-Telegram.

---

Paul Radin has joined the advertising and publicity department of United Artists. He resigned last week as assistant advertising and publicity director of Republic Pictures.

INCREASED INCOME IS REPORTED BY COLUMBIA, UNITED ARTISTS, WARNERS

UA Sales 115% Above Previous Season; Columbia Estimated Net for Quarter $147,000; Tax Collections High

Motion picture income continues favorable, as reflected in theatre box office returns, in film rentals to distributors, and in United States Government admission tax receipts, all talk of a general business "recession" to the contrary.

United Artists Corporation reports that played and earned business for the first 11 weeks of 1937-38 shows an increase of 131 per cent over the same 11 weeks in 1936-37, and present sales are 115 per cent over sales for the previous season to date.

Columbia Pictures will show net earnings of $147,000 for the first 1937-38 quarter, against $129,000 in the first 1936-37 quarter.

U. S. Revenue Department reports federal tax collections on admissions in October reached the highest figure since December, 1936, with a total of $1,966,617, some $244,000 above the $1,722,468 collected in September.

Warner Brothers net earning for the year ended September 1st was $5,876,182, against $3,177,312 last year.

United Artists Theatres Circuit earned 35 cents a share on 600,000 shares.

Wall Street Journal says that, despite general conditions, theatre box office income "is running slightly ahead of a year ago."

John D. Clark, vice-president and general sales manager of Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation, returns to New York from four weeks in the field with word that while a general business recession has been 15 to 20 per cent in some cities, the effect has not been felt yet on theatre box office receipts.

Other recent signs indicating favorable motion picture income as previously reported include: Universal's billings for 13 weeks ended November 1st were up 17 per cent over the corresponding quarter in 1936; Paramount estimated earnings of $5,276,000 for 39 weeks ended October 2nd, compared with $2,255,224 in 1936; Twentieth Century-Fox reported $4,898,893 net income for 39 weeks ended September 25th, against $4,451,851 in 1936; trustees of RKO reported profits of $1,543,511 for 39 weeks ended October 2nd, compared with $1,316,922 for the corresponding period in the previous year; Pathe had a $276,486 profit for nine months ended October 1st, as against a $24,687 net in 1936. Paramount earned $1,958,000 in the third quarter, ended October 2nd, and 20th Century-Fox had earnings of $1,143,410 in the same period.

Disclosing that United Artists' played-and-earned business for the first 11 weeks of this season shows an increase of 131 per cent over the same 1936-37 quarter, and that sales are running 115 per cent over the previous year, George J. Schaefer, vice president and general manager asserted that, "We have every reason to expect that the pace of the company as to product and performance will be maintained."

Columbia's Estimates

"Columbia Pictures Corporation figures for the first quarter which ended September 30th last, are expected to be ready for distribution to the stockholders by the end of the month," said a statement issued from the home office last Friday.

"Net earnings for the period are estimated at approximately $147,000 after taxes," it was asserted. "After the deduction of preferred dividend requirements, these earnings will be equal to about 27 cents per share on the amount of common stock outstanding at this time, 349,468 shares. Last year, in the September quarter, earnings amounted to $129,000, after taxes, which, after preferred dividend requirements, amounted to 26 cents per share on the then outstanding common shares, 296,649.

"Record-breaking box-office receipts are anticipated" from Columbia's new "Awful Truth," it was said, "which should contribute substantially to Columbia's earnings during the present or second quarter of the fiscal year.

"In view of the present trend toward higher production costs, the company is concentrating efforts on increasing its gross volume of business. Current figures compare favorably with last year, and it is expected that further progress will be made in this direction," it was said.

U. S. Tax Collections

Federal admission tax collections in October reached the highest figure since December, 1936, with a total of $1,966,617, it was reported Monday by the Bureau of Internal Revenue at Washington.

The month's receipts were more than $244,000 above the September collections of $1,722,468 and $169,000 above the $1,797,279 collected in October of last year.

That the improvement was principally in box office admissions was indicated by the figures for the third New York (Broadway) district, which showed an increase of $162,000 over September, of which nearly $152,000 was in collections at the box office.

Broadway collections in October totaled $604,487 against $442,546 in September and $578,974 in October, 1936. Box office collections accounted for $559,145 in October against $407,698 in September and $537,411 in October of last year.

Other revenues from the third New York district included $2,121 from free or reduced rate admissions against $546 in September; $7,017 from tickets sold by brokers against $2,582; $1,401 from tickets sold by proprietors in excess of established prices against $555; nothing from permanent use or lease of boxes and seats against $210; and $34,803 from admissions to roof gardens and carbarets against $30,953.

For the ten months ended with October, it was disclosed, total admission tax collections ran approximately $2,216,000 ahead of the corresponding period last year, aggregating $16,441,430 against $14,657,223.

Warners' Net

Warner Brothers, First National, Vitagraph and the affiliated Warner production, distribution, exhibition, music and other subsidiaries reported Wednesday that the operating profit for the year ended August 31st, 1937, after provisions for federal income taxes (including surtax of $310,000 on undistributed profits) and after deducting all other charges, was $5,876,182. The operating profit for the preceding fiscal year ending August 29, 1936, which was not subject to the federal surtax on undistributed profits, amounted to $3,177,312.

In the opinion of counsel, Warner Bros.

UMPTO Proposes "Peace Program" For Exhibitors, Distributors

A six point "permanent peace" program for distributors and exhibitors was advanced this week by the United Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Eastern Pennsylvania, Southern New Jersey and Delaware.

The program calls for:

1. Abolition of 40 per cent pictures.
2. Fewer pictures to be sold on a percentage basis.
3. Increased autonomy for exchange managers.
4. Protection and maintenance of established runs.
5. Adjustment of oversold situations.
6. Fair percentage deals for last runs.

On the first point, UMPTO claimed that "of the 500 or 600 pictures released annually not more than one or two justify a 40 per cent gross."

The exhibitors' resentment against percentage pictures, UMPTO continued, is directed primarily against the "interference" with the exhibitors' business.

Of "oversold situations," UMPTO stated: "So long as distributors continue to sell 'numbers' instead of pictures adjustments in oversold spots will be a necessary prerequisite to peaceful relations in the industry. Every exhibitor is entitled to a legitimate profit on his contract."

The organization argued for a greater voice in company sales policies for branch managers on the ground that the men in the field know their customers and their problems better than home office executives.

Allied Theatre Owners Association of Texas, meeting in Dallas, adopted a resolution objecting to the clearance system being determined by one of the interested parties without consideration of the others involved.

COMPANIES' NET EARNINGS RISE

Pictures, Inc., the parent company, for the fiscal year ending August 28, 1937, is not liable for any federal surtax on more than $2,084,050 of its undistributed profits, which $2,084,050 is the amount of accumulated and unpaid dividends to and including June 1, 1937, on the preferred stock outstanding.

In addition to the operating profit there has been a net credit to deficit account in the amount of $404,920 and capital surplus has been increased by $269,812.

The management on Wednesday said that it "cannot at this time give an accurate estimate of the earnings for the current quarter ending November 27, 1937, but believes the earnings will be in excess of $1,500,000 after all charges other than the surtax on undistributed profits."

Company also reported Wednesday that total assets as of August 28, 1937, were $177,544,606, including current and working assets of $28,213,963, against current liabilities of $23,099.815.

The operating profit for the year just ended is equivalent to about $1.48 on the common, after deducting the shares held in the treasury and after providing for dividends on the preferred stock. Dividends on the preferred stock have been in arrears since March, 1932.

Earnings for the year ended August 29, 1936, total $3,177,312, which compared with earnings of $674,158 for the fiscal year ended Aug. 31, 1935.

For the 26 weeks ended February 27, 1937, operating profit was listed at $4,040,388, which compared to $1,976,245 for the same period the previous year. The earnings increased to $5,561,032 for 39 weeks as compared to $2,554,772 for the corresponding 1936 period. This did not include federal surtaxes on undistributed earnings.

On December 13, stockholders will hold an annual meeting in Wilmington at which time six directors, Harry M., Jack L. and Albert Warner, Joseph Bernhard, Robert W. Perkins and Waddill Catchings are scheduled to be re-elected. Officers will be elected the following day in New York. No changes in the executive setup are contemplated.

United Artists Theatres Circuit

Announcement that United Artists Theatres Circuit, Inc., would earn some 35 cents a share on 600,000 common shares outstanding, for the year ended September 1st, came on Monday at the annual stockholders meeting at Baltimore, from Dennis F. O'Brien, motion picture attorney and vice president of the corporation. No earnings were made on the stock last year. The full financial report will be ready next week, it was said.

Costs and Rentals

Discussing the widely discussed motion picture topic of high production costs, the Wall Street Journal this week delved at length into current film economics, saying that general expense is up about 30 per cent, and that this increased cost "must" be met by "higher rentals and increased attendance or higher box office rates."

"The motion picture industry," it was said, "currently is facing two important problems—a proposed change in the British quota laws and a sharp rise in the cost of film production in Hollywood.

"Of these two factors the British quota situation is the least likely to have any important effect upon profits, since the present outlook indicates it probably will be adjusted without undue hardship upon American producers.

"The rise in costs, however, is of far more significance since it comes at a time when the upswing in box office income, counted on to meet the higher film costs, may be halted by a business recession. The actual increase in costs is somewhat difficult to estimate because the making of a motion picture cannot be put on the same statistical basis as steel production.

"Cost of film production has risen partly due to higher wages to labor on the film stages, higher star salaries, and higher incidentals of all sorts. The increase in this general expense probably runs around 30 per cent," the Wall Street Journal said, continuing:

Expenditures Up

"In addition to this, there has been a sharp increase in the actual expenditure per film, due to increasing production budgets rather than to uncontrollable costs. To illustrate this, most of the larger film companies in the past year have made more $1,000,000 films than ever before. Whereas a year or more ago average film cost, ran around $500,000 to $700,000 for 'special' production, now they are running around $1,000,000, some as high as $1,500,000, with a few running over this. Obviously, higher rentals must be charged and this must come from increased attendance or higher box office rates.

"While box office income is running slightly ahead of a year ago, studios already are preparing for the possibility of a drop in revenues and are cutting budgets in Hollywood wherever possible. This is being done by reducing the number of stars in a picture, and cutting down on the expenditures on sets, crowd scenes and in other ways. Since motion picture attendance normally holds up from four to six months after a business recession sets in, the industry hopes to be able to get out of their high cost films and into lower cost production before any real decline in box office receipts sets in. The problem of Hollywood costs, however, is the oldest and most difficult of any that the industry has to face," said the Journal.

Increase in Color

"There would appear to be some danger that the industry is facing a situation similar to the one that arose about ten years ago when an epidemic of $1,000,000 pictures swamped income for a while. Another factor that may have unsettling effects is the probable increase in the use of color next season with nearly all of the leading producers planning three or four color features each.

"If the public demand should make it necessary to switch the greater part of production into color, another sharp increase in costs will face the producers," it was predicted.

"Tops in high cost films lately seems to have been reached by Loew's newly released Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer feature 'Conquest' starring Greta Garbo and Charles Boyer.

"In an endeavor to assure favor at the box office, expense for stories, stars and production has not been spared but, at the moment, there appears to be some danger that the industry has gone a little too far. Box office returns over the next few months will tell the story.

The British Quota

"The proposed change in the British quota laws obviously will not have a paralyzing effect upon this part of our markets. Nevertheless the industry is faced with a constant fight against quotas all over the world. The purpose of quotas and restrictions, of course, is to build up production in the various nations. Hollywood's greatest asset however is the fact that it still produces the films that the public abroad as well as here wants to see, and Hollywood with its accumulation of film capital still is apparently the only place where films can be made that will be successful in world markets. England has tried without success for ten years, under its quota laws, to build its own film industry.

"The primary difficulty seems to be that with star salaries where they are and other costs, at least $500,000 and now often $1,000,000 must be spent on a film to make it acceptable to the American market. No other nation can afford to spend these sums and unless they can produce pictures that will meet the American demand, they cannot get their costs back from the other world markets. Competition for stars from the various nations endeavoring to build up national production simply tends to raise costs and defeats its purpose. So far there appears to be no serious menace to Hollywood from foreign film production.

Proposed Changes

"The situation abroad is not giving the American producers serious concern. The proposal is that a new quota be established requiring that from 22% to 25% of film footage shown in Great Britain must be of British make after April 1, 1939. The quota would rise to 30% of footage by 1946. There is also a proposal that a minimum cost of £15,000 pounds be placed on so called "quota" pictures made in Great Britain of which half must be paid for British labor. The present labor quota is 20%.

"American producers have been operating under the quota either by buying footage as cheaply as possible in England or else by making 'quota pictures' at very low cost which frequently were so bad that they were not even shown. Money spent on quota films in some cases has been a dead loss to United States producers and distributors. It is probable that some effort will be made by American producers to work out a type of film production in England that actually can be used and shown.

"Export business is now of primary importance to the American producer. Although the proportion differs considerably among the various companies, about 40% of total film rentals come from the foreign market, not including Canada. Of this 40% about two-thirds comes from Britain and its colonies," said the Journal.

ERPI to Handle W.E. Cable Sales

Western Electric's cable sales and services will be taken over by Electrical Research Products, Inc., to replace the theatre equipment sales and servicing activities which it is relinquishing, according to Whitford Drake, ERPI president, who arrived on the Berengaria Tuesday after a six weeks business trip through Europe.

Mr. Drake said that so far as he knows, he and other ranking ERPI executives will continue with the company after January 1st, the date on which it officially ends its theatre equipment activities.

During his absence, Mr. Drake said, he was not in touch with his office and therefore was not familiar with the arrangements which have been made for the sale December 1, of ERPI's servicing and installation business to a Wall Street group. L. W. Conrow will head the new company. Tripp and Engels are at the head of the financing.

U.S.-BRITISH TRADE TALKS TO BRING FURTHER PROTESTS AGAINST QUOTA

Relaxation of Quota Restrictions Reported One of Concessions Sought in Negotiation of Reciprocal Treaty

Relaxation of British film quota regulations, especially of provisions of the proposed new Films Bill now being discussed in Parliament, was seen in Washington this week as one of the concessions to be sought of England by the State Department in negotiation of a reciprocal trade agreement with the United Kingdom.

Long anticipated, announcement of the intention to undertake such an agreement was issued last week by Cordell Hull, Secretary of State, who at the same time invited American exporters and importers to forward to the committee for reciprocity information, by December 16th, suggestions as to commodities on which this country could grant concessions to England or ask concessions from that country.

Indications from producer-distributor representatives charged with observing the course of the proposed new British quota provisions are that although the industry already has made strong representations to the State Department as to its viewpoint concerning the Films Act, an even more determined stand may be expected once the negotiation of a trade treaty between the two nations actually is undertaken.

Opposes Quota in Entirety

The organized industry holds and has informed the State Department that it does not recognize any justification for a British film quota act and that it stands opposed to any quota law at all. The American industry contends that films, as well as other products, should find their natural market on the basis of their own worth, free of any such limitations and barriers as are imposed by quota laws.

The industry has pointed to the unhampered importation here of Scotch whiskey, woolens and other major articles of British trade sold in the United States, none of which is restricted as to volume by arbitrary quota limitations, but which find a large market here in competition with articles of domestic origin.

Washington discussion of the U. S.-British trade treaty recalled the recent visit of Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, to President Roosevelt at his Hyde Park, N. Y., residence, during which, Mr. Hays told newspapermen later, the industry's attitude toward both the Anglo-American trade treaty and the proposed British Films Act were submitted to the chief executive.

Considered Most Important

Producer-distributor interests in the American film industry pin strong hope on provisions being incorporated in the new treaty to eliminate any onerous features which may remain in the Films Act in its final form. The quota act, purely national law in Britain, could be superseded or invalidated by whatever provisions affecting films were included in a trade treaty between the United States and England, as international treaties take precedence over national law.

The British agreement is considered the most important of all the reciprocal trade pacts which the State Department has undertaken under President Roosevelt's reciprocal trade policy which currently is under sharp attack in Congress.

Exports to the United Kingdom last year had a value of $440,000,000, nearly twice the volume of our imports from that country, and included, according to figures compiled in Washington, 63,247,000 linear feet of motion picture film valued at $1,496,000 and motion picture projectors, sound equipment and other projection apparatus valued at $924,000. In 1929, just prior to the depression we exported to England 61,190,000 feet of film valued at $2,052,000 and projectors and apparatus to the value of $4,495,000.

No announcement has been made as yet as to the commodities which will be the subject of trading discussions. A list of such commodities will be issued, probably some time next month when dates are announced for hearings before the committee for reciprocity information regarding products on which this government can grant concessions. Normally, there is no discussion at such hearings of products on which it is desired this country shall ask for better treatment.

Futter Going Ahead On "Chaplin" Picture

Fred Futter, independent producer and brother of Walter Futter, said in Hollywood recently that he intends to proceed with production of a picture which would show Charles Chaplin in some of his early short subjects, despite implied litigation by the Charles Chaplin interests. Mr. Futter has acquired four short subjects featuring the comedian made in 1914-15, and intends to build a comedy, in form of a narration from them. He said that in purchasing the short subjects he acquired all rights, including story with them.

Mr. Futter's plan is to use part of the footage, tie them in with a continuity, and use narration for the silent scenes. He intends, with the story, to use Minna Durfee and Chester Conklin and other old time players.

Sommerer Rejoins RCA For Photophone Duties

Twentieth Century-Fox Dividend

A cash dividend of 37½ cents a share for the fourth quarter of 1937 on the outstanding shares of preferred stock of Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation has been declared and will be payable December 15, 1937, to stockholders of record at the close of business December 3, 1937. Cash dividend of $1 has been declared on the outstanding shares of the corporation's common stock and also is payable December 15, 1937 to stockholders of record December 3, 1937.

RKO Plans to Produce in France

by PIERRE AUTRE
in Paris

RKO Radio will produce its own motion pictures here for the French market, the decision following a long period of negotiations. RKO's office in Paris for the distribution of American films will not be affected by the move.

The first picture to be made under the new arrangement will be "Le Prisonnier du Giel" (Prisoner of the Skies), which will be directed by Rene Sti, who may be placed in charge of RKO production here. The company also started distribution here of French films with "Le Marie de la Reine" (Queen's Husband).

Considerable resentment has been aroused in newspapers here over the banning by Italy of the French prize winning "La Grande Illusion," which was awarded one of the leading prizes in the recent Venice Awards Festival by an international jury which included several Italians.

The film depicts the life of French officers as German prisoners during the war, and it is felt in many quarters that the ban on the film was at the instigation of Germany.

The French board of censors has banned "The Life of Emile Zola" and "The Road Back," the first because the Dreyfuss Case, about which the Warner Brothers film revolved, has been in the past a source of trouble in France. No explanation was given for the ban on the Universal film, and the censor board will review the film again.

The new Universal European headquarters, under the management of George Canty, formerly located in Berlin, and now in Paris, has started encouragingly. Andre Peres has retained his post in French and North African territories. Ernest Koenig, former Warner and Twentieth Century-Fox French manager, has joined Universal as Latin European manager; Jean Birkhahn is heading Central and Eastern Europe, and new exchanges are to be opened in Oslo, Copenhagen and Zurich.

French Honor Luce

Henry R. Luce, president of Time, Inc., was presented with the order of the French Legion of Honor at the French Embassy in Washington last week. The award was conferred by the French Government for Mr. Luce's achievements as publisher of Time, Life, Fortune and other periodicals. Witnessing the ceremony were Mrs. Luce, Joseph P. Kennedy, chairman of the Maritime Commission, and Senators La Follette and Lodge.

Later in the week, Mr. Luce was chosen to receive the Montclair Yale bowl as a graduate "who has made his 'Y' in life," at the annual Yale barn party to be held in Montclair, N. J., on December 4th.

MOVES IN INDIANA AND DALLAS PRODUCT SUITS

Plaintiff at Gary Files Brief; Hoblitzelle Confers on Asking Writ Against Decree

The Gary Theatre Company's United States district court battle to force Paramount to deliver 10 features reputedly scheduled for the 1936-37 season but not delivered, entered the final stages in Indianapolis this week when the plaintiff filed a brief contending the defendant's 1936-37 "catalogue" should be considered sufficient identification of subject matter of its exhibitor contracts.

The brief and Paramount's affidavits stating that its "catalogue" and representations made by its salesmen should not be considered binding upon the company, will be studied by Robert C. Baltzell, judge, before he renders a decision on the theatre company's motion for a mandatory injunction.

In another Gary, Ind., suit involving distributors and Gary Theatre Company, also being tried in Indianapolis, Judge Robert C. Baltzell, in U. S. district court, on Tuesday gave the Gary company five days to present an analysis of allegations in its complaint against large distributors to enjoin clearances given Balaban and Katz Circuit of Chicago. Oral arguments were heard Tuesday.

A decision on whether to request a writ to suspend enforcement of a federal court decree was expected to be reached this week after Karl Hoblitzelle, head of the Interstate Circuit, confers in New York with George Wright, Dallas attorney, and Thomas D. Thacher, of the law firm of Simpson, Thacher & Bartlett, who has been retained to appeal to the supreme court from the Dallas decision. The court held that large distributors conspired with the Interstate circuit in entering into contracts that tended to regulate admissions in subsequent-run houses. The defendants have until December 13th to file their appeal.

In its brief, the Gary Theatres Company said:

"Unless the catalogue be given effectiveness as identifying the subject matter of the contract, no one can stay what, if anything, was covered by the contract.

"To say that plaintiffs and other exhibitors in the United States, after studying catalogues and deciding upon what product to exhibit and after extensive negotiations entering into a complicated written contract, have done nothing more than to give the producers the option if they see fit to sell these exhibitors pictures, is to do violence to all reason. Paramount's own contract 'guarantees' these pictures."

The brief answered Paramount's claim that it was impossible to deliver the pictures because they were in the process of editing and cutting, by stating that any producer can continue editing and cutting activities indefinitely.

"Paramount admittedly intended to give us these pictures by a certain date," the document continued. "If plaintiffs are willing to accept them at a later date, Paramount can not take advantage of its own delay and refuse delivery."

The Gary company also has a suit pending to enjoin clearances imposed by large producers on behalf of Balaban & Katz, of Chicago. A hearing on this action, set for Monday, was postponed.

At Newark, New Jersey, federal authorities investigated the complaint of the Mosque theatre that it was unable to obtain product from distributing companies. A complete report of the case was forwarded to United States Attorney General Cummings, with whom a decision rests as to whether the government will take any action.

Jessel, Gardner Head MGM Radio Program

George Jessel and Ed Gardner are now in charge of MGM's Maxwell House radio program, succeeding Bill Bacher, who quit the show Friday after the third broadcast in the series. Mr. Jessel will act as production counsel on the radio show for a limited time and eventually may switch entirely to MGM from his Sunday program over the Mutual system. Frank Whitbeck, MGM studio publicity head, now is acting as "news reporter" on the Thursday night program.

Myrna Loy headed the list of stars and Allan Jones was again master of ceremonies in the fourth program of the series, "Good News of 1938," Thursday. Scenes from "Thoroughbreds Don't Cry" were enacted.

Meanwhile Herman Starr, in charge of radio shows for Warner Brothers, returned to New York from the coast. While in Hollywood he completed plans for the new Lucky Strike air show. Paul Monroe, who has been producing the Kate Smith program, arrived on the coast this week to work on the Warner-Lucky Strike program which will have Arch Obler and Frank Gill as writers.

John Cooper Honored

Colonel John A. Cooper, president of the Motion Picture Distributors of Canada, was honored last week on the occasion fo the 40th anniversary of the Canadian Club of Toronto, of which he was the first president. He was made an honorary life member.

Gourdeau in New York

E. R. Gourdeau, managing director of Astra Films, Ltd., London, arrived in New York last week for an indefinite stay. Mr. Gourdeau will negotiate purchase of product for his company of United Kingdom and Continental rights. He is making his headquarters at J. H. Hoffberg Co., Inc.

The quarterly meeting of the board of directors of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America has been tentatively set for December 8th.

Editor Colon of Teatro al Dia Dies

Pablo Colon, editor of Teatro Al Dia, Spanish export journal published by the Quigley Publishing Company, died at the Westchester Square Hospital in New York, Tuesday night, from complications following an appendectomy. He was 37 years old.

Born in Coamo, Puerto Rico, Mr. Colon had come to the United States 20 years ago and had remained in this country ever since, continuously associated with the export operations of publications and advertising agencies in New York. He was an executive in the media department of the New York office of Lord and Thomas, advertising agency, at the time of his death.

Teatro al Dia being a quarterly publication, Mr. Colon retained his position with Lord and Thomas, with whom he has been associated the past 12 years, upon being appointed editor of that new member of the Quigley group of motion picture journals early in 1936. The first issue was published in July of that year under his editorship.

In Puerto Rico, Mr. Colon's family has long been identified with the sugar industry, and a sister is mayoress of a municipality near the city of his birth. The remains, according to plans immediately following his death, will be sent there for burial beside his mother.

In addition to his relatives in Puerto Rico, Mr. Colon is survived by his widow and three children—Adele, 12 years old; Paul, 10 and Emile, 15 months.

Jules Levy Returns From Six Weeks' Trip

Jules Levy, general sales manager for RKO Radio Pictures, returned this week to the home office from a six-week trip which was divided between regional meetings, negotiations for circuit deals and an inspection of coming pictures at RKO's Gower Street studio.

Negotiations were completed to play the current season's RKO Radio product on the Minnesota Amusement Company's circuit, the Harry David Publix Circuit, Balaban and Katz and the Interstate Circuit of Texas.

He next concentrated on the regional meeting of western managers and district managers at San Francisco, and that of the midwestern managers and district managers at Chicago.

Mr. Levy spent some time at the RKO Radio studio watching work on half a dozen pictures, and attended the Hollywood premiere at the Four Star Theatre of "Victoria the Great."

Columbia Adds Sound Channels

Columbia Pictures has added three ultra-violet recording channels and another portable sound truck to its sound recording facilities in Hollywood in accordance with a contract signed last week with RCA Photophone. The original installation of RCA Photophone sound recording facilities in the Columbia studio about a year ago included three ultra-violet sound channels and two portable sound trucks.

Doldrums

Production continues in the doldrums. Only eight new films were started in the week. Following the previous week's blizzard of completed pictures, but three were finished as of November 19th.

Two started at Warners. Mervyn LeRoy's last production for the company, "Food for Scandal," will present Carole Lombard, Fernand Gravet, Marcia Ralston, Isabel Jeans, Marie Wilson and Ralph Bellamy. Wayne Morris and Priscilla Lane are the leads in "Everybody Was Very Nice," which Stanley Logan is directing.

Columbia also started two pictures. In "Campus Mystery," being directed by Lambert Hillyer, are Scott Colton, Mary Russell, Arthur Loft and J. Farrell MacDonald. The cast of "You Can't Win" is headed by Don Terry, Robert Page and Jacqueline Wells. C. C. Coleman, Jr., is the director.

With Scott Pembroke as director, Monogram started "Telephone Operators." It will present Grant Withers, Alice White, Judith Allen, Warren Hymer, Greta Granstead, William Haade, Dorothy Vaughn and Cornelius Keefe.

At Paramount, "College Swing," an episode in the yearly series of collegiate films, went before the cameras. Among those who will be seen are George Burns, Gracie Allen, Martha Raye, Bob Burns, Bob Hope, Betty Grable, Charles Butterworth, Ben Blue, Edward Everett Horton, Florence George, John Payne, Jackie Coogan, Nell Kelly, Slate Brothers and St. Brendan's Boys Choir. Raoul Walsh is directing.

Universal's contribution to the new work is "Mad About Music," which will star Deanna Durbin. The support lists Herbert Marshall, Arthur Treacher, Christian Rub, Marcie Mae Jones, Nana Bryant, Elizabeth Risdon and Martha O'Driscoll. Norman Taurog is the director.

Victory Pictures started "Lost Ranch," produced and directed by Sam Katzman. The cast includes Tom Tyler, Jeanne Martin, Marjorie Beebe, Roger William, Lafe McKee, Slim Whittaker and Forrest Taylor.

Comedy is the theme of the three finished pictures. Columbia's "Little Miss Roughneck" will present Edith Fellows, Leo Carillo, Jacqueline Wells, Scott Colton, Thurston Hall, Margaret Irving and Inex Polange. Aubrey Scotto directed.

"Mama Runs Wild," Universal, directed by Ralph Staub, will present Mary Boland, Ernest Truex, Max Terhune, Sammy McKim, William Henry, Lynn Roberts and Dorothy Page.

In RKO-Radio's "Everybody's Doing It" will be seen Preston Foster, Sally Eilers, Cecil Kellaway, William Brisbane, Guinn Williams, Paul Guilfoyle and Lorraine Krueger. Christy Cabanne directed.

Hole in Desert

Ten years ago even the Indians didn't want it. Today one would have to have at least $40,000,000 in cash if he wanted to buy only the physical improvements that adorn Palm Springs, desert beauty spot in the Coachella Valley. The motion picture transformed Palm Springs from a desolate waste, the only assets of which were scenic beauty and sunshiny climate. No other place on earth, save Hollywood, so powerfully attests the potency of moving pictures as a community builder.

Nobody seems to know exactly just who among the great of Hollywood was first to discover Palm Springs. But their names began to be mentioned in newspaper dispatches as vacationists at the resort. Columnists, fan magazine writers and radio commentators began to talk about it. Today, in this once desolate waste, there are more elaborate mansions and hotels, more swimming pools, per person, than there are any other place in the world. Not all the lavish homes belong to picture stars. Retired industrialists, capitalists and others from every part of the country have contributed to its upbuilding.

Many pictures have been made there, "Blonde Bombshell," "Palm Springs" and "The Last Outpost," to mention a few. Paramount has a unit down there now making "Her Jungle Love." The site chosen is one of the world's wonders. It's not a reproduction of or any other kind of man-made jungle. In Palm Canyon, a narrow ravine surrounded by barren towering mountains, there is a fourteen mile long oasis in which the company headed by Dorothy Lamour, Ray Milland, Lynn Overman and J. Carroll Naish is making a jungle picture in color.

Strangest of the many strange things to be found in the Canyon are 3,000 palm trees. Unlike any other species of palms to be found in California or within 1,000 miles of the Canyon, nobody knows how the trees came to grow there. Botanists have established the ages of some of the shaggy giants as over 2,000 years. Running down the center, fed by countless springs, is a sparkling brook.

Many legends have grown up about this Canyon, which is situated on an Indian Reservation and is considered a sacred spot by the aborigines. New things are being learned about it every day. George Archainbaud, who is directing the picture, made the discovery that the Canyon is a natural sound stage. The bane of outdoor picture making is sound interference. Archainbaud and his technical crew were surprised to note that sounds made on the top of the Canyon cliffs some 750 feet above the floor did not register on the microphones. Only when airplanes passed a certain spot did propeller noises descend to earth. The circumstance led him to attempt a unique experiment. He permitted Dorothy Lamour to sing two songs into the microphone and let the music be registered directly upon the film. Heretofore, either indoors or outdoors, the procedure has been to play and sing all music in an especially constructed studio and have the recorded music played-back while the vocalists or musicians go through the motions of playing or singing. Rushes of Miss Lamour's singing sequences proved 100 per cent perfect.

To prepare the spot for the acting company, Paramount had a construction crew of 100 men on location for two weeks. They will be there many days after the picture is finished, as a stipulation in the contract with the Indian Agency specifies that any thing changed must be returned to its natural state and that no traces of its having been used as a setting remain. The acting company and producing technicians, numbering 100, are scheduled to be busy in the Canyon for four weeks.

RHABDOLOGY AND DISNEY'S FEATURE

Had Walt Disney decided to draw "Snow White and The Seven Dwarfs," his first feature length production and in color, all by himself, he would have had a 230 year job on his hands. There is no authentic record that anyone has lived that long even in California's salubrious climate.

The production, which will run well over an hour, is made up of more than 250,000 separate drawings. As many as 570 artists have been working on it since 1934.

Counting all the preliminary sketches, figuring that each drawing was redrawn at least three or four times, it is estimated that at least 2,000,000 have been made for "Snow White."

The amount of film used totals 281 miles or 1,483,680 feet. All the animation paper used, each sheet placed end to end, would extend 556 miles. If it were possible to stand all the drawing pencils used one on top of the other, the peak of the slender spire would look down on Mt. Everest.

One hundred and fifty-eight young women, painting the figure on transparent celluloid sheets, used enough pigment to brighten up 22 five-room bungalows. You'll get an idea of how big a job this is if you try to paint one bungalow with an artist's fine-pointed camel hair brush.

Ultra Violet Recording

Being installed by John Aalbert, studio sound department chief, the largest RCA sound recording system in Hollywood will be in use at RKO-Radio shortly with completion of the current program of replacing existing equipment with the newly-developed "ultra violet" apparatus.

The system, which calls for installation of 19 complete channels, seven of which are in operation, is actually "new" from microphones on the sets, through amplifying and recording apparatus to the final projection equipment. In addition to the recently devised portable mixing panels, push-pull and lightweight inductor microphones, the channels make use of an invisible ultra-violet beam for recording sound waves on the film instead of the white light rays formerly employed.

Laboratory tests have demonstrated that white light cannot be focused as sharply on the film as a beam of mono-colored light.

CASEY, WARNER TESTIFY; IATSE INQUIRY ADJOURNS

William Bioff Tells California Committee Unrest in Union Is Caused by Communists

The California legislative committee investigating charges of "racketeering" in the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees adjourned this week without setting a date for resumption of the inquiry and after hearing Pat Casey, labor representative for the producers, Harry M. Warner and C. P. Cregan, union auditor. A bitter fight with Carey McWilliams, attorney for the IATSE "Progressives," secret intra-mural Alliance group which instigated the hearings, marked the closing moments.

Last week, after long argument on whether or not it was ethical for a member of the committee to ask William Bioff, personal representative of George Browne, if Chicago gangsters had been imported to Hollywood by the union, the committee heard Mr. Bioff testify that any unrest in the union was caused by communists within the ranks.

Asked his definition of communists by Assemblyman Frank Tenney, Mr. Bioff said they were persons who were unAmerican and then added choice profanity which he thought descriptive of them. The Alliance official said only 200 members were out of work at present and that if the locals were granted autonomy the producers might cancel closed shop agreements.

Casey Tells of Negotiations

Mr. Casey told of the IATSE negotiations for the craft unions and of the support given by the union to the Screen Actors' Guild. Resuming the stand the next day he testified he received $87,000 a year in salaries and fees and that no part of this was given to any labor union leader.

Mr. Warner testified he knew little of union contracts with studios but was satisfied with labor conditions under the IATSE. Mr. Cregan told the committee that four locals of the Alliance in Hollywood disbursed $315,000 of which $133,400 was in salaries, between December 1, 1935 and October 31, 1937. Among sundries listed was $5,000 to the Democratic national committee in 1936.

Mr. McWilliams, attorney for the Progressives, attempted to introduce in evidence Chicago Daily News clippings telling that Mr. Bioff was wanted for questioning in connection with the killing six years ago of Tom Malloy, Chicago projectionist leader. Assemblyman Kenneth Dawson refused to admit the testimony but a compromise was effected under which the attorney agreed to authenticate the clippings.

Canada Union Talks Begun

Vincent Armand, chief projection supervisor for the Famous Players Canadian circuit in western Canada, has entered formal negotiations at Winnipeg with officials of the IATSE with a view to settlement of labor differences in that city. Threatened action by the IATSE, culminating in the promise of a general strike in all of the 200 theatres of the circuit in the Dominion, was withheld by the Alliance pending the outcome of the conversations at Winnipeg.

New projectionist union contracts have been signed in the New Haven, Conn., area and in Wilmington, Del.

The National Labor Relations board in Washington postponed to December 1st the hearing, scheduled for this week, on the petition of the Screen Writers' Guild for designation as the bargaining agent with studios for writers. Hearings for the taking of testimony in the case were held some weeks ago in Hollywood and the meeting before the national board in Washington is for the purpose of hearing final argument.

New York Theatres Picketed

Six legitimate theatres on New York's Broadway were picketed this week by members of the Theatrical Managers, Agents and Treasurers Union No. 18032, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, in that organization's campaign to win recognition from the League of New York Theatres, the producer's organization, as the collective bargaining agent for house managers, box office men, company managers and press agents. The union has been fighting for some months with the New York Theatrical Press Representatives, members of which are now employed by the majority of producers.

ASCAP Elects 22 to Music Writing Lists

Twenty-two composers and authors were elected to membership in various classifications in the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers at the last meeting of the board of directors. L. Wolfe Gilbert Music Publishing Company was added to the ASCAP roster.

Membership in the Society is open to "any composer and/or author of musical works, citizen of the U. S. A., who regularly practices the profession of writing music and/or the text or lyrics of musical works and who shall have had not less than five works of their composition or writing regularly published." Applications are acted upon by a committee of writer members in the case of composers and authors, and a publishers' committee in the case of publishers desiring membership.

The new members are Pinky Tomlin, Emery Deutsch, Frank R. Adams, Buddy Bernier, Mark Andrews, B. D. Ackley, Erno Balogh, Arcady Dubensky, Henry Fillmore, Arthur H. Gibbs, Marvin Lee, Gladys Rich, Rosario Bourdon, Larry Clinton, Olive Dungan, Al Frazzini, William Gaston, Clarence Loomis, N. Gifford Page, Gertrude Ross, J. H. Spencer, Joseph M. White.

U. S. August Exports Totaled $408,449

United States exports of positive motion picture film amounted to 18,349,180 linear feet yielding $408,449, during August, according to a report released this week by the Department of Commerce in Washington. Foreign exports were listed at 17,356,947 and $383,119 while shipments to Hawaii and Puerto Rico amounted to 992,233 linear feet and $25,330.

The report showed foreign exports of standard and substandard gauge cameras and projectors totaling $148,182.

HALF OF FILMS SHOWN IN POLAND ARE AMERICAN; RESTRICTIONS FEW

Exhibitors Get Rebate of Half of Admission Tax If One-Tenth of Product Shown Is Domestic, Must Sign Pledge

by ALFRED HARDING

The accompanying article, on motion picture conditions in Poland, particularly as they affect American companies, follows a tour of European countries by Alfred T. Harding.

Mr. Harding, long a writer on various phases of the business of entertainment, made a study of film development in several European capitals while investigating the status of the foreign stage for Actors' Equity Association.

Poland is one country, perhaps the one country, in Central Europe where there is no elaborate and complicated set of restrictions to bedevil the American film man, though the market could not be called free and open. There, as in the United States, the film industry stands on its own feet, with no government subsidy for production and only the help of a rebate on taxes for exhibition. While the possibility of new legislation to narrow the circle of activity is always there, as throughout the Continent, Poland is definitely interested in and friendly toward the American industry and its productions.

Poland, it is true, is spending millions of zloty to support the legitimate theatre and radio, and its officials and press, in common with those of other nations, acknowledge the efficacy of motion pictures as an instrument for public enlightenment (which is a much politer phrase than propaganda). But there isn't any government subsidy for motion pictures. The best explanation I could get of that phenomenon was a shrug.

In consequence, the Polish motion picture industry has stronger competition than that of other Continental countries. Yet domestic films shown have stood above the number imported from France, England or Russia.

Last summer the Central Organization of the Film Industry of Poland attempted to obtain government approval for a special tax on all films censored, domestic and foreign alike, to create a fund for the promotion of production of Polish pictures.

New Tax Is Averted

The tax proposed was a zloty a meter for feature films (the zloty at that time was worth just under 20 cents); three-quarters of a zloty a meter for socalled medium length films, and a half a zloty for shorts. The passage of this legislation would have discouraged importation somewhat, because it would have increased its expense considerably, and those films which did enter would have helped create a jackpot for Polish producers.

The government made as a condition of its acceptance unanimous approval of the measure by the distributors and exhibitors, as well as by the producers on whose behalf it had been introduced. The distributors, led chiefly by the American companies, not only refused that assent but persuaded a considerable number of the exhibitors to go along with them. The bill was shelved. The producers again are negotiating with the government.

The Quota Restrictions

Besides the tax for the filing of import permits, there is, however, the quota system which went into effect last spring. The whole world was given a quota of 5,800 kilos, and various companies were assigned percentages of that amount corresponding to their average imports over the preceding three years. A strict enforcement of such a quota would have served to exclude certain companies which, like RKO, were not exporting many pictures during that time. But inasmuch as some of the larger companies did not require their whole quota, anyway, the newer companies in the field have been assigned temporary quotas which take reasonable care of their requirements, and there is no apparent unfair discrimination in the application of these regulations.

Final government figures show that of the 257 features licensed for exhibition during 1935 in Poland, 145 were American, or more than those of all other countries, including Poland, put together. The percentage of short subjects was nearer 65 per cent, with 283 American out of a total of 438. For the first half of 1936 the advantage swung even farther to America—two-thirds of the 106 feature films, and about the same proportion of short subjects.

The next highest competitor, in 1935, was Austria, with 28; Germany, with 25; Poland, with 15; France and England tied at 12, following in that order. Imports from the remaining countries were almost negligible. Russia accounted for six, Czechoslovakia for four, Switzerland three and Denmark, Italy, Hungary and Palestine one each. Three were listed as mixed in origin, originating in one country and dubbed in another.

In the figures for the first half of 1936 some of those countries were not represented at all. There were none from Russia, Czechoslovakia, Switzerland, Italy, or Palestine, and no mixed films. Otherwise the order remained the same and except for slight losses which accounted for the increased figures for the United States, not much change appeared in the percentages.

Where, in other Central European countries, double bills have been practically eliminated either by government order or by agreements among the exhibitors themselves, there are no such orders or understandings in Poland. In some of the first-run houses of three of the larger cities, Warsaw the capital, Katowice in the angle where Poland, Czechoslovakia and Germany meet, and in Krakow, ancient capital, single bills prevail as a matter of policy. In other firstrun houses in the same cities, in most of the neighborhood theatres and in the country districts almost everywhere, double bills are common.

4 to 60 Cents Admission

Polish patrons get a lot for their money. In the neighborhood houses and outside the big cities the admission prices range from twenty groszchen to two zloty. A grosz is one one-hundredth of a zloty, and a zloty represents 20 cents, or thereabouts, so the tickets cost between four and 40 cents. In the firstrun houses in Warsaw, and in the better houses of some of the larger cities, the prices range from four to 60 cents.

Here, as elsewhere in Central Europe, the houses are all zoned. The seats nearest the screen are cheapest and the prices rise with each few rows until the most expensive seats (except for the loges), are between half and two-thirds of the way back.

The government does help the Polish film men in taxes. New theatres are exempt from taxation for five years from the date of erection. Theatres paying the highest taxes are those in Warsaw, which are required to pay up to 37½ per cent of the price of each admission in taxes. By comparison, the exhibitors in towns of 10,000 population, or under, get off lightly—their maximum is not more than four per cent.

Exemption for Polish Films

However, universally, if the exhibitor will sign a pledge to allot not less than 10 per cent of his footage to Polish pictures, or pictures stamped "Polish theme" by the censors, and not counting newsreels, he is exempted from one-half the established tax on his non-Polish pictures; while on pictures made in Poland, or stamped "Polish theme," his taxes are still lower. In Warsaw that tax is five per cent of the admission, and it drops to three per cent in all other places.

The Poles have an unusual opportunity to choose their picture plays and players from the best of the whole wide world, and they take advantage of their opportunity. The list of Poland's film favorites which was submitted to me by the Warsaw representative of an American company is the most cosmopolitan I found in Central Europe.

Shirley Temple Leads

For the first and only time Greta Garbo did not head that list. Up to the first of the year, it is true, she still occupied that position, but in Poland as elsewhere, it seems, youth will be served, and the present leader of the popularity parade is Shirley Temple.

Behind Miss Temple, without any particular distinction as to order except that Miss Garbo is runner-up, come Marlene Dietrich (German), Joan Crawford, Elisabeth Bergner (German), Franciszka Gaal (Hungarian), Marta Eggerth (Austrian), Lillian Harvey (she was originally British, but her reputation as an actress was made in Germany), Gary Cooper, Clark Gable, Jan Kiepura (Poland's own), Wallace Beery, William Powell, Robert Taylor, Charlie Chaplin (who ran one-two with Garbo everywhere else), Irene Dunne, Laurel and Hardy, and Claudette Colbert.

The Polish also recognize the fact that there are other players whose presence in a picture is distinctly an asset for attendance. Among these are Lionel Barrymore, Boris Karloff (not as popular as he was, but still having a following), Robert Montgomery, Loretta Young, Janet Gaynor and Jeanette MacDonald.

Best Received Pictures

Among the successful features were "The Merry Widow" (which had Maurice Chevalier, a general European favorite, in addition to Jeanette MacDonald; "Be Mine Tonight," with Jan Kiepura; "Anna Karenina," with Miss Garbo; "Escape Me Never," Elisabeth Bergner, and "Show Boat" and "Only Yesterday," with Irene Dunne.

However, some of the pictures which did best at the box office were headed by players not on either list, including: "The King of Jazz," with Paul Whiteman; "The Vagabond," Dennis King, and "Mary of Scotland (known there as "Mary Stuart"), Katharine Hepburn.

I was informed that pictures dealing with topical subjects are seldom financial successes.

"In a country like this, where children occupy a definite and usually subordinate position in the family, pictures such as those in which Jane Withers appears would not seem funny, but horrible," I was told. "So, too, Jimmy Savo, the Marx Brothers and Mae West (in the one picture in which she has been seen), were simply incredible, perhaps not even intelligible." Yet "I Am a Fugitive from a Slave Gang" was well received.

History Ignored

Occasionally an audience will accept an alien historical theme without suspecting its historical significance. So "Sutter's Gold" was accepted cheerfully as another western melodrama and the authenticity of General Sutter or the accuracy of his portrayal never entered into the matter.

There are certain types of pictures which the censors will not tolerate. They don't approve of and do not intend to have gangsters. They would resent as well as be appalled by an outbreak of mysterious murders. So gangster films and mystery pictures (particularly those which depict murder, wholesale and retail) are out.

The very biggest "Don't," though, is the product of Poland's geography. To the east lies Russia, for a century and a quarter possessor of the greater part of Poland and by no means reconciled to the eventual loss of that territory, today. The Soviet statesmen are as well acquainted with the propaganda potentialities of films as those of the next country, and few films come out of Russia without having had to pass an examination in ideology as well as entertainment value. When the censorship requirements were overhauled last August, this provision was added. It may not have been printed in bigger type than the rest, but it didn't need to be.

Watchful of Propaganda

"Producers shall neither produce nor distributors import," said the clause, "film subjects including class struggle, riots of a revolutionary tendency, misery as a means of agitation, or . . . Russian background."

That distrust of her neighbors is, perhaps, one of the principal reasons why American films have done so well in Poland. With some reason the Poles are inclined to believe that their immediate neighbors are trying to sell certain ideas, perhaps inimical to the safety of Poland as a nation, to their own nationals who happen to be living on the Polish side of the borders; and that, neighbor or not, similar ideas may be found in the films of almost every European nation. The nations against which the Poles do not hold such feelings do not happen to make films of the technical excellence of American pictures. Since our pictures happen to be both best technically and, to this point at any rate, free of ideas considered subversive by the Poles, more American films are exhibited there than of all other countries combined.

With the number of Polish motion picture theatres well in excess of 700, and the population of the country approximately 34,000,000, the Polish film market is attractive to American companies.

National Theatres Agency, Inc., last week changed its name to National Theatres Amusement Company, Inc., because of the wrong impression created in the trade by the use of the word agency. The company is the theatre subsidiary for Twentieth Century-Fox. Sidney R. Kent is president and Spyros Skouras is the operating executive.

McNinch Changes FCC Procedure

Frank R. McNinch, new chairman of the Federal Communications Commission, last week in Washington changed the procedure of the Commission in its handling of broadcasting, telephone and telegraph matters. Originally the Commission was divided into separate sections with three members of the Commission comprising each section and all matters pertaining to that division could be handled by a quorum of two. The chairman of the Commission comprised the third member of each division, but, Mr. McNinch pointed out, could not possibly actively participate in all matters.

Under the new setup, Chairman McNinch said, the full Commission, or a quorum thereof, will act on every matter.

Wilcox To Produce Three a Year for RKO

Under a 10-year contract with RKO, Herbert Wilcox will produce three features a year for world distribution by RKO, he announced before sailing on the Normandie for England Wednesday.

He was accompanied by Anna Neagle, star of "Victoria the Great," who, he said, will appear in two of his pictures annually. Miss Neagle will give a command performance of "Victoria" for the King and Queen. While in Hollywood, Mr. Wilcox arranged for studio space at London Films' plant at Denham, which is near London.

Pathe to Move

Pathe Exchange, Inc., will move into new and completely equipped laboratories at 35 West 45th Street, New York, next Wednesday, O. Henry Briggs, president, said this week. Contract to turn out negatives and first prints on all RKO Pathe News issues has been signed, he said, and the new space will be used for that purpose in addition to other work. The new laboratory, air-conditioned and including a cutting room, will produce 35 mm. materials. The Pathe plant at Bound Brook, N. J., will continue to function, Mr. Briggs said.

Knox Opening N. Y. Office

Gordon Knox, president of Industrafilm, Inc., arrived in New York this week from Hollywood to open an office and to select an eastern representative for the firm, which will produce commercial and non-theatrical pictures.

Roxy Fee Hearings Resume Next Week

Hearings on 33 applications for fees totaling $612,000 for services in connection with the Roxy reorganization plan will be resumed on December 3rd in federal court in New York.

Joseph H. Hartfield, attorney for the Roxy bondholders' protective committee, proponent of the plan, has advised the court that the applications for fees aggregated more than twice the amount available for such payments. Mr. Hartfield objects to any allowance whatever being made to counsel for the Roxy stockholders' committee, on the grounds that stockholders were excluded from participation in the plan.

Mr. Hartfield also objects to allowances for real estate experts retained by the committee, and for bondholders' committees other than the one represented by himself, unless such committees could prove they had contributed to the plan.

Counsel for the stockholders' committee contend that their services had been conciliatory among creditor groups and that their statistical services were the only ones acceptable to the special master.

Special applications have been made by George W. Garson and Romer-Kenny Company, real estate brokers, for $58,692, for services rendered in consummation of deals essential to the reorganization, and by Carl Erikson, who claimed a broker's fee of $50,000 on the grounds that he had been instrumental, through George Reade, in interesting Twentieth Century-Fox in the reorganization.

Otto Koegle, attorney for Twentieth Century-Fox, reported to the court that the company's voluntary payments to stockholders of the old Roxy aggregated $20,000.

FOX "IN SYMPATHY" WITH EXHIBITORS' NEW MOVE FOR UNIFIED "REFORMS"

Clark Says Few Exhibitors Really Are Trying to Eliminate Double Bills, Endorses Occasional Broadcasts

The movement for a joint effort by Allied States Association, the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America and New York's Independent Theatre Owners Association, for the purpose of prevailing upon large distributors to adopt socalled "trade practice reforms," this week found one of the largest of the corporations, Twentieth Century-Fox, "entirely in sympathy with the efforts of exhibitors to eliminate some of the matters that have been the cause of disputes between exhibitors and distributors," and perfectly "willing to cooperate as far as we possibly can."

The sentiments of Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation were expressed by John D. Clark, vice-president and general sales manager, on his return to his desk in the New York home office from a personal inspection of the motion picture business in the field, and a visit to the Fox exchanges in the 30-odd territories, staying four weeks, on an annual trip.

Mr. Clark's statement was the first made in months on the distributors' attitude toward a trade practice program, and while further explanation on attitudes toward specific changes, asked by exhibitors, does not differ greatly from that previously recorded, it does indicate that a basis still exists for arriving at some sort of an understanding between the exhibitor and the distributor.

Mr. Clark, answering a series of questions presented on his observations on his nationwide inspection, reported:

1. Few exhibitors are making any real effort to get away from double bills; but exhibitors operating on single-feature policies are trying to continue on that basis.

2. Chance games are proving effective.

3. Admissions should be increased; there is a definite trend, but the general business recession probably will retard it.

4. Despite their vociferous protestations, exhibitors are not yet prepared to express a real opinion on the effect on box offices, if any, of radio's new "union" with Hollywood (MGM's Maxwell House program, Warners' Lucky Strike show).

5. Sporadic "film broadcasts" intended for a specific picture are beneficial to box offices.

6. General business is experiencing a slump of from 15 to 20 per cent, not generally felt yet in theatres.

Mr. Clark, in entire charge of Fox Film sales at 42, having taken the post five years ago, presumably expresses the opinions of other of the large distributors on the questions of trade practice "reform." Sidney R. Kent, Fox president, with whom Mr. Clark has been associated since both were in Paramount's sales organization, has been considered probably the industry's biggest champion of improvements in distributor-exhibitor relations. Only the refusal of a minority of the companies prevented adoption of the MPTOA's "ten point" program, two years ago, a program for which the MPTOA continues to campaign, and may be aided, shortly, through the "united front" of Allied, MPTOA and ITOA.

"While we do not know what the eventual disposition will be of the current movement on the part of exhibitors to present a united front for the adoption of socalled 'trade practice reform,' we are in favor of a ten per cent cancellation clause with the exhibitor's purchase of all (of a single company's) feature product," Mr. Clark said. "We are in favor of establishment of local concilation boards" for adjudicating differences between theatre owner and exchange to avoid lengthy and costly court suits.

MEXICO CENSORS PRE-PRODUCTION

A pre-production censorship of motion pictures has gone into effect in Mexico, with the Autonomous Department of Publicity and Propaganda passing upon all stories on Mexican studio schedules.

The censorship is designed to prevent production of stories running counter to the government's political and social programs.

Opposes Uniform Clearance

The persistent refusal of the large distributors even to consider "uniform" clearance was reiterated by Mr. Clark. "Our experience has been that there can be no such thing," he asserted.

"We are against over-buying, but this matter is surely in the hands of the exhibitors rather than the distributors," he continued. "The exhibitor is in possession of the facts regarding his buying, whereas our knowledge as a distributor is necessarily limited, and we can hardly request an exhibitor to advise us whose and what pictures he has purchased.

"Double billing is another matter that is entirely in the hands of exhibitors, and if it is an 'evil' it will eventually correct itself or the exhibitor will correct it."

"However," Mr. Clark added, "it is our experience that very few exhibitors are really making an effort to get away from the double bill. On the other hand, wherever single bills are still in effect, most exhibitors are making every effort to continue on a single bill policy."

Competition Up to Exhibitor

Returning to the specific subjects which organized exhibition would treat in any trade practice "reformation," Mr. Clark placed the solution of "unfair competition" on them, asserting that it is "another matter between exhibitors and one to be worked out by exhibitors themselves."

"We are in thorough accord that unfair nontheatrical competition with the motion picture theatre should be eliminated," he said, and, further, that Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation is "in favor of any kind of rental contract that will be clear, not ambiguous and as short as such agreements will permit."

Regarding score charges: "The practice of collecting score charges has been for a number of years a matter of individual policy and will continue to be so as far as this company is concerned."

Mr. Clark said flatly that his company "will not pledge ourselves not to demand preferred playing time on percentage pictures, but we will base our demands for preferred playing time on the quality of our product."

On Sales of Shorts

The Fox attitude on the exhibitors' allegation that distributors "force" the sale of short subjects with feature product was explained this way by Mr. Clark:

"We feel that if our feature product is desired by an exhibitor, we are justified in insisting upon the same percentage of his short subject playing time as we receive of his feature playing time." But, he added, "It has never been our practice to force shorts with features," on an arbitrary insistence in order to dispose of all of the company's short subjects. He added that it is a matter of practical distribution to sell short subjects at the same time as feature negotiations, but "under separate agreements."

Chance games are effective, he said, "particularly when a considerable sum of money is offered."

"Certain of the older chance games have some influence, but the new types of games seem to offer at least a temporary increase in business. In a number of situations, where the chance games have been eliminated, there has been a slump in business—however, not lasting."

Sees Higher Admission Charges

Mr. Clark's trip brought this observation: "In certain situations, a very definite trend toward an increase in admission prices is noticeable. But, due to the fact that there is a general slump in business around the country, we question very much if prices will be increased immediately due to this condition." Fox, like all other distributors, feels that "admission prices in many situations should be increased."

"While the effect is not generally felt yet in theatres," Mr. Clark said, "there is apparently a slump of 15 to 20 per cent in many situations."

Mr. Clark made pertinent references to the widely discussed and argued subject of broadcasting by Hollywood stars and talent, in the comparatively new "union" of radio and films, as exemplified by the contractual agreements between General Foods-Maxwell House Coffee and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, and by American Tobacco-Lucky Strike and Warner Brothers, whereby stars of the studios are delivered by the wholesale to the radio programs of the national radio advertiser in each case.

"I question if exhibitors are fully prepared yet to give any comment regarding the wholesale broadcasting of stars, as in the cases of the two new radio shows mentioned.

Calls Broadcasts Beneficial

"Personally, we feel that a good broadcast—not necessarily sponsored by the motion picture producer, and not used too often or with any regularity—is beneficial to the box office, and should be done with a view to assisting one or more specific pictures. However, a number of leaders of some exhibitor organizations seem to anticipate an effect on the box office that will be harmful and have registered their displeasure at regularly planned broadcasts by studios.

"All pictures do not lend themselves to a good broadcast, and the same care should be used in the broadcast program that is used in the making of a good picture or that is used in the making of a good trailer for a picture.

"There should be sufficient of the picture broadcast—provided it lends itself to a broadcast—to stimulate the interest of the prospective patron, and no more; possibly a few scenes and, by all means, the music broadcast in advance of the first-run engagements. If the music is not good, or if the picture does not lend itself to broadcasting, it had better be left off the air."

Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation this week is concluding its fifth annual "John D. Clark Anniversary Week."

Participating in the drive are 1,792 employees in 37 exchanges in the United States and Canada. The company's committee consists of William Sussman, William J. Kupper and William C. Gehrig, division managers; James P. O'Loghlin, Canadian district manager; district managers Herman Wobber, Edgar Moss, M. A. Levy, Tom R. Bailey, Harry G. Balance, Ward E. Scott, H. H. Buxbaum, George A. Roberts, and Roger Ferri, editor of the New Dynamo.

Mr. Clark joined Twentieth Century-Fox shortly after Sidney R. Kent became president in 1932, and for a few months served as Mr. Kent's assistant. On November 22 of that year he was named general manager of distribution, and since that time he has effected a complete reorganization of the distribution system, installed new district zoning, developed a formula for automatic promotions, and actually promoted 478 employees in his department.

Sales Winners Arrive

T. A. Connor, Manchester, England, branch manager for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, arrived in New York last week. He was accompanied by A. F. Gibson of Glasgow. Both are prize winners in a sales contest conducted by Arthur Loew. The visitors said 75 to 100 new theatres had gone up in England the last year, that there were 5,200 theatres in the United Kingdom, and 40 per cent of the houses had been remodeled in the last two years.

Case, Cook In New Posts

Percy H. Case, formerly with Gaevert, Eastman and Dufay Color, has joined Universal Camera Corporation. Harold W. Cook, formerly advertising director of Delineator, has been appointed national sales counselor of Ross Federal Research Corporation.

Grey Series Continuing

Romer Gray, son of Zane Grey, sailed for Australia last Thursday to continue production of a series of six one-reel fishing short subjects, of which two have been completed. Director Edwin G. Bowen, cameraman Harry Anderson and Gus Bagnard sailed with Mr. Grey.

Monarch, ERPI Distributor

The Monarch Theatre Supply Company, Memphis, Tenn., has been appointed a distributor for Mirrophonic sound equipment of Electrical Research Products, Inc.

---

Reginald A. Pearce has joined Signor and Byrne, Inc., producers and distributors of advertising films, as secretary, in charge of promtion.

Educational Board, Officers Reelected

E. W. Hammons, president, and all officers of Educational Pictures, Inc., were reelected Monday at a meeting of the board of directors in New York. Other officers are Bruno Weyers, vice-president; T. R. Williams, treasurer, and Norman C. Nicholson, secretary.

World Release for Four Asher Films

Four of the pictures to be made in England will be released internationally, Irving Asher, in charge of production for Warner Brothers in England, said Monday on his arrival from England. He was accompanied by his wife, Laura La Plante.

Mr. Asher left for Hollywood Wednesday, accompanied by Bruce Lister, James Stephenson and Chili Buchier. All three English players have been under contract and appear in Warner Brothers English films regularly. While their trip to the coast was described "as a holiday" by Mr. Asher, they will make screen tests for Jack L. Warner and Hal Wallis, production executives.

Mr. Asher said that the new production program, while tentatively set at 16 in England, was not definitely decided and that was one of the reasons for his trip. Another reason will be the arranging of schedules so that the coast talent can be made available for British pictures. Lloyd Bacon will direct one in England and Leslie Howard may make one at Teddington provided the story is right, Mr. Asher said. He plans to return to England in five weeks.

Trailers Advertising Ball

Forty theatres in Greater Kansas City and in nearby cities and towns are using trailers this week to advertise the seventh annual Variety Club motion picture ball. Jimmie Fitzgerald of Missouri Film Ad Service is contributing the trailers for use by theatres in the city to promote the affair. Charles Gregory of National Screen Service is preparing those for use in 10 out-of-town houses.

Plan News Letters

The Finer Films Federation of New Jersey will inaugurate publication, in December, of motion picture criticism in the form of news-letters to every high school in the state. Through the photoplay appreciation classes now instituted in 70 high schools, the federation expects to reach more than 50,000 students.

Warners Sign Cartoonists

Nine cartoonists were signed last week by Warner Brothers to draw advertising for the trade paper campaign planned by the company for "The Great Garrick." They are Syd Hoff, Otto Soglow, Rhea Irvin, Herb Roese, George Price, Richard Decker, Abner Dean, Rodney de Sarro and Gene Carr.

The current Sino-Japanese war will be the background in "Chinese Hooey," Joe E. Brown's first starring vehicle for release by Columbia.

ERPI Tries Out Sound Method

Engineers of Electrical Research Products, Inc., held another demonstration last Friday of third dimensional or "stereophonic" sound, at the General Service Studio in Astoria, Long Island. The first demonstration was a feature of the fall convention of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers in New York.

The new sound development seeks to localize the sound on the screen so that it seems to be coming actually from the point of origin and not from the entire screen, and to obtain a "cleaner" tone.

Still in the experimental stage, pointed out at the demonstration last Friday were improvements upon current sound methods. A symphony orchestra, a ping pong game, a piano interlude and a skit which takes place for the most part on a darkened screen, were the subjects employed. Of them "stereophonic" sound was most evident in the music of the orchestra.

C. R. Sawyer, ERPI engineer and a developer of the sound method, was in charge of the demonstration. The method is being subjected to test and observation in Hollywood.

Advance Pictures Elects Jack Curry

Advance Pictures at their new offices in the International Film Studio, Hollywood, last week, elected Jack Curry, president; Steven Wilkinson, vice-president, and Ann Ross, secretary-treasurer. Mitchell Leichter will be in charge of production and distribution.

Advance has scheduled 12 feature and eight short subjects, for major release, for the 1937-38 season.

Republic Conducts Schnitzer Drive

Republic's New York film exchange started an Eddie Schnitzer "sales and playdate" drive on November 15th and will continue it through January 1st. Mr. Schnitzer is eastern sales supervisor for Republic Pictures.

Film Art Leases Studio

Film Art Studios, Inc., New York, last week leased for five years a studio in the Bronx. The first of a series of Jewish pictures, "The Cantor's Son," featuring Moisha Oischa and Florence Weiss, was completed at the studio recently by Eron Productions. John T. Doran, general manager of the studio, returned to his desk last week after an illness.

Britton China RKO Head

Leon Britton last week was named general manager for RKO Radio in China. Mr. Britton will continue to supervise sales in Japan and the Philippine Islands. He sails from San Francisco for Shanghai next Monday.

Mintz Acquires "Uncle Moses"

Robert Mintz, president of Stage and Screen Productions, Inc., last week acquired the American and foreign rights to "Uncle Moses," all-talking Yiddish film.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

Apparently unsuccessful in their oft-repeated campaigns to break down the resistance of American men to the use of perfumes—attacks which never failed to mention that the well-dressed males of the Latin countries fearlessly douse perfumes on their hankies, the perfume makers now turn attention to the perfuming of conditioned air in theatres and shops. Which reminds of the old nickelodeon days when a shirtwaisted usher went up and down the aisles between shows shooting a quarter-gallon of "Passion's Eve" from a pop-gun.

They may, however, get further in theatres than in their flank attacks on the American man, who would rather be accused of forgery than to have it said of him that he uses perfume. The manufacturers went so far as to devise perfumes with all kinds of musculine overtones—the scent of leather, of Scotch, of mint, and of new-mown hay. They put these in severely masculine bottles and packages and tried, in their advertising, to associate them with the strong, silent man. One advertiser even insisted his product "smells not of pansy but of fern."

RURAL RECEIPTS UP WITH ILLINOIS CROP

Chicago Independents Blame the Decline in the City to B & K Double Feature Policy

by WILLIAM F. CROUCH
in Chicago

With a bumper corn crop almost harvested and government loans on the crop assured, the midwestern farmer is now better off than for many years and business in the rural communities is on the upswing.

In checking reports from exhibitors in myriad small towns throughout Illinois and Iowa one learns that theatre grosses steadily are improving. The approach of winter is bringing more leisure to the farmer, and with plenty of good highways, kept passable at all times, it is easy for the farmer to get to town to see the latest pictures, now that he has the money to buy tickets for himself and his family.

This upswing in the country territory is not paralleled in the cities, however. In Chicago, for the last few weeks there has been a definite decline in grosses and many Chicago exhibitors report that business is off thirty to fifty per cent from last year.

Independent exhibitors and circuit men, too, agree that the double feature policy is the main reason for the poor business here. This policy, adopted here last year by Balaban & Katz circuit and later, reluctantly, by the other theatres, has been a point of constant conflict. Chicago had been without duals for five years and these years were better in a business way than the previous period when duals existed. Public opinion, aided and abetted by newspapers and women's clubs, brought elimination of double featuring in 1932.

There is underway a movement to start a campaign in the newspapers. The Chicago Tribune, Chicago American and other local newspapers recently have published editorial matter denouncing double features, and more aggressive attacks may be forthcoming within a short time. Current opinion is that the large amount of advertising bought by B & K is the reason the newspapers have held back as much as they have.

Sam Goldwyn, enroute to the coast last week, told the local press that double-features were the "worst menace" of the industry. This statement was given wide attention by the newspapers and commended in the editorial columns.

Allied Theatres of Illinois is planning ways and means of bringing legal action against the B & K circuit on monopoly charges, with the hope that such action eventually will bring about the return to single bills.

One plan submitted to distributors here is the idea of selling all "A" and "B" pictures on a percentage basis, on the theory that such action would bring rentals to such a high figure that it would be impossible to play duals and show any profit. This plan is being advocated in England, where duals are fast gaining a foothold against the wishes of the producers and distributors.

The newest Warner theatre, the Rhodes, which opened last Friday, is operating on a single feature basis. Another Warner theatre, the Beverly, is doing the same and has been, ever since duals started here. Grosses for these theatres are comparable with other theatres in the same class which play double features. Significant, at the opening of the Rhodes last week, was the applause which greeted a trailer which announced the theatre's single feature policy. This reaction was noted at all showings, theatre officials said.

The reduced business in the independent theatres is laid chiefly to the playing of two of the biggest pictures in the big B & K theatres on the same bill each week. This policy "milks" the pictures, the independent exhibitors claim, as the same dual bill combination is not available to them because of clearance schedules.

Some of the double bill programs that played the B & K "A" houses the last few weeks were: "100 Men and a Girl" and "Stella Dallas"; "Lost Horizon" and "That Certain Woman"; "Souls at Sea" and "Thin Ice"; "Life Begins at College" and "High, Wide and Handsome"; and "Vogues" and "Heidi."

Important, too, is the slump in business in Chicago's Loop. The houses in the Loop play single bills only, and four theatres offer stage shows. The United Artists, Apollo, Garrick and Roosevelt have single features, and with admission prices at 75 cents for the evening shows many patrons are staying away from the Loop to see two of the bigger pictures at the outlying theatres at a lesser price.

Judell To Produce 44

Elaborate plans for independent film production were announced here last week by Ben F. Judell, Chicago exchange owner who plans to produce 44 pictures in Hollywood next year.

For the last 14 months Mr. Judell has been making plans for his production debut. He organized the Progressive Pictures Corporation and has established offices in Hollywood. Mr. Judell is making a tour around the country visiting all key cities to establish exchange contacts to handle his product. Mr. Judell owns five exchanges in the middlewest and plans to open new exchanges in places which are not set up to handle his releases.

"We will make a diversified group of pictures," Mr. Judell said; "they will be on a par with the better class of independent productions. There will be six roadshow specials, eight westerns and 30 dramas. The pictures will be made by unit producers who will make from six to eight pictures a year. Studio space will be leased after the first of the year when production starts. We have several studios in mind, but as space is not scarce we have not made any definite deal as yet.

Nebraska Enjoins Enforcement of Anti-Ascap Law

The American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, temporary winner in its attack on the constitutionality of Nebraska's anti-Ascap legislation, this week awaited decisions on its pleas for injunctions to prevent enforcement of similar laws in Washington and Montana.

In Nebraska, a three-judge court granted Ascap a temporary injunction, restraining state officials from bringing legal action to enforce the legislation that would virtually prohibit the music society's operation in the state. In granting the injunction, the court held that "there is grave doubt of the constitutionality of the act (legislation) and plaintiffs have shown that it would inflict serious injury."

The injunction also relieves Ascap of the necessity of filing copies of its copyrighted works with the secretary of state and prevents state officials from interfering with existing Ascap contracts in the state.

To prevent anyone from being wrongfully harmed by the injunction, the court demanded Ascap post $5,000 bond.

Shortly after the decision was announced the state attorney general moved in Federal statutory court for cancellation of the injunction. The motion listed objections and exceptions to the Ascap injunction plea and denied that the legislation would cut off the rights of copyright owners or that music writers would not have due protection of the law.

The act in question was passed unanimously by the state legislature in May, 1937, signed by Governor Cochran and put into effect immediately. It provides for a $5,000 fine for each individual violation of the law.

The motions for injunctions in Montana and Washington already have been filed and heard by the courts and decisions are expected within the near future.

Anti-Ascap legislation was adopted in Georgia but it was invalidated in July, 1936, when the society brought an action to test the constitutionality of the measure. The negation of the law was held largely responsible for the failure of Mississippi, Louisiana and Arkansas to enforce their anti-Ascap enactments.

IN THE CUTTING ROOM

Happy Landing

(20th Century-Fox)

Romance

Sonja Henie is so new and the popularity of her two other pictures "One In a Million" and "Thin Ice" so well recognized that the mere mention of the fact that she is being featured seems to be about all the showmanship effort required. The class and quality of production support in cast assignments, backgrounds, music and specialty features also are established as the best there is.

For feature name value there will be Don Ameche and Jean Hersholt, both of whom were with Miss Henie in "One In a Million"; Cesar Romero, who took full advantage of the part provided him in "Wee Willie Winkie"; Wally Vernon and Ethel Merman, lately of the New York musical stage but previously seen in Bing Crosby and Eddie Cantor films. Incidental instrumental music will be provided by the Raymond Scott Quintet. Other character specialties will feature the Peters Sisters, Condos Brothers, Ted Harper and Leah Ray. A large group of the studio's younger players will be seen in minor roles. Music and lyrics were composed by Jack Yellen and Sam Pokrass. Direction is in the hands of Roy Del Ruth, maker of "On the Avenue," "Born to Dance," "Thanks a Million" and "Broadway Melody of 1936."

The central theme has a double romance motif, Ameche and Romero vying for Miss Henie's favor. Its locales vary from Norway, to Palm Beach, to New York. Worked through the plot are the song and specialty numbers, and, of course, many demonstrations of Miss Henie's remarkable skating ability. If her earlier efforts were showman's shows, it may be anticipated that this one will provide all with ample opportunity to indulge in striking exploitation campaigns.

Release date: Jan. 28, 1938.

Women Have a Way

(RKO-Radio)

Comedy Romance

Name value and story content will share the exploitation load. No new or superglamorous stars will be presented, but the feature players all are established actors. The story neither strikes any new note nor points a different moral. It seems that it will be amplified by considerable human interest, and it embraces the elements that are standard in a love story, but many things happen before words become pictures, and it is possible that some new twists will be developed.

Modernly timed, the story is placed in New York. To gain possession of two minor children of whom a stranger is guardian, a socialite comes to live in Greenwich Village. Intent upon gaining custody of her deceased sister's children, she falls in love with their protector. Her path to his heart and to control of the children is not easy. She has to indulge in practices contrary to her ethics, and actually become the man's persecutor, before she accomplishes both objectives.

The leading role will be essayed by Miriam Hopkins. The man in the case is Ray Milland, presently in "Ebb Tide." Her father, whom Milland resents bitterly, is played by Henry Stephenson. Incidental roles will be filled by Walter Abel, Alec Craig, Guinn Williams and Richard Lane, with Betty Philson and Marianna Strelby, the young girls.

The original story was prepared by Allan Scott and Charles Norman. Scott also did the screen play. His previous credits include participations in the screenplays of "Shall We Dance," "Quality Street," "Swing Time" and "Follow the Fleet." The director, Leigh Jason, is credited with "New Faces of 1937," "That Girl from Paris" and "The Bride Walks Out."

Release date: Dec. 31, 1937.

FREE PICTURES IN SALOONS PROTESTED

Free film shows for saloons have come to be introduced in London, and exhibitors are getting anxious.

An enterprising "public house" impressario, one M. Barnett of Isleworth, Middlesex, has announced a plan for supplying talking films to saloons in the London area. Recently, at Custom House, thickly populated plebeian dockside center, in the Victoria Dock Tavern, he gave a ninety minute show. "Calling All Cars," a news hodgepodge, and a cartoon, "Haunted Ship," were shown. No charge was made to the customers, 200 of whom were drinking "old and mild," pints of "bitter" and other alcoholic beverages beloved of the working class fraternity.

The films are on non flam stock for which no license to show is required by English law.

Beg, Borrow or Steal

(MGM)

Comedy

Considering this production from the angle of what it may have to offer as exploitation availability, let's first look at the cast. Frank Morgan has been the "life" of many a picture as the star. There are also Florence Rice and John Beal, co-partners of William Powell and Myrna Loy in "Double Wedding." The picture has E. E. Clive, Herman Bing, Erik Rhodes, George Givot and Reginald Denny whose business it is, on the screen, to be funny. It features those prim and amusing matrons, Cora Witherspoon and Janet Beecher. Tom Rutherfurd has a big opportunity, and Harlan Briggs and Vladimir Sokoloff will have plenty to do.

As one may suspect from reading the title, which seems to possess much showmanship potentiality, the motivating story is comedy, the kind of fresh new comedy which MGM anticipates will cause "Beg, Borrow or Steal" to be remembered in the manner that "Libelled Lady," 'After the Thin Man' 'and "Double Wedding" are recalled.

The story is based on a short story by William C. White which appeared in Saturday Evening Post. A trio of writers, Leonard Lee, Harry Ruskin and Marion Parsonnet, collaborated on the screen play. Lee is credited with "Bad Guy" and "Espionage"; Ruskin served Paramount for several years and did Cagney's "Great Guy," Miss Parsonnet did "Between Two Women" and "The Thirteenth Chair." In Europe the director, William Thiele, did "Love Waltz" and "Two Hearts in Waltz Time." Here he has done "Jungle Princess" and "London by Night."

In character, the theme is tongue-in-the-cheek comedy. The locales are Paris and the Riviera. A suave ex-patriate American flim-flammer runs into endless trouble when a daughter he deserted years ago descends upon him with the avowed intention of getting married in the mansion he claims he owns. Things happen fast and furiously as the story rushes to its denouement.

Release date: Dec. 10, 1937.

Every Day's a Holiday

(Paramount)

Comedy and Music

In this forthcoming Mae West feature, the title of which may still be changed, the accent (although definite subtleties may be anticipated) will be on comedy and music. There won't be much melodrama; such of that as may occur will serve only to emphasize the frolicsome motivation.

In idea, it's an early "1900's" picture. It concentrates on a glamorous girl who makes a living by selling such things as the Brooklyn Bridge and Central Park to gullible suckers. When a succession of swindles makes it too hot for her she becomes an "imported French actress, star of an extravagant extravaganza." As she conquers New York in flamboyant fashion, with a wealth of music helping things along, she catches up in her train a millionaire who hasn't spoken to a woman for twenty years, his butler, a penniless revue producer, a crooked politician, police captains, pickpockets and various and sundry habitues of the era. She, herself, becomes involved in the wildest political campaign and mayorality New York ever knew or anyone ever saw.

Of Miss West, who also wrote the show, there is little need for comment, what with the trail she blazed across the screen in many theatres. The principal supports, Edmund Lowe, Charles Butterworth, Walter Catlett, Roger Imhof and Charles Winninger, are generally well known. George Rector, New York's most famous restaurateur of the era with which Miss West's story deals, has an important role.

Although Jo Swerling is credited with having devised the original story, everyone knows just how Miss West transposes and adapts her material. It is quite probable, however, that she permitted director A. Edward Sutherland to handle things in his own way. His "Diamond Jim," similar in a way, the musical, "Champagne Waltz" and the comedies "Poppy" and "International House" attest his ability to handle the present kind of material.

Release date: Jan. 28, 1938.

SHOWMEN'S REVIEWS

This department deals with new product from the point of view of the exhibitor who is to purvey it to his own public

Nothing Sacred

(UA-Selznick)

A Comedy of Manners

Mr. Terry Ramsaye recently observed, in a MOTION PICTURE HERALD editorial on editors, critics and their loose use of staggering statistics, "Increasingly the trade news of all industry is becoming public news." This has been especially true of the trade news about screen use of color, a detail in the technological development of the art so assiduously reported by its most directly interested observers as to have experienced consistent chronicling in even the financial sections of thoroughgoing newspapers. It would seem to follow that the genuinely progressive showman will take it upon himself, then, to inform his thus made color-conscious public that "Nothing Sacred" represents a further step in that development, the first application of full-color to utterly frivolous material in feature length (which implies that an early musical or two were not altogether frivolous, as indeed they were not in strict definition.)

The not at all subtle psychology of this somewhat roundabout exploitation approach would have as its objective the enlistment, in immediate box office behalf, of the unquenchable and practically universal public interest in everything "new" or "first" in motion pictures, an interest often enough a nuisance and only rarely as now, susceptible of translation into extra ticket sales. It is conceivable that homebodies, students, all sorts of earnest folk who wouldn't go far to see Fredric March kick Carole Lombard in the seat of her pants, if any, will turn out in force to weigh the relative merits of pigmentation as against monotone and turn in afterward to write essays on the subject for reading at Wednesday club meetings. In any case, yield from this unaccustomed course would fall under the heading of what advertising men call plusage, and it costs next to nothing to collect it.

Of course color is not the star of "Nothing Sacred." It is the star of certain sections of it, notably a number of what might almost be called demonstration shots of New York from the air, immensely interesting shots combining coloration with the slightly stereoscopic effect always to be gained by moving a camera circumferentially at proper speed about a focal pivot. These drew genuine applause from an experienced preview audience. When these are finished, though, and the action of the story is resumed, the fact of coloration, as the above mentioned essayists will no doubt remark, is forgotten about, or taken for granted, thus seeming to prove the point that all save the chronically cynical essayists will prefer to have proved.

The story is by Ben Hecht out of James H. Street. Since Mr. Hecht is not especially noted for fidelity to originals, including his own, it is probable that his screen play is much more to be seen than Mr. Street's story. Certain it is that Mr. Hecht was being himself when he christened two uncouth circulation sluggers Max and Moe (a slightly heroic adventure for the playwright, incidentally, with him spending so much of his time in New York lately.) He was being himself, too, when he stopped a wrestling match in Madison Square Garden for the multitude to observe 10 seconds of silence for the supposedly expiring heroine. But he was happily handcuffed when the story tempted him, as it must have, to slip back into the bawdy vocabulary of "The Front Page." That he didn't do.

It should have been mentioned several paragraphs back that Carole Lombard and Fredric March are the stars of the picture. It wasn't, because that's been made pretty well known. So has the fact that it's a riproaring newspaper story, with no holds barred. It is less widely known that it pokes grand fun at rock-ribbed Vermont, without using an election gag, and more of it, just a trace less pointed, at New York in the throes of public idol worship. Nor are the names of Charles Winninger, Walter Connolly and a good many other players, well and favorably known to the cash customers, so indelibly identified with the production as the individual exhibitor, according to their respective standings in his community, will want to identify them in his copy.

The story describes the romantic adventures of "Hazel Flagg," small town Vermont girl reported dying of radium poisoning, and "Wally Cook," New York reporter commissioned by his circulation-hungry publisher (not readily recognizable, by the way) to bring her back alive. He does, and the city enshrines her in tearful glorification, the newspaper showing a nice net gain in circulation and, inferentially, advertising lineage. She's in a tough spot when it turns out she isn't going to die, but a suicide fake succeeds in convincing the hungry reader that she did, whereupon she and the reporter sail away disguised in smoked glasses.

Although an unusual offering from the studios of David O. Selznick, noted for turning out a more orthodox and staple type of entertainment in the grand manner, "Nothing Sacred" is as finely accoutered, technically, as his serious works. William A. Wellman's direction is a successful test of his versatility and W. Howard Greene enjoyed himself thoroughly in putting the color camera through trick paces. The Raymond Scott Quintet, just now regarded as about the hottest thing in Hollywood, provided likewise trick musical accompaniment, although this phase of the entertainment is, as the formal screen notice says of possible similarity of personalities or events to real ones, purely incidental.

Previewed at the Alexander theatre, Glendale, Cal. If it pleases the rest of the small town audiences as well as it did this one (and it would seem that the major cities are, by the nature of the story, in the bag) there can be no doubt that the picture will uphold the high standard of box office performance established by a long sequence of Box Office Champions bearing the Selznick signature.—WILLIAM R. ## A Damsel in Distress

Musical Comedy

While trade and Wall Street buzz with conjecture as to the ultimate executive personnel of the RKO-Radio studios in Hollywood, each day's stories denying the last, quite a lot of showmanly judgment is being displayed by the individuals who turn out the pictures. There was "Stage Door," a rousingly affirmative answer to the popular question as to whether Ginger Rogers could get along without Fred Astaire, and now there is "A Damsel in Distress," a like answer to the other half of the question. Dividing a top-ranking team by two and getting a net total of three—if the team, still on hand contractually, be counted—is a trick neat enough to please even so unimpressionable a critic as a referee in reorganization. It is a trick to be noted on marquee and in newspaper copy, properly and profitably.

Of course it ought not to be regarded as remarkable that Miss Rogers and Mr. Astaire get along all right singly. They were getting along pretty well before they began matching dance steps and wisecracks in the first of their extremely successful series. Mr. Astaire's nimble feet had become as famous abroad as on this side and it is to his British following that he especially addresses his performance in this appearance, sagely employing a story by P. G. Wodehouse, whose somewhat whimsically humorous writings enjoy a tremendous American vogue as disseminated in the pages of the Saturday Evening Post and other major periodicals as well as in book form.

No doubt showmen will find it well worth while to make due mention of Mr. Wodehouse in their exploitation, to which they may well add that the screen play is also by Mr. Wodehouse, who was aided in its preparation by Ernest Pagano and S. K. Lauren. It may or may not be necessary, or advisable, to add that the setting of the story is England, since that would be understood by those who prefer it so and is immaterial to the others. While on the British tangent, however, which seems to have become something of an obsession in this report, it may be remarked that there is advertising value also in mention of Ray Noble's presence in the cast, as a noble musician as whimsical as any Mr. Wodehouse ever conceived.

Strictly American, and correctly mentionable long before this in any check-up of box office assets, is the music by George and Ira Gershwin, which includes "Nice Work If You Can Get It," sure to top the hit parade as soon as the public get a chance to hear it as performed in the picture. Strictly American, also, are George Burns and Gracie Allen, who not only provide their customary inspired inanities but also dance with Mr. Astaire, in orthodox cinema technique, some of the most sidesplitting sequences ever caught by a camera. Joan Fontaine, Reginald Gardner, Constance Collier and Montagu Love are others who carry the ball for substantial gains, and an unprogramed feminine trio scores a touchdown with the hit song.

Mr. Wodehouse's hero is an American dance man whose press agent has presented him with a newspaper reputation as a heart breaker. This pops up to complicate his wooing of a titled English girl who lives in a castle with an odd family and a singing butler. It comes out all right.

The picture bears the unmistakable touch of Pandro S. Berman, producer, and the sure directorial stamp of George Stevens. Victor Baravalle directed orchestral arrangements by Russell Bennett, Ray Noble and George Bassman, and Hermes Pan is down as dance director, although an untutored eye insists that nobody but Fred Astaire could have doped out two numbers in which he tops all his previous stepping achievements by wide margin.

Harlem on the Prairie

(Associated Features)

Novelty

There have been other films, "Green Pastures," the most recent, which have presented all-Negro casts. But this is the first outdoor action adventure picture featuring Negroes ever made in Hollywood. As such it is a distinct novelty and one of considerable exploitation value.

Considered as entertainment, it is a well constructed, modernly premised "western." In it are combined the necessary elements of melodrama, romance, comedy, suspense, action and surprise. Well photographed scenic backgrounds are an asset and, in line with the present day trend, solo, chorus and instrumental music add to the entertainment.

The story follows the formula of this type of production. An oldtime medicine show performer, accompanied by his daughter, is returning to the scenes of his young manhood. His objective is to recover gold, hidden by a bandit gang of which he was once a member. Before he can do so he is attacked by a raiding gang. About to die, he reveals the secret of the hiding place to his daughter and a young cowboy.

Then, as the action is keynoted by adventure, but with music, comedy and romance woven in, the production assumes the typical outdoor adventure character, with plenty of riding, shooting and fighting before the gold is recovered and the boy and girl go their romantic way.

Under Jed Buell's intelligent production guidance and Sam Newfield's thoughtful direction, the picture compares favorably with the average similar feature turned out by white casts. While the names featured will be of little significance in the majority of houses, the all-Negro cast nevertheless is the outstanding exploitation asset.

Patrons who enjoy outdoor entertainment may be assured that "Harlem on the Prairie" is deserving of their attention.

Previewed at the Meralta theatre, Culver City. At an afternoon performance, attended by a sprinkling of adults and the customary houseful of youngsters, the reaction was as might be anticipated. There was first a wave of surprise, but when the kids came to understand that the material presented was of the type that called for whooping and hollering, they let themselves go. An unusual attraction for exclusively white patronized houses, the show probably will be enthusiastically supported in theatres supported by the colored race.—Gus McCarthy.

"Thank You, Mr. Moto"

(Twentieth Century-Fox)

Mystery Melodrama

China, as the run-of-the-mill Occidental imagines it, is a pretty strange place. Almost everyone thinks that everything that happens there is very melodramatic. Song, story and moving pictures, to be sure, have all had a part in consolidating the legend. Present day headlines more than accentuate the impression. Consequently, China always has been looked upon as the ideal setting for the most wild and woolly melodramatic screen fiction.

"Thank You, Mr. Moto" is double dyed-in-the-wool melodrama of Oriental serenity, sacrifice and courage versus the dastardliness of Americans who look to be post graduates of the most approved gangster schools. It all has to do with a set of scrolls. "Mr. Moto" has filched one out of Gobi Desert; the other six are in possession of the last of the "Chung" family. The legend is that when pieced together the scroll will reveal the hiding place of Ghengis Khan's buried treasure. Rapacious whites, "Koerger" the most determined, would like to get hold of the scrolls. "Madame Chung" and "Prince Chung" undergo torture and death rather than part with their sacred family possession. But "Mr. Moto" doesn't stand around idly. He has to stand around every once in a while, while "Tom Nelson" and "Eleanor Joyce" have their romantic byplay, but when killing and dirty work (there's plenty of both) is going on, he's in the thick of things. He's too tough a customer for "Koerger" and his mobsters, all of whom are either killed or made harmless, before he comes into possession of all the scrolls, whereupon he burns them, writing finis to the legend and making it possible for "Nelson" and "Eleanor" to continue their romance unmolested.

Having seen others in the Mr. Moto series, it is our opinion that the latest picture is a considerable improvement. There's the full quota of theatrics, but the basic story, written by J. P. Marquand, and the screen play by Willis Cooper and Norman Foster are sound. The manner in which they created characters and situations, blending dialogue with suspenseful action and the way in which Foster directed makes it possible for the cast to contribute good performances. Peter Lorre seems to have a more thorough understanding of the "Mr. Moto" character. Two or three times the work of Pauline Frederick drew applause. Sidney Blackmer, John Carradine, Sig Rumann and William Von Brincken are up to standard, while Thomas Beck and Jayne Regan are acceptable in the romantic roles.

Previewed in the Uptown theatre, Hollywood, the crowd, which has a pretty good idea of what to expect from a Sunday night preview in this theatre, seemed sarcastically skeptical at first, but eventually the story and the capable performances got hold of them and they gave the film respectful attention from that point on.—G. M.

Springtime in the Rockies

(Republic)

Western

The singing cowboy's latest is also one of his best. Judged from the standpoint of diversified entertainment values of the picture, Gene Autry is due to gain more fans. Rating the picture solely on the action sequences, which at one time would have been the one factor in judging westerns, it probably would be accorded a lower place, but the combination of comedy, romance and song makes the picture enjoyable and while it is to be noted that comedy looms largest throughout much of the picture, it ends with action, and when that starts the picture rolls swiftly towards an exciting climax.

Autry sings several songs, a group of cowboys provides melody with stringed instruments, and Smiley Burnette improvises on a contraption of his own imagination as well as playing the harmonica.

Polly Rowles and Autry are the romantic team and Smiley Burnette lives up to his role of comedian.

An eastern girl who inherits a ranch and decides to run it herself against the better judgment of the young foreman, makes her first mistake by buying sheep in country where the ranchers are bitter against sheepherders. Autry helps her by installing her in a rundown ranch he won in a card game. When Autry is framed and sent to jail, she sells the ranch, not knowing the deed refers to the much larger and prosperous ranch she actually owns. Autry escapes in time to remedy the situation.

Quick Money

(RKO-Radio)

Melodrama

"Quick Money" is of the old school formula style. The chief character is the mayor of a small town, who is suspicious of an old boyhood chum who returns with a fanfare of opulence.

His suspicions are borne out, but not before the townsfolk turn against the central character, making him suffer before the denouement.

The only novelty introduced in the story is the turn of events furthered by the actions of a young lad who is an amateur chemist.

The Rat

(Radio-Wilcox)

Paris Underworld Romance

It is clear that the Radio-Wilcox team have been bent on cashing in on the name and personality of Anton (Prince Consort) Wallbrook. Generally applauded for his performance in "Victoria the Great", he is but a shadowy character as this Sir Galahad-cum-Jack Diamond of Montmartre. Garbed in a close fitting black silk shirt, and other sartorial clichés, he has the role of a Parisian thug who steals valuable jewelry and lives in a garret, uses his jack knife to punish those who have broken the code, and invariably comes home via the rooftops and the open window.

Of such is the flavor of this second Wilcox production for Radio release, directed by Jack Raymond, and spiced with the addition of Hollywood-experienced Ruth Chatterton. Made with obvious zeal by its English director, it explores all the old avenues of the Parisian underworld drama. Here are the Bal Musette and the vaguely undesirable Mére Coline, the ruthless police chief, the bibulous but devoted Marguerite, the innocent little virgin, and, need we add, the enchanted but very self controlled lady of leisure. Mix these ingredients together against a fictitious Paris background, a glimpse of Notre Dame and a shot of the Sacré Coeur, a tinkling piano or two and a court scene to conclude—and you have "The Rat."

Wallbrook's role, as this sullen impetuous underworld greyhound, whose knife flashes as swiftly as his tongue—more so, if you are critical of the dialogue—takes him into a romance with a wealthy woman whose jewels he covets but who is ready to soil her name and swear he was in her apartment when a ruthless prosecution insists he was in fact murdering the playboy persecutor of little Odile, orphan child of his erstwhile comrade. Her evidence gets him his freedom, but the Rat does not turn in gratitude to her aching arms but vows to wait till little Odile, for whom he was ready to stand alibi murderer, comes from her year in jail.

Ruth Chatterton's work as Zelia, his wealthy charmer, is polished. René Ray's Odile is a naive thing of burbling virginity and legginess.

Previewed at the Piccadilly theatre, London trade show house, it was received attentively but without demonstration. The dramatic climax—Zelia's admission of adultery to save her beau—was greeted with an embarrassing laugh.—AUBREY FLANAGAN, London.

Uncivilized

(Box Office Attractions)

Adventure Drama

What conceivably might have been originally intended as a serial, so plentiful are the climaxes, "Uncivilized," produced in northern Australia by Expeditionary Films, Limited, emerges as a much too long feature picture.

It is that sort of a picture which lends itself to bizarre marquee billing to entice a certain type audience, but may disappoint even them once they have paid the admission price.

Such characters as a white king ruling a tribe of aboriginals, a renegade Afghan camel driver, a beautiful young authoress, an opium trader, a Malay girl, a black killer and an Inspector of the Australian Mounted Police, sets the stage for the story.

A young authoress seeks material for a story among the aboriginals and their king, a white man. En route, the authoress is kidnaped by the Afghan and brought to the white king for trading purposes. Sinister developments constantly crop up, what with the opium trader wanting the white king's rubies, the Afghan wanting the opium trader's opium and the Malay girl's jealousy of the authoress.

Adventures of Chico

(Woodward Brothers)

Mexico

Much in the nature of a travelogue, while telling an appealing human interest story, "Adventures of Chico" reveals Mexico as just as strange a land as any of earth's far corners into which producers have ventured in search of screen oddities.

Focusing attention on the country's picturesque natural backgrounds, the film, with a narrative lecture serving as the interpretive medium, also tells the story of a native and his young son.

Detailing their efforts to gain a livelihood in the country, during which the boy encounters many adventures, the animals of the mountains, jungles and deserts are used as supporting characters. Expertly photographed, the quality of the film showing that the Woodwards had much difficulty in overcoming many obstacles in making it, they nevertheless have incorporated comedy and suspense in a manner that gives the motivation understandable continuity.

Of the many exciting shots included, the one that most thrilled the preview audience was the picturization of a battle between the boy's pet rooster and a rattlesnake. As a pulse quickener this takes rank with the many tense features seen in other jungle films. An audible sigh of relief swept through the theatre when the rooster finally killed the snake.

Previewed in the Labrea theatre, Hollywood, an audience seldom permitted the opportunity of seeing a preview was keenly interested. Reaction indicated the film should prove an appealing novelty.—G. M.

You're Only Young Once

(MGM)

Domestic Interlude

As the initial offering in what promises to be a series of separately complete but definitely integrated episodes in the life of a pattern middle class family, this production appears to call for special exploitation emphasis upon the names that may be expected to develop box office potency as the domestic affairs of the Hardys take hold of public interest. Lewis Stone, Fay Holden, Cecilia Parker, Mickey Rooney, Sara Haden and Ann Rutherford are those likely to remain constant cast fixtures, although Frank Craven, Eleanor Lynn and Ted Pearson are also important contributors to the introductory production.

It would seem proper and logical, also, to expand the advertising budget a bit to the end that the regular clientele may be accurately informed as to the character of the product. Due to abuse of the descriptive vocabulary correctly applicable to direct, orthodox presentation of the plain American family confronted with every-day problems and subject to normal influences, this is not precisely easy. A quick and possibly pardonable means of identifying the material would be to say that it is in the vein and tenor of radio's "One Man's Family," plus definite beginning, end and point. In any case, that is about what it is.

Lewis Stone plays the central character, one "Judge Hardy," who takes his family to Catalina for vacation. His adolescent son and daughter here encounter their first important romantic experiences. The Judge extricates both from threatening situations and, on returning home, solves satisfactorily a financial problem threatening his own security.

As written by Kay Van Riper, employing characters created by Aurania Rouyarol, and as directed by George B. Seitz, the picture holds to a middle course between comedy and melo-
